The Honorable
L. Patrick Gray, III
Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

Please allow me to refer to the Miami Herald of Friday, 23 February 1973, page 7-A, specifically to the article entitled "Whitten CASE SPARKS MASSIVE FBI PROBE." written by Jack Anderson, United Feature Syndicate.

To begin, may I mention that Anderson cites the Constitution so that he may, with what would sometimes appear as relative immunity, make statements and accusations which, to my mind, are baseless and use as a shield his right as an American citizen to speak anything his mind desires regardless of consequences. In my humble opinion Drew Bearson was an angel compared to Anderson.

Now to quote from Anderson - - "false arrest" of my associate Les Whitten..... was used as a pretext for launching a massive investigation INTO OUR OPERATIONS". (My only question here is "Aren't we much, MUCH too late in launching such an investigation?") "Some excuse was needed....to pry into our telephone calls around the world". This was provided by Whitten's arrest Jan 31 while he was reporting on the return of stolen Indian documents to the government. A grand jury agreed this was no crime and refused to indict him. But meanwhile, FBI agents began using all the powers of government to find out HOW we get our information that the government doesn't want published." (What's wrong with the Government's desire to protect classified information? Or, should the Government say "Go ahead, Dear Friend, and tell the world these things which concern the safety of the United States of America? - "Your Country". Of course, the possibility exists that you don't much care for YOUR COUNTRY. Any comment? Of course, the Devilish government is trying to muzzle the press. Well, when were you and your ilk part of the bonafide press?)

"When I appeared before the Grand Jury, the prosecutor emphasized that I was not under investigation; that I was not in any way involved in the alleged "crime". The G-Men.....most of all seemed eager to find out who has been slipping 'us' confidential excerpts from the FBI's own files." (To my untutored mind it seems quite logical that the G-Men should be VERY MUCH interested in determining WHO has been or is slipping confidential excerpts from the FBI files, AND who is the "US" referred to in 'slipping us' above?

"All of this has nothing to do, of course, with the Indian documents, which the FBI used as the excuse for getting into our telephone records. This was a flagrant violation of our rights under the First Amendment. Obviously, freedom of the press is a mockery if the FBI can block our access to the news by investigating and harassing our sources"

(No --- NOOOO --- the article in the paper has nothing to do except to get ALLEGED information by ANY MEANS POSSIBLE - - BY HOOK OR BY CROOK -- anything which can be "called" news - - no matter whom it hurts or if it pours out to the world - - worse, if you wish, - - to the gullible American public the tripe which Jack Anderson gets by any means whatsoever. One big question is this. Just HOW MUCH is he willing to pay for his "NEWS"? That question has a simple answer. ALL THAT IS NECESSARY TO GET THE "NEWS" so long as he gets from those who go after the (NEWS????) the price which HE sets)

And Now - - let it be understood that everything above has been OPINION which I believe is acceptable and PUBLISHABLE.

But if you, Mr. Gray, Director of the FBI read this and think that it MAY BE worth considering, I am well repaid.

Sincerely yours,

W. W. Jenna

"THE WASHINGTON POST"

ALL INFORMATION CONTAINED

Captioned column, attached, relates to discovery of "notes" at American Telephone and Telegraph (AT&T) transcontinental microwave station outside Flagstaff, Arizona, indicating explosives had been planted at the station. It was subsequently determined that the notes had been placed by Special Forces team K155 during maneuvers in the area during October, 1972.

The article states that when the notes were located the FBI was called to the rescue.

Anderson has confused two separate incidents. In November, 1972, it was reported to our Flagstaff, Arizona, Resident Agency that a piece of cardboard had been found containing a diagram of an electric power substation at Winona, Arizona, showing the location of explosives. Our Agents examined the diagram and while so doing an Arizona public service employee, who had also been called into the case, noted that a similar diagram had been located some weeks earlier at the microwave station outside Flagstaff, Arizona, and that AT&T investigation had determined that the diagram was the result of maneuvers of Special Forces units who had been training in the area during October, 1972.

