On 2/22/55 Harvey Matusow testified before the US Senate Subcommittee to Investigate the Administration of the Internal Security Act and Other Internal Security Laws of the Committee on the Judiciary in Washington, D.C.

Matusow stated that during the Spring of 1954, he made a telephone call from the apartment at 141 West 10th St., NYC, where he formerly lived, to Jack Anderson, who wrote for "Parade Magazine," "Time Magazine" and also for Drew Pearson. This call was concerning Matusow's book and the material he had which he would put at the disposal of any members of Congress who were up for reelection, who were going to be attacked by Senator McCarthy. Confidential information was received (no date) that [redacted] was trying to sell "Parade" magazine an article to the effect that the local District Attorney broke the Brinks case and not the FBI. The source indicated that the District Attorney in Boston took the matter up with Jack Anderson.

The District Attorney was advised of the above rumor picked up in NY, ~~and~~ that a Washington correspondent connected in some way with Drew Pearson circulated the story that the FBI did not break the Brink's case, it was broken by the District Attorney and the FBI got the credit.

The District Attorney declared the rumor ridiculous and stated he had never talked to Jack Anderson. He also stated the rumor was completely false and he had the highest regard for the FBI.

On 7/10/56 Jack Anderson telephonically inquired concerning the case. He wanted to know how long the FBI had been in this case. He was advised that the Nassau County Police were handling the case and FBI facilities such as Laboratory and Identification Division had been made available if they desired to use them. He asked the question "Why wasn't the FBI actively investigating this case inasmuch as the victim had been taken across the state line?" When asked what information he had which indicated the victim had been taken across the state line, he stated that he had none, but thought by this time the FBI would have presumed the victim would have been taken across the state line.

He also inquired concerning the seven-day presumptive clause. He was advised the Bureau was making no comment. He also stated that "He and Drew Pearson expected the Bureau to keep them fully apprised of all facts concerning the FBI's activities in the [redacted] case."

He was advised that in the event the FBI had information of a public source nature available he was, of course, welcome to receive it along with other members of the press.

These are the usual attempts of intimidation tactics of Anderson and Pearson. They would, of course, be treated like any other representatives of the press who call for information and would not be shown any favors.

The article set out details concerning Governor Harriman's fabulous spending at the Democratic Convention in Chicago. It was estimated that Harriman spent $8,000,000 on his presidential campaign.

On 12/21/56 a conference was held in the Attorney General's Office, which was attended by individuals from the Department of Defense. It was pointed out that Jack Anderson of Drew Pearson's Office had given to General Kenny a mimeographed document entitled "Considerations on the Wilson Memorandum." This document contained Secretary of Defense Wilson's order of 11/26/56, establishing service responsibility for the development of guided missiles. Defense had requested that the Bureau determine who gave this information to Anderson, who stated that he received it through the mail.

It was pointed out that this was an administrative matter and should be handled by Defense, but the Bureau would make any laboratory examinations desired by Defense of the documents in question. The laboratory did make the examinations and results were made known to Defense on 1/2/57.

On 1/4/57 Colonel [redacted] of the Inspector General's Office of the Army, advised that investigation at Washington, D.C., had established the possibility that Colonel [redacted] was responsible for the submission of above information to Drew Pearson.

On 1/4/57 Colonel [redacted] Office of the Inspector General, advised that Major General Ogdon, the Inspector General, had ascertained from American Aviation Publications that they had received above documents from Colonel [redacted] Officials at the Publications office, however, maintained that at the request of Colonel [redacted] they returned the documents to him at Redstone Arsenal.

Colonel [redacted] stated that there were indications from newspapers and several magazine articles indicating that a big story involving Redstone Arsenal was to "break" in the January issue of "Missiles and Rockets," magazine published by American Aviation Publications.

General Ogdon was to make a request to American Aviation Publications to peruse the galley proofs of the January issue of "Missiles and Rockets."

If above request was denied, a request was to be made for the Bureau to peruse the galley proofs prior to publication.

Colonel [redacted] also stated that the President was personally interested in this matter and there would be grave consequences if this material was published.

On 1/3/57 [redacted] from "Parade Magazine," advised Mr. Nichols that [redacted] and Jack Anderson were the Washington editors of "Parade." She believed that Anderson was honest. Anderson gave her orders for crime stories for "Parade" and she wished to truthfully state exactly what the connection was because she knew that the Bureau wouldn't give Drew Pearson the time of day. She was valuable to Anderson and [redacted] because she could write crime stories and she could get into places where they could not.

The NY editors of "Parade" requested their Washington office to secure a human, personal story to be used over the Director's by-line and was to be used in an early issue which would point out the crime picture for 1957.

