PROPOSED Q&As ADDRESSING VIRUS ATTACK ON USMS IT NETWORK

The U.S. Marshals Service network was affected by a virus on Thursday, May 21. Our Information Technology staff quickly identified the virus and initiated preventative measures to resolve the problem. For precautionary purposes, the U.S. Marshals network was isolated from the Department of Justice network to prevent further spread of the virus. At no time was data compromised or at risk.

The U.S. Marshals network is now up and operational and we have installed the recommended patches to correct the problem.

Of approx 6,800 U.S. Marshals Service workstations throughout the districts and headquarters, our IT division minimized the impact of the virus to 140 machines. These machines were removed from the system and are being repaired. All other U.S. Marshals workstations have full internal and external system connections.

What was the name of the virus?

Revealing the name of the virus could pose a potential security risk to the U.S. Marshals.

Where did the virus come from?

The virus was resident on a laptop; the laptop was connected to the network to troubleshoot a problem, once that laptop was reconnected to our network the virus began to very aggressively propagate through the U.S. Marshals network. At this point we do not know where the virus came from.

What caused the vulnerability?

A variety of things caused the vulnerability; the main issue was an inconsistent application of a security patch.

Was this the same virus that affected the FBI? Was there a joint effort in resolving this problem?

We are unaware of the specific issues that FBI faced last week. The U.S. Marshals coordinated all its efforts with the department's Justice Security Operations Center.

How vast was the network infection?

Less than 5 percent of U.S. Marshals systems were affected.

DUSM Vincent Bustamante

RESPONSE TO QUERY STATEMENT

Prepared by USMS OPA, March 26, 2009

The body of Deputy U.S. Marshal Vincent Bustamante was discovered March 25 by authorities in Juarez, Mexico. The U.S. Marshals Service is cooperating with Mexican authorities and the FBI in the investigation into the death of Deputy Bustamante, and it would be premature at this time to address the potential outcome of that investigation. What I can tell you is that the U.S. Marshals Service is saddened by the death of Deputy Bustamante and our thoughts and prayers are with the family.

- On April 1, the USMS seized a multimillion dollar waterfront home in Palm Beach, Fla., and three vessels (the 55' yacht "Bull" in Broward County, Fla.; the 38' "Sitting Bull" in Montauk, N.Y., and a 24' motorboat and trailer), belonging to . The seizures were intended to secure, maintain, and ultimately sell the assets to maximize recovery for victims in connection with criminal forfeiture proceedings against .
- The USMS successfully negotiated with the Governor of American Samoa to house a Strategic National Stockpile 12-hour Push Package on the island. This provides the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention with an opportunity to supply immediate medical countermeasures to the population of the Pacific Rim.
- The USMS kicked off a nation-wide Federal Career Intern Program recruitment drive in March 2009. Information sessions led by Deputy U.S. Marshals have been held in two regions of the country, providing information on the history and missions of the service in addition to application procedures to 1,800 men and women interested in becoming deputies. The recruitment drive will continue through the end of the fiscal year offering opportunities for individuals to be considered for employment in all 94 Marshals districts.
- The USMS completed an exhaustive review of its existing policy documents since Jan. 20, certifying many policies as current and active and taking corrective actions to bring the remaining policies up-to-date.
- Since Jan. 20, 85 percent of USMS employees received No Fear Act Training.

Justice Prisoner and Alien Transportation System

- The USMS's Justice Prisoner and Alien Transportation System (JPATS) initiated the JPATS Management Information System (JMIS), a new, integrated information technology system that will revolutionize the prisoner transportation process, provide internal and customer performance metrics to make decision-making easier and drive better efficiencies throughout JPATS. JPATS is currently in Phase II of this project, with an aggressive start date of October 1, 2009.

- JPATS implemented an Internal Management Control Review program to validate and measure adherence to policy and identify areas of improvement and change. This review is currently being completed with the final report due June 1, 2009.
- The USMS created the JPATS/Bureau of Prisons Working Group to identify better ways to reduce delays at the Federal Transfer Center through collaboration and time measurements, creating a more efficient program schedule.
- The USMS created the JPATS/Immigration and Customs Enforcement Committee to resolve issues related to conflicting policies and procedures.