Our Agents telephoned Colonel [Redacted] Commander of the Seventh Special Forces team, Fort Bragg, North Carolina, described the diagram to him, and he identified it as one of his unit's. He said that these diagrams were not meant to be left at these sites, that the maneuver was not intended to test security at these facilities, and that these diagrams should have been taken with the Special Forces teams when they left the area.

No investigation other than this inquiry was conducted by the FBI into the diagram located at the electric power substation. The FBI was not called into the case of the diagram found at the microwave station.

KISS Incident Made AT&T Pucker

By Jack Anderson

Sheepish executives of American Telephone and Telegraph would rather not talk about the KISS incident. But for several frantic hours last October, they thought their vital transcontinental microwave station outside Flagstaff, Ariz., were going to receive an explosive kiss.

A communications craftsman discovered five mysterious notes, signed KISS, indicating that bombs had been planted to blow up the station. The notes were found in strategic locations inside the sensitive installation. In a panic, he turned in an alarm and ran for cover.

Faster than you can say boom, telephone security men were alerted, the county sheriff was summoned and the FBI was called to the rescue. The alarm was also flashed over the Bell system all the way to New York City. This threw Ma Bell into a dither, and telephone men began scurrying.

About this time, the sheriff remembered that a Green Beret unit had been operating in the area, testing security. A call to the unit commander, Col. W. R. Smith, established that the notes had been left not by a mad bomber calling himself KISS but by Special Forces team K155.

The commandos had crept into the microwave station the previous night and had left the notes where dynamite might have been planted. The exercise proved, as the enterprising colonel suspected, that the microwave system is dangerously vulnerable. Among other things, this carries the circuit that Washington uses to keep in voice contact with military installations throughout the country.

But Bell's district manager, D.J. Lyons, was more indignant over the prank the Green Berets had played on him than he was concerned about the poor security. He sent a bristling letter demanding reparations.

"It is estimated," he wrote, "that the following costs were incurred as a direct result of this unannounced intrusion of our property: Craft wages, $132; immediate supervisor direct involvement, $66; other Long Lines management directly involved in obtaining status and passing information to those people having a need to know, $150, and Mountain Bell Security office, $75."

There was one other thing; he also wanted to be "notified before any military unit enters our property in the future." This is a formality, of course, that a real sabotage crew might overlook.

Thai Connection

A report now in preparation will charge that the U.S. isn't really trying to cut off drug smuggling from Thailand, because Thai leaders are too deeply implicated and might retaliate by closing U.S. military bases.

The report will be submitted to the House Foreign Affairs Committee by Rep. Lester Wolff, (D-N.Y.), who has been investigating the drug problem in Southeast Asia.

He came back from an inspection tour last year to report that some top Thai officials were operating a fleet of trawlers, which was moving tons upon tons of opium to Hong Kong for shipment to American addicts.

He is now back from another tour of Southeast Asia, where he found the Thai smuggling operations relatively unchanged. The Thai opium, he will charge, is handled by dealers who are virtually immune from legal interference. They include some of the most powerful men in the country, who the U.S. doesn't wish to offend.

He also has proof, he will say, that illegal drug labs are still operating in Thailand, despite State Department denials. His report will also be critical of the government's strategy of buying up opium crops. The practice does little to stop drug smuggling and is excessively expensive, he will charge.

The report will claim that most of the money allocated for the war on drugs has gone into cutting off the Turkish opium supply, with little left to fight smuggling in other areas. Meanwhile, the "Thai Connection" blossoms like a poppy in the sun.

Wolff will point out, for instance, that the U.S. sends millions to keep 45,000 military men in Thailand but can't scrape up enough money to keep more than 35 narcotics agents to protect the nation against Asian drug smugglers.

Finally, the report will recommend that American aid to Thailand be shut off unless the country cooperates in smashing the drug smugglers.

Dear Mr. Anderson:

I read with great interest your column in the Washington Post, Sunday, March 4, 1973, commenting on the Federal Bureau of Investigation's handling of the kidnapping [Redacted]

I take issue with your implied conclusion that the Bureau bungled the case.

The safety [Redacted] was foremost in the minds of my family and the FBI. All decisions were made toward that end.