[redacted] stated that the Director had told her she had always been a friend of the Bureau and she could have anything she desired. She spoke very well of the Director and stated she would like to have perhaps an hour with him concerning the story.

Mr. Nichols did not approve of the tie-up with Anderson and [redacted] or of [redacted] writing an article for the Director's signature.

Mr. Nichols suggested that [redacted] be advised that since the pressures on the Director would make it impossible for him to spend the time with her, that the Bureau would be very glad to give her an advance copy of the Uniform Crime Report to be published in "Parade" on the first Sunday after the Uniform Crime Report Bulletin was released. [redacted] was to be advised.

On 1/6/57 at a church fireside, which was a social gathering for young people in ages approximately 18 to 25, a young man stated to Mr. Eames that [redacted] who was a reporter in Washington who felt that CIA and the Treasury Department were more effective investigative organizations than the FBI. He stated that [redacted] Jack Anderson, had told him that as the Director became older, standards had become relaxed, new agents didn't compare with those hired in former years, and the FBI wasn't as good a place to work as the Treasury or CIA. He asked for Mr. Eames' opinion.

He was advised the FBI had lost none of its aggressiveness or effectiveness over the years. [redacted] stated that he had always had a great deal of respect for the FBI, but felt that Jack was in a position to know and would not misinform him. Mr. Eames inquired whether Jack Anderson had ever given him any reason for this opinion and the brother stated that Jack had told him the CIA paid better than FBI and also of an instance in which the Narcotics Bureau had broken a case immediately after it developed a narcotic angle after the FBI had worked on it for an extended period. Jack had never given him any specific criticism of the FBI.

Mr. Eames stated that since his opinion was asked it was that [redacted] Jack, did not know what he was talking about. [redacted] stated that both Drew Pearson and Jack were inclined to write mostly on a critical vein, but that they "didn't hesitate to hang a merit badge on someone when warranted, but did swing wild once in awhile." He was informed the answer was in the record.

[redacted] later called back regarding Anderson and stated that she had told him the Bureau did not want anything to do with him. Anderson had stated that he thought the Director was the most competent public servant in Washington, and that he had nothing against the Bureau. She told Anderson that he still worked for Pearson and that was enough. He then told [redacted] that if she could get the article on the increase in crime and related matters, it could be run without anyone's signature or over the signature of a New York staff writer.*

She was advised that if we could cooperate with her and her alone this would be a different matter but we did not want to be associated with [redacted] and Anderson.

[redacted] called later and stated that she had talked to Anderson and he agreed that anything she wrote in connection with the Bureau he would guarantee would not be changed and would be exactly as it had been approved and that neither his name or [redacted] would appear in connection with the article.

After above conversation Mr. Nichols was advised of information concerning [redacted] Jack Anderson's [redacted] set out in above reference.

Mr. Nichols then stated that, unless advised to the contrary, he was going to tell [redacted] that, after he talked to her the previous Monday statements were attributed to Anderson as set out in above reference, and that in view of Anderson's attitude obviously this was in direct conflict with what he told her and that, such as the Bureau regretted not being able to cooperate with her, we were going to have nothing to do with the Washington office of "Parade" as long as [redacted] and Anderson were in charge.

On 1/8/57 the Bureau notified [redacted] that assistance could not be given to her in connection with her article on crime and she asked if it was because of Anderson*. On 1/8/57 Jack Anderson called and stated that he was disappointed that the Bureau could not help [redacted] on her article. Anderson stated that he got the impression from [redacted] that the Bureau felt that he had taken a slap at the Bureau. Anderson was advised that he knew what he had done and what he had not done and there was no point in discussing it.

~~SECRET~~

Anderson then stated that he had picked up a report that Mr. Nichols had been up on the Hill lately talking to Senators regarding the possibility of the Director's running for President in 1960 and they had gotten the impression that Mr. Nichols would be interested in becoming the Director of the Bureau if the Director left to run for the Presidency.

Anderson was advised that this was strangely reminiscent of a column which Drew Pearson had done several years ago regarding Mr. Nichols which was full of lies, and for which Pearson later apologized.

Anderson was asked just what Senators were supposed to have been talking to Mr. Nichols. He stated that Tom Hennings was one. Anderson was advised that Mr. Nichols had not talked with Hennings for an extended period and his alleged report was ridiculous. He stated he thought it was a good news story and he would carry Mr. Nichols' denial with it as he wanted to be fair.

Anderson then stated that Senator McCarthy had been advocating the Director for the Presidency but that no one, of course, could hold the Director responsible for this and that Senator Bridges had discussed the Director for the Presidency. Anderson was advised there had been no discussions of the Director with the Director's approval or knowledge, and his life had been the Bureau and would be nothing else.