Southwest Border Districts

- The USMS co-sponsored a major conference of United States Judges in Houston, TX. USMS and personnel from the El Paso Intelligence Center provided security briefings to the judges in the Southwest Border judicial districts regarding violence spillover concerns related to violence in Mexico.
- The USMS has performed a security survey for all court facilities along the Southwest Border, which includes security enhancements and deficiencies, and made recommendations to improve physical and electronic security.
- The USMS is discussing cooperative methodologies with the El Paso Intelligence Center that will assist with facilitating intelligence exchange.
- The USMS is funding rotations of Deputy Marshals to the Southwest Border districts to assist with the severe workload in these districts.

Terrorist Detainee Task Force

- In response to President Obama signing an Executive Order that the detention camps at Guantanamo Naval Base will be closed by January 22, 2010, the USMS created a Terrorist Detainee Task Force (TDTF) in order to effectively prepare for the transfer of detainees to the United States in civilian or military custody. USMS and DoD personnel have been working in partnership to ensure a smooth transition of any detainees charged with a crime in U.S. District Court.
- The USMS coordinated with DoD's Defense Information Systems Agency to install a secure network line to better serve the TDTF.

Threat Management Center

- The USMS dedicated the Threat Management Center (TMC) Conference Room in memory of the mother and husband of Judge Joan Lefkow.
- The USMS trained 100 District Office Security Managers from U.S. Attorney's Offices throughout the United States on protective intelligence and protective investigations.

Plan Colombia

- Since Jan. 20, USMS personnel assigned to the U.S. Embassy in Bogotá worked very closely with the Department of Justice, U.S. Embassy and Colombian officials to conduct training for 100 Colombian Law Enforcement officials assigned to protect judges, witnesses, prosecutors, the Colombian Attorney General and the Minister of Defense. The USMS Basic Protective Operations Training covered both Witness Security and Court Security training.

National Center for Judicial Security

- The National Center for Judicial Security (NCJS) provides support to federal, state, local and international jurisdictions as they seek advice and assistance on matters of judicial security. The NCJS initiates programs and activities directly related to threat assessment, training, information sharing, and technology review to meet the various needs of a national and international constituency regarding their respective court systems and the protection of members of the judiciary and extended court family.
- On March 16th, the Second NCJS Fellowship Program began with representatives from the Prince Georges County Sheriffs' Department and the St. Mary's County Sheriffs' Department. The Fellowship Program provides a professional opportunity to state and local court security managers to train and serve with USMS counterparts in all facets of the USMS program, and the private sector. The Fellows are exposed to all aspects of the USMS judicial security and court security mission and receive briefings and orientations on the operation of the Federal Court system. They travel to sites with ongoing high-threat trials and protective details and are briefed by security professionals from a large corporation. They also receive briefings on security provided at national monuments, historical sites, military installations, and other facilities requiring security.
- Working with the NCJS fellow from St. Mary's County, the USMS designed a training program to meet the requirements of the St. Mary's County Sheriffs' Office that develops an electronic physical security scope of work, demonstrates proper architectural drawing review, and the theory of operation behind electronic security devices.

Prisoner Operations

- The USMS is working with the Department of Justice to test the new Justice Automated Booking Station operating system. In conjunction with this, the USMS is working with the U. S. Customs and Border Protection in a Southwest Border project which will streamline booking procedures between the agencies along the border saving valuable time and resources.
- USMS hosted officials from the National Managed Care Contractor who presented strategies regarding case tracking software for prisoner medical conditions and the associated budget to implement. The NMCC establishes a nationwide health care delivery system for USMS prisoners and ensures that the USMS is in compliance with applicable federal procurement laws and regulations when it acquires medical services. The NMCC also reduces district workload by transferring responsibility for approving or denying medical care, processing medical claims and paying medical bills from the districts to the contractor.
- The USMS current average daily prisoner population is over 58,000, and in the 100 days the prisoner population growth has remained at 6.9 percent. The USMS does not own or operate any detention facilities and relies on local, state and Federal facilities to house pretrial detainees. In the last 100 days, the USMS has entered into 50 Intergovernmental Agreements with local jails around the nation for detention services.
- USMS hosted a Conditions of Confinement training program at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center continuing the USMS leadership role in detention standards.
- USMS conducted a Southwest Border USMS District Chiefs meeting along with the Office of the Detention Trustee to discuss detention and transportation requirements.