Our family was comforted and impressed by the manner and methods used by the Bureau under the able direction of [Redacted]. In retrospect, I do not believe any different action could have been taken to apprehend the kidnapers at the time of the "drop" without seriously jeopardizing [Redacted] safe return.

I feel you have unfairly criticized the FBI in this case. In my direct and most sensitive dealings with the Bureau, I have gained respect for their competent performance.

I am confident the abductors will be apprehended through the untiring efforts of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Sincerely,

INFORMATION CONCERNING

I am enclosing a lengthy newspaper clipping reporting the results of a two-hour address given by JACK ANDERSON, syndicated columnist, at Fort Hays State College at Hays, Kansas, 3/6/73. ANDERSON's remarks were derogatory relative to Mr. GRAY, the FBI, and, in particular, our involvement in the Watergate incident.

I thought the Director might be interested in his detailed remarks.

Need For Free Press Stressed

By MIKE BERRY
Of The News Staff

For a deeply religious man, and a Mormon at that, Jack Anderson sure knows how to raise Hell.

And for the several hundred local and area residents who thronged to Sheridan Coliseum here Tuesday night with the hope of hearing the world famous columnist "raise Hell," there was no disappointment.

Anderson ranged through most of his famous encounters with government officials, from his Pulitzer Prize - winning disclosures about the India - Pakistani conflict to the recent jailing of his reporter, Les Whitten, during a two-hour appearance at Fort Hays State College.

The FBI, the Nixon Administration and the Bureau of Indian Affairs all came under the glaring light of Anderson's commentary before he finally concluded his remarks with a reaffirmation of his faith in America.

His voice ranging from a barely audible whisper to a blaring rasp, Anderson did in person what he so often does in his syndicated column — he poked and gouged at incompetency and scandal in government and then told the audience, "Don't ever get the impression, please, from reading my column, that I've lost faith in this country, because I haven't."

He said that despite the attacks on the press and other injustices, he still feels the United States of America offers the most freedoms to its people and its news media.

A considerable amount of Anderson's time was devoted to criticism of Patrick Gray, who is currently being considered as a permanent replacement for J. Edgar Hoover as director of the FBI.

Speaking about the Senate's confirmation hearing on Gray, he stated, "Gray is part of the Nixon team and that's why they should vote against him. . . he doesn't know anything about law enforcement. . . his only qualification is that he is a political crony of President Nixon."

He charged that Gray gave false testimony under oath when he said the FBI was unaware the controversial Bureau of Indian Affairs papers were being returned when Indian leader Hank Adams and Anderson's associate, Whitten, were arrested.

According to Anderson, television newsreel footage and other press coverage showed an FBI informer only four feet from Adams when he announced the stolen papers were to be returned. Noting Gray's action in the case constituted perjury, Anderson remarked, ". . . and Gray is asking to be put in charge of law and order."

He said, in an informal press conference earlier Tuesday, that he has been "shadowed" by the FBI. In his opening remarks to the Coliseum audience, Anderson wryly noted, "It's nice to be able to speak in front of a microphone you can see" — an apparent reference to governmental wire tap efforts in the past.

When the microphone temporarily went dead during his speech, Anderson asked, "Uh, can we have the FBI connected?"

During the earlier interview, Anderson said he is not overly concerned about the FBI's surveillance of him. He said one of his informants provides him with the license numbers of cars sent to keep an eye on him.

The father of nine children, Anderson said he simply gives the order, "Kids, go out and find these license numbers." "And they do. . .," he chuckled.

He said once the children spotted two agents in an FBI car parked on a hilltop two miles from his home, observing it through binoculars, Anderson dispatched the youngsters to the hill, armed with a camera, to get pictures of what he called "a couple of Efrem Zimbalist Jr.'s."

The agents, however, reportedly stuck newspapers in front of their faces when the impromptu photo session began.

Many of Anderson's remarks turned again and again to the basic question of press freedom under the law.

"Freedom of the press is meaningless if you don't have access to the news," Anderson said. He said President Nixon would like to manage the news and that his attacks on the press are indicative of that attitude.