It was quite obvious that the above was an illustration of Pearson tactics of retaliation when they were not given information. Mr. Nichols suggested that he talk to Tom Hennings and tell him that he, of course, had not had any such discussion with him and if he had heard anything he just wanted to make it clear how untrue the whole thing was.

On 1/9/57 Mr. Nichols called on Senator Thomas Hennings of Missouri regarding information set out in above reference.

Mr. Hennings was very surprised and stated that he had not talked to Jack Anderson for a year or more except to see him in the hallway. He had never heard such a vicious story and that as far as the Director was concerned he would make a great President. Hennings asked if we wanted him to write Anderson a "hot letter" putting it on the record and calling him a diabolical liar. Hennings stated the story was not true.

Mr. Nichols thought it was very worthwhile to see Hennings and that it was certainly established on the record the type of vicious liar Jack Anderson was.

On 2/28/57 [redacted] advised that the Bureau had turned her down regarding a statement from the Director as to a forecast on crime during the past year. She stated she knew this came about as a result of Jack Anderson's printing false information regarding the Director and Mr. Nichols.

[redacted] stated that "This Week" magazine was coming out with a story under the Director's by-line giving exactly the same type of forecast of crime that she and Jack Anderson had originally wanted. She stated that as a result of this, "poor old Jack had caught hell from his New York Office." She then added that in order to make amends for his inability to procure information from the FBI, Anderson had written a story quoting [redacted] Metropolitan Police, concerning crime in the District of Columbia, and quoting certain facts obtained from the Kefauver Juvenile Delinquency Subcommittee. She then stated that New York however, upon learning that "This Week" magazine planned to come out with a forecast by the Director, changed Anderson's article to put emphasis on the Director's recent introduction in the FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin concerning the publication of names of juvenile delinquents. [redacted] also stated that Anderson was most distraught because the Bureau might think Anderson had double crossed the Bureau. She continued that she hoped the Bureau would not hold it against her or Anderson because their NY office wanted to compete with "This Week" magazine.

Mr. Nichols believed this was just another attempt on the part of Anderson to be completely two-faced.

Drew Pearson's column in the "Washington Post and Times Herald" for 9/19/58 was prepared by Jack Anderson and contains in part an item captioned "Red Plot Seen in South." In the first paragraph, Anderson states: "Behind the racial strife in the south, FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover has detected the hidden hand of the Communist Party." Director noted: "Let me know the basis. H."

Anderson's article infers that the Director recently reported to President Eisenhower that communists are migrating from New England to certain Southern States to organize the textile industry and to stir up tension between whites and blacks. He also states that the Director claimed that "red agents" are trying to infiltrate both the National Association for Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) and the pro-segregation white citizens councils without success, however. Finally, he alleges the Director said that communist strategy is to inflame both sides in the racial issue; to undermine democracy by breeding hatred, suspicion and violence.

A very careful search has been made to determine if such language was contained in any one or more reports to the White House. We have, of course, furnished the White House from time to time with information regarding communist interest in racial issues. There is, however, no one document which can be identified as wholly containing the statements made in Anderson's article.

The White House was advised of the migration of communists from New England into the textile industries in the South in our semiannual summary of Communist Party activities (7/1/55 - 12/31/55, page 18). It was also mentioned in connection with the Director's briefing of the Cabinet 3/9/56 on racial tensions and civil rights (62-102873-59, pages 12 and 13). Both of these also contained a reference to the fact that Party tactics have long espoused use

[REDACTED] Also more current is the reference in "Masters of Deceit," page 246, which comments on communists' attempts to infiltrate the NAACP. Further similarities in Anderson's statements can be seen in the report of the 1959 "On-the-Record" transcript of testimony given by the Director on 1/16/58 before the House Subcommittee on Appropriations which states on page 29 as follows:

"The Negro situation is also being exploited fully and continuously by Communists on a national scale. Current programs include intensified attempts to infiltrate Negro mass organizations. The party's objectives are not to aid the Negroes--but are designed to take advantage of all controversial issues on the racial question so as to create unrest, dissension, and confusion in the minds of the American people."

OBSERVATIONS:

The information in Anderson's column appears to be a consolidation of the recent testimony [REDACTED] together with the statement of the Director contained in his testimony before the Appropriations Committee on 1/16/58. Thereafter, the irresponsible statements contained in this column are readily apparent when it is realized that Anderson has attempted to mislead the readers by mixing together a communist tactic of 1955 (migration from New England to southern textile mills) with current references to publicly known communist racial tactics to give the impression that the entire item is today's news.