TALKING POINTS FOR PROJECT SENTINEL/OPERATION GUARDIAN

For this new initiative, dubbed Project Sentinel / Operation Guardian, the U.S. Marshals Service is targeting the five most dangerous noncompliant sex offenders in each Marshals Service district. These sex offenders have been identified through our close working relationship with state and local law enforcement partners and each case is reviewed by a Marshals Service behavioral analyst/Chief Psychologist. Those state and local law enforcement partners tell us which offenders to target, emphasizing the particular attributes of the offender we'll be taking off the street through this long-term investigative project. We are looking to prosecute these cases federally where possible.

The number of sex offenders running from the law prior to a conviction is difficult to determine, but Marshals Service Sex Offender Investigators tracked down roughly 20,000 fugitive sex offenders in the last year. These fugitives were wanted for sexual assaults, sex offender registration violations, and other sex crimes.

In the United States there are an estimated 750,000 convicted sex offenders who should be registered and perhaps as many as 125,000 who have failed to register. Sex offenders can be difficult to track down and often appear harmless. They're very good at hiding in plain sight until someone trusts them with their children and they then victimize someone.

The Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006, signed into law July 27, 2006, made it a federal crime for sex offenders who knowingly fail to comply with their sex offender registration requirements.

The U.S. Marshals Service is the lead federal law enforcement agency charged with investigating violations of the Adam Walsh Act and related offenses and assisting jurisdictions in locating and apprehending sex offenders who fail to register. In the fight against child exploitation, the U.S. Marshals Service established the following initiatives:

- The Sex Offender Apprehension Program.
- National sex offender special apprehension initiatives which focus U.S. Marshals Service resources on noncompliant and fugitive sex offenders.
- A case management office at the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children (NCMEC) to oversee U.S. Marshals Service investigations involving abducted children.
- Incident Management Teams to assist with identifying and locating sex offenders during a major crises/natural disaster.
- A working relationship with Interpol to issue "Green Notices" to track the movement of sex offenders between member nations.
- A coalition between nations that maintain organized sex offender registries.
- Nationwide media campaigns encouraging compliance with sex offender registration laws.
- The establishment of the National Sex Offender Targeting Center (NSOTC), an interagency intelligence and operations center supporting the identification, investigation, location, apprehension, and prosecution of noncompliant, unregistered fugitive sex offender.
- The creation of the U.S. Marshals Service Behavioral Analysis Unit within the NSOTC to assist with the prioritization and targeting of noncompliant and fugitive sex offenders.

The U.S. Marshals Service has designated experienced criminal investigators who serve as sex offender investigations coordinators (SOICs) within all U.S. Marshals Service districts and Regional Fugitive Task Forces to spearhead implementation of the legislation and to establish and maintain effective contacts with sex offender registration authorities, corrections officials, and other law enforcement agencies throughout the country. Through these interagency networks, the U.S. Marshals Service and its partners are able to effectively identify, investigate, locate, and apprehend sex offenders who violate their registration requirements.

Since the inception of its sex offender apprehension program, U.S. Marshals have arrested more than 33,500 individuals. Since the inception of the Adam Walsh Act, investigators have opened more than

TALKING POINTS FOR PROJECT SENTINEL/OPERATION GUARDIAN

6,300 investigations on convicted sex offenders for violations of the Act. Approximately 1,200 warrants have been issued for violations of the act, and of those, more than 1,000 arrests have been made. More than half of the arrests made are prosecuted at the state or federal level. .

The U.S. Marshals Service coordinates with NCMEC to generate, analyze, and disseminate leads concerning noncompliant sex offenders. Through a cooperative effort with NCMEC dubbed Operation Pickup, the Marshals Service recovered 190 missing children and arrested 150 abductors or companions.

TALKING POINTS FOR USMS COMMITMENT TO CHILDREN'S SAFETY

USMS commitment to children's safety:

- The U.S. Marshals Service was designated the lead law enforcement agency responsible for investigating sex offender registration violations and other offenses that violate the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act, passed on July 27, 2006. As part of the Act, the Marshals Service has three principal responsibilities:
 - assisting state, local, tribal and territorial authorities in the location and apprehension of non-compliant and fugitive sex offenders;
 - investigating violations of the Act for federal prosecution; and,
 - assisting in the identification and location of sex offenders relocated as a result of a major disaster.
- The Marshals Service created the Sex Offender Investigations Branch to manage its Sex Offender Apprehension Program. Since the branch's inception, it has
 - developed an implementation strategy;
 - assisted the rest of the Department of Justice with legal guidance;
 - created the National Sex Offender Targeting Center;
 - assigned a full time liaison to the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children; and,
 - designated a sex offender investigations coordinator in each district and Regional Fugitive Task Force.