According to Anderson, Nixon has nurtured a distrust of the press bordering on hatred ever since he lost the 1962 California gubernatorial race to Pat Brown and made his famous, "You aren't going to have Nixon to kick around anymore" speech. He noted Nixon was supported 17 to 1 by the press in his '72 re-election bid, but that even those odds were not enough to override his hostility toward the media.

Discussing the area of acceptable governmental secrecy versus a "watchdog press," Anderson used Vietnam as an example and said, "No news story ever written cost 55,000 American lives."

In brief, Anderson's comments on several major topics included:

President Nixon's personality — "a very private person. . . an introvert holding the world's most extroverted job. . . a warm and a decent person. . . rather shy, rather sensitive. . . hates personal confrontation . . ."

The Watergate Affair — "total stupidity. . . this Mission Impossible fiasco. . . I wouldn't give $25 for everything Larry O'Brien said in his entire political career. . ."

His approach with Henry Kissinger — "I never say, 'Hey, Henry, what's new?' . . . I tell him what's new."

Former Secretary of State John Foster Dulles — "He was wrong on everything."

President Lyndon Johnson — "Lyndon Johnson did a lot of stealing, I'm convinced, but I could never catch him at it. . ." Jokingly referring to the way President Johnson tried to "seduce" the press by calling them in for personal appearances and showing them secret polls and documents — "He was the worst security violator we ever had."

Aides in the Nixon Administration — "I think they blunder more . . . the people around Nixon are quite mediocre. . . Nixon has surrounded himself with jerks. . . the main qualification in all of his appointees is loyalty. . . he doesn't necessarily look for the best man. . ."

Pentagon fund cuts — "false economy. . . the apple-polishers will survive while those who have been too busy working will be cut off."

Cuts in welfare and social programs — "The thing to do is not to cut the programs, cut some of the bureaucrats. . . the President has used a meat cleaver where a surgical knife would have been better. . . God only knows why the people in the ghettos are still with us. . ."

About his feelings on exposing the men personally involved in graft or corruption — "I think it is a very cruel thing when we expose another human being. . . I don't enjoy doing it, but when a public figure betrays the public trust, he should be exposed. . . they are things the American public has a right to know."

WASHINGTON — The false arrest of my associate Les Whitten has been used as a pretext for launching a massive FBI investigation into our operations.

Some excuse was needed to get a court order to pry into our telephone calls around the world.

This was provided by Whitten's arrest on Jan. 31 while he was reporting on the return of stolen Indian documents to the government. A grand jury agreed this was no crime and refused to indict him.

But meanwhile, the FBI, pretending to investigate Whitten's "crime," obtained a court order and served it on the American Telephone and Telegraph Co.

Probe Phone Calls

FBI agents immediately began checking into our phone calls, digging into our news sources and using all the powers of the U.S. government to find out how we get information that the government doesn't want published.

The court order was granted on Feb. 2, two days after Whitten's arrest. Its stipulated purpose was to investigate the theft of the Indian documents.

Yet the FBI subpoenaed our telephone records back to July, four months before the documents were

Senator John Tower
United States Senate
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

I read in Jack Anderson's column (2/27/73) about the possible interference of the FBI in a local matter involving a U. S. Senator. The story (copy enclosed) implicates the FBI in Big Brother type activity that would make George Orwell proud.

Is this activity condoned by the Senate? If not, what action is being taken to prevent its repetition in the future? What is being done about the instance reported?

1984 is only 11 years away. It is up to the government to keep a few people from making Orwell's nightmare from becoming a reality. If such incidents as this one are allowed to continue, the FBI may become our equivalent of the thought-police, and the American Dream may turn into a nightmare.

Sincerely yours,

Washington Merry-Go-Round

FBI Now Political

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Acting FBI chief Pat Gray is now using his agents, apparently, to help Sen. Paul Fannin, R-Ariz., find out who told us about a drunk-driving episode. FBI men have been going over our long-distance calls to Phoenix in search of our sources.

We reported that Fannin, a stern law-and-order senator, had shown contempt for the law after he was arrested for drunk driving in Phoenix. We quoted from suppressed official records, which charged he was "stuperous," "profane" and "insulting." At one point, he allegedly snarled at the arresting officer, Joseph Munoz: "This is going to make you a big man, isn't it, boy?"

A confidential memo smuggled to us out of the city prosecutor's office, charged that "Senator Fannin's file was taken out of the normal place" and that "the next thing anyone knew ... the Driving While Intoxicated charge had been dismissed." The police reports and other evidence against Fannin were never introduced in court.

Our story caused more than 50 Phoenix lawyers, led by Jack Levine, to protest to the city council that the Fannin case had "severely shaken" their confidence "in what previously has been an uncorrupted Police Department, an uncorrupted City Prosecutor's office and an honest, although overworked, City Court."

The showdown at city hall occurred on February 13. Levine told us that two well-mannered, clean-cut young men kept a sharp eye on the proceedings and approached him afterward for a copy of his statement. A former G-man himself, he took them to be FBI agents but couldn't positively identify them.

Later the same day, FBI agent John Hunt contacted Robert Updike, the assistant city prosecutor who wrote the confidential memo on the Fannin case. The first call was made to his home and was taken by his wife. Since the telephone number is unlisted, she demanded to know how the FBI got it.

TOLL CALL — We have established that the number appeared on our long-distance toll sheets, which were subpoenaed from the telephone company. We had left a message for Updike to call us, so we could ask him about the Fannin memo.

Subsequently, the FBI man reached Updike, who also was upset over the FBI's access to his unlisted number. He marched down to the FBI's Phoenix office, confronted agent-in-charge Paul, Mohr and agent William Billings and asked how they had obtained his number. They refused to tell him, saying: "We were just following orders."

following orders.

Still boiling, Mrs. Updike wrote the next day to Attorney General Richard Kleindienst. "Mr. Kleindienst," she wrote, "could you please explain to me why my husband is being investigated by the FBI at this particular time? Is it because Jack Anderson mentioned my husband's name in his column about Senator Fannin? Is it now the FBI's responsibility to investigate anyone mentioned by name in Mr. Anderson's column, especially when the column has to do with a United States Senator? Doesn't the FBI have more urgent matters to attend to?"

Kleindienst, Gray and Fannin, of course, are three peas in the same political pod. Gray coached Kleindienst in his testimony before the Senate ITT hearings and Fannin was one of the first to defend Kleindienst on the Senate floor, calling the charges against him "character assassination."

Declared Fannin: "I have known Dick Kleindienst for 20 years and I know that he is a God-fearing man who is sincere, honest and devoted to his nation." Now Kleindienst and Gray, apparently, are returning the favor. It dramatizes again how they have turned the FBI into a political police force.

Footnote: We invited the FBI to comment and made repeated calls to Kleindienst. They had no response.

Washington columnist Jack Anderson has a well-established record of criticizing the FBI and the late Director J. Edgar Hoover.

Attached is a copy of an article captioned "The Last Days of J. Edgar Hoover" by Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson that appeared in the January, 1969, issue of "True" magazine. While this article contains some material that is complimentary of Mr. Hoover and the FBI, its tone is generally derisive.

Attached is a copy of the column by Jack Anderson which appeared in the March 27, 1971, issue of "The Washington (D. C.) Post." This contains Anderson's admission that his staff had "been tailing" J. Edgar Hoover, "questioning his neighbors and inspecting his trash."

Regarding the above admission by Anderson that he was having an inspection made of J. Edgar Hoover's trash, attached is a copy of an item captioned "The Great Garbage Caper" which appeared on page 63 of the May, 1971, issue of "Washingtonian" magazine.

Attached is a copy of Anderson's column which appeared in the April 12, 1971, issue of "The Washington Post." This charges the FBI with "trafficking in private information about public figures."

Attached is a copy of a letter to the editor of "The Washington Post" by J. Edgar Hoover as published in the September 17, 1971, issue of that newspaper. In this letter, Mr. Hoover charged Anderson with falsely and unfairly belittling and derogating personnel of the FBI. Mr. Hoover made specific reference to Anderson's columns of August 18, 1971, and September 2, 1971--copies of which are affixed to his letter to the editor.