USMS / NCMEC relationship talking points:

- NCMEC has assigned four analysts and one supervisor to NSOTC from their Sex Offender Tracking Team. The SOTT was created immediately following the passage of the Adam Walsh Act of 2006 and has proven to be a tremendous asset to state, local and federal law enforcement agencies nationwide in their efforts to locate and arrest non-compliant sex offenders. SOTT is playing a very significant role at NSOTC.
- The USMS/NCMEC relationship continues to grow. For the first time ever, NCMEC has co-located staff with an outside agency - the 5 SOTT analysts at the NSOTC.
- In the near future, the USMS will be assigning another investigator to NCMEC in order to expand the ways we support NCMEC's mission.
- The USMS continues to actively support NCMEC's Missing Child Division through Operation Pickup. This initiative targets fugitives who are connected to missing child investigations. The USMS recently made its 150th arrest and has recovered over 180 children through Operation Pickup. This success would not be possible without the dedicated staff of NCMEC's Missing Children Division.

Badges for Baseball partnership with the Cal Ripken Sr. Foundation:

- The CRSF and the USMS established an official partnership in February 2010 to deliver the Badges for Baseball program in youth camps, clinics and community-based organizations across the United States.
- When fully implemented, CRSF / USMS Badges for Baseball partnership will be a multi-faceted mentoring program that brings the tenets of "The Ripken Way" to young people through a variety of programs, including Healthy Choices, Healthy Children and baseball/softball themed activities.
- Most importantly, deputies will mentor and work directly with youth to enhance the lessons of "The Ripken Way" while providing young people with new opportunities to learn, grow, and make positive choices for their future.
- The Badges for Baseball program primarily targets areas with high rates of juvenile crime and delinquency related issues. Unfortunately these high crime rates often correlate with strained relationships between law enforcement officers and young people living in these neighborhoods. This strain provides an opportunity to reach young people at an impressionable age and gives them opportunities to begin seeing the U.S Marshals as mentors, friends, and coaches rather than an enemy on their streets.

Re: Appeal No. AP-2011-01671
Request No. 2011USMS16427
KWC:RRK

You appealed from the action of the United States Marshals Service (USMS) on your request for access to all talking points from January 2000 to October 2010.

The Freedom of Information Act provides for disclosure of many agency records. At the same time, Congress included in the FOIA nine exemptions from disclosure that provide protection for important interests such as personal privacy, privileged communications, and certain law enforcement activities. After carefully considering your appeal, and as a result of discussions between USMS personnel and this Office, I am releasing one page in full and one page in part to you, copies of which I have enclosed. These pages were originally released to you by USMS, but certain redactions have been removed. I am otherwise affirming USMS's action on your request.

USMS properly withheld certain information that is protected from disclosure under the FOIA pursuant to:

5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5), which concerns certain inter- and intra-agency communications protected by the deliberative process privilege;

5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6), which concerns material the release of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of the personal privacy of third parties;

5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(C), which concerns records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes the release of which could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of the personal privacy of third parties; and

Prepared by USMS OPA, March 26, 2009

The body of Deputy U.S. Marshal Vincent Bustamante was discovered March 25 by authorities in Juarez, Mexico. The U.S. Marshals Service is cooperating with Mexican authorities and the FBI in the investigation into the death of Deputy Bustamante, and it would be premature at this time to address the potential outcome of that investigation. What I can tell you is that the U.S. Marshals Service is saddened by the death of Deputy Bustamante and our thoughts and prayers are with the family.

There was an active warrant on Deputy Bustamante at the time of his death for his failure to appear in court on charges of criminal theft of public property. Deputy Bustamante was on a modified duty status as a result of these charges which limited his law enforcement role and required his weapon, credentials and badges be retained by his supervisor outside assigned work hours.

Information sessions led by Deputy U.S. Marshals have been held in two regions of the country, providing information on the history and missions of the service in addition to application procedures to 1,800 men and women interested in becoming deputies. The recruitment drive will continue through the end of the fiscal year offering opportunities for individuals to be considered for employment in all 94 Marshals districts.
- The USMS completed an exhaustive review of its existing policy documents since Jan. 20, certifying many policies as current and active and taking corrective actions to bring the remaining policies up-to-date.