Attached is a copy of the column by Anderson that appeared in the November 24, 1971, issue of "The Washington Post." This deals with criticisms of Anderson which were made--without mentioning Anderson by name--by J. Edgar Hoover in remarks he delivered before the Washington, D. C., Chapter of the Society of Former Special Agents of the FBI on October 22, 1971.

NOTE: This is an enclosure to Memorandum from Mr. Jenkins to Mr. Bakerns dated March 1, 1973.

RE: JACK ANDERSON

Attached is a copy of a column by Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson that appeared in the June 2, 1969, issue of "The Washington Post" under the caption "Burger Has Witch-Hunting Record." This refers to the responsibility of the Senate Judiciary Committee to hold hearings regarding Warren E. Burger's nomination to serve as Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court. It includes a statement by Pearson and Anderson that the Senate Judiciary Committee "has an obligation to bring out the full facts regarding his (Warren Burger's) career. Whether it will do so, stacked as it is with Dirksen, Dodd, Hruska and Strom Thurmond, is another matter."

With further reference to the Senate Judiciary Committee, Anderson appeared before that Committee on March 9, 1972, during the hearings held on the nomination of Richard G. Kleindienst to be Attorney General of the United States.

Attached is a copy of pages 99-121 of a book entitled "The Drew Pearson Story" which was published in January, 1967, by Charles Hallberg and Company of Chicago, Illinois. These pages deal with Jack Anderson and include information regarding his involvement [redacted] in an electronic surveillance in 1958.

Qaddafi Hunts Weapons to Use Against Israel

Libya's venomous dictator, Muammar Qaddafi, is spending millions of dollars of his oil profits, according to secret investigative reports, to bankroll a stealthy operation acquiring arms anywhere in the world for use by Palestine terrorist forces against Israel.

High on his undercover shopping list are U.S. weapons. Middle East experts ascribe this to the fact that American-made arms were used successfully by the Israelis in past conflicts with Arab enemies. In his fanaticism against the Jews, Qaddafi is convinced that the quality of the U.S. equipment rather than the caliber of Israeli fighting men was responsible for their successes.

In his obsession to obtain American equipment, the Libyan strongman is ready to go to any lengths and resort to any means. Here is a case history from the secret files of the FBI detailing the effort of Qaddafi agents to rope an American businessman into a deal to buy U.S. military equipment abandoned in Vietnam.

Reviewed by my associate Dale Van Atta, the secret records show that New Yorker Edward Loyd became a furtive figure in a multimillion-dollar transaction to funnel nearly 80,000 M16 rifles and 22 million rounds of ammunition to Libya, where they would be handed over to the Palestine Liberation Organization. That number of rifles would be enough to supply five U.S. Army divisions.

FBI agents who interviewed Loyd in the middle of the operation learned that he was a commodities dealer who had sold Libya some communications devices. In December 1975, he was invited to meet at the Libyan Embassy in London with Lt. Abdurrazzaq Hanka, a naval attache who was in reality an embassy intelligence agent. As a smokescreen, Hanka "informed Loyd of Libya's interest in procuring various commodities, mentioning on an equal basis such items as foodstuffs, dairy cattle and military arms."

The FBI file also notes: "However, as the discussion proceeded, Loyd said it became obvious that Hanka was primarily interested in procuring military arms."

The Libyan agent told the New Yorker that his government wanted to re-arm its forces with U.S. equipment and offered to "purchase outright up to 50,000 M16s, unlimited ammunition to include five million tracer rounds, M16 parts and bayonets."

Loyd indicated he had contacts who could supply the weapons from the American arsenal left behind in Vietnam. The FBI account alleges that a deal was struck by which Loyd would set up two separate shipments of an initial 50,000 M16s with ammunition and then 30,000 more with 17 million rounds.

According to the FBI, Loyd traveled to Bangkok where he met another Libyan intelligence operative and two representatives of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, described as "a Marxist-Leninist oriented Arab terrorist group."

Hanka also showed up, and a day later Loyd submitted a $10 million letter of credit to a Bangkok bank.

The FBI account discloses that the transaction eventually fell through; Loyd and Hanka flew back to London "where Hanka expressed his displeasure with Loyd over his failure." According to the American, the Libyan agent told him "he had at least 10 other people trying to sell him arms, indicating he had no further use for Loyd's services."

The file expressed belief that some of Loyd's American contacts were members of "a ring of unscrupulous arms dealers who have access to a large quantity of U.S. arms smuggled from Vietnam. The value of the arms deals is a minimum of $23 million and may involve a quantity of 230,000 M16 rifles... A large part of this supply is destined for Libya and eventually to terrorist organizations."

Dear Sir:

On January 6, 1982, "The Washington Post" carried an article by syndicated columnist Jack Anderson entitled "FBI, CIA Play A Little Game of Snow White." The article alleged that the Director of Central Intelligence (DCI) recently expressed concern about security within the FBI and proposed that the CIA polygraph FBI counterintelligence personnel. The article also alleged that, subsequently, I asked the DCI to withdraw his suggestion because of opposition within the FBI's "counterintelligence staff."

I know of no factual basis for the assertions set forth in the Anderson column. There is no dispute, official or unofficial, between the FBI and the CIA about FBI security. The working relationship between the FBI and the CIA is on the highest level of cooperation and respect.

~~JACK ANDERSON COLUMN; JANUARY 6, 1982~~

ON JANUARY 6, 1982, AN ARTICLE BY SYNDICATED COLUMNIST JACK ANDERSON APPEARED IN MANY NEWSPAPERS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY ALLEGING THAT THE DIRECTOR OF CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE (DCI) WILLIAM CASEY AND HIS DEPUTY BOBBY INMAN RECENTLY EXPRESSED THEIR CONCERN ABOUT SECURITY WITHIN THE FBI DUE TO THE FAILURE OF AN FBI AGENT NOMINATED FOR LIAISON DUTIES TO PASS A CIA POLYGRAPH. THE ANDERSON COLUMN ASSERTED THAT BECAUSE OF THIS INCIDENT, THE DCI PROPOSED THAT THE CIA POLYGRAPH FBI COUNTERINTELLIGENCE PERSONNEL AND THAT I SUBSEQUENTLY ASKED THE DCI TO WITHDRAW HIS SUGGESTION BECAUSE OF OPPOSITION WITHIN THE FBI'S "COUNTER-INTELLIGENCE STAFF."

Dear Mr. Webster:

Jack Anderson

I was much impressed by your appearance yesterday on David Brinkley's ABC program - you surely give the impression that you know what you are doing, and that you are in command. Your facial expressions under questioning indicate deep and careful thought, and give the viewer a feeling of confidence that you are the Director.

You made a statement yesterday that I would like to follow up. You stated that it is against the law to disclose classified information. I have known this for a long time because I am a retired Marine Corps officer and during my period of active duty, 1939-1965, I had security clearances of Top Secret and even a "special security" clearance.

Now, I have long been disturbed by Jack Anderson's disclosure of classified information in his daily column. Not only disturbed- I have been shocked at his repeated disclosures, seemingly with impunity. At times he not only disclosed the information, but he also gives verbatim quotes of State Department cables, and gives the dates of such cables. Certainly the Soviets and anyone else who is interested will have their job of espionage greatly facilitated by such disclosures, and by verbatim quotes and dates of transmission anyone who had previously recorded our encoded transmissions could then take Anderson's plain English transcription, match it up against a recorded code, and so break the code.

Now, since you say it is against the law to disclose this information, why is it that Anderson can keep on doing it without any prosecution for such unauthorized disclosures? I have written to my Congressman about this because it is a matter of very great concern to me. His answer was far from satisfactory. Not only does Anderson disclose this info to the world at large, but there has to be governmental officials or employees who are feeding this info to him. Thus they are also guilty of unauthorized disclosure.

How can he continue to do this without being charged under the applicable laws? I would really appreciate an answer to this.

Sincerely

Dear [Redacted]

I have received your January 4th letter and appreciate your comments concerning my appearance on "This Week with David Brinkley."

Jack Anderson

Your inquiry about my statement regarding classified information is a good one. In our free society, Mr. Anderson is entitled to certain constitutional rights, which include freedom of the press. It is possible that some of the documents which Mr. Anderson uses in his articles have been released from our files or from the files of other Government agencies under provisions of the Freedom of Information Act. In instances where classified information is printed, however, these matters are investigated by the Bureau under the Espionage Statute, but before an investigation can be instituted a request must be made by the agency from which the information was "leaked." After the request is received, this information is relayed to the Internal Security Section, Criminal Division, Department of Justice, for an actual determination as to whether or not to proceed with an investigation to determine the source of the "leak." In some instances, the requesting agency may decide not to follow through with the investigation since to do so may result in additional publicity and attention to the document in question if the investigation reached prosecutive stages.

I hope I have adequately responded to your question and that you will understand the FBI's position. Thank you again for writing.

WASHINGTON - Among the Soviet Union's chosen people - chosen, that is, for religious persecution - the most revered is Yuli Kosharovsky. He has the biblical characteristics of a saint. He is a devout man; a teacher of teachers; who won't let the Kremlin stamp out the Jewish religion as long as he still draws breath.

For 11 hard years, he has been hounded, threatened and incarcerated for teaching the forbidden language of Hebrew. He has suffered, but he has not cracked.

SAMA

Friends of Kosharovsky say he is a remarkably poised, articulate and self-sufficient man. Most incredible of all, according to his friends, he bears no ill will toward the authorities who have tormented him.

Apparently, the old tyrants in the Kremlin simply cannot understand this serenity in the face of danger and abuse. He is perhaps more on their minds than any other Jewish activist.

Yet he does not go around calling press conferences and issuing provocative statements. He just attends quietly to his routines, resisting harassment without flinching, enduring abuse without rancor, teaching Hebrew despite official threats.

Thus Kosharovsky has become the Mahatma Gandhi of the Jewish activists, an unsung hero in the Kremlin's war against them. Yet until now, he has remained unknown to the American public.

He is not unknown, however, on Capitol Hill. Rep. Chris Smith, R-N.J., who met Kosharovsky during a nine-day trip to Russia last year, has become a special champion of his cause.

He has persuaded 54 members of Congress to sign a letter to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, complaining that "the Soviet government is continuing its harassment of Hebrew teachers." The letter cited Kosharovsky and included the names of three other teachers of Hebrew.

"We are unable to understand why people, who are teaching a language only, are being denied their basic human rights," the letter said. "The treatment of Yuli Kosharovsky and his fellow Hebrew teachers is in direct violation of the Helsinki Accords that your government signed in 1975."

Jack Anderson

Eleven years ago, Kosharovsky felt a great compulsion to return to the Holy Land. He was one of the first Soviet Jews to apply for an emigrant visa. His application was denied by the authorities on grounds that his emigration would constitute a security risk: He was a radio electronics engineer.

He was fired from his engineer's job for seeking to leave the country, which was regarded as an affront to the Soviet system. At the moment, he works as a night watchman for a movie theater. That's all right with him. Because it is so untaxing, the job leaves him plenty of time to study and to hone his already sharp intellect.

In 1975, he started a seminar for fellow engineers who had lost their jobs after applying for visas to Israel. He is widely regarded as one of the best teachers of Hebrew in the Soviet Union - an occupation that is officially proscribed and has brought repeated threats of imprisonment.

In July 1980, the threats turned into reality: He was visited by three KGB officials. They bullied him, but didn't buffalo him. He struck back with a letter to the KGB. In the missive, seen by my reporter Jeff Mezzit, Kosharovsky wrote that the three officials "told me that my road to salvation could lead through cooperation with the security authorities."

In other words, if he finked on his friends in the Jewish movement, he could expect "salvation" from KGB harassment. Kosharovsky gently declined and wound up in jail for a few days. "These events," he acknowledged, "made me very apprehensive."

Apprehensive. See July 28, 1982. For Yuli Kosharovsky's gentle nature but the hope on a character of granite.
