A Focus on System Safety & Security
Draft Proposal

OVERVIEW, OBJECTIVE AND SCOPE

Background: In July, 2011, Executive Director Paul Clanon tasked ALJ Angie Minkin and Marzia Zafar with establishing a stakeholder review procedure to reform the way utility system safety is handled in the Commission's ratemaking processes. This paper provides initial recommendations.

Objective: The purpose of this paper is to recommend improvements to our current ratemaking processes and elevate and prioritize regulated utilities' system safety.

Proposed Scope: The proposed solutions are intended to cover both the gas and electric systems. Recent legislation has emphasized the need for increased safety procedures (e.g. SB705, AB56); however, these recently adopted laws only focus on the gas side. Our proposal takes this opportunity to proactively raise the bar for both electric and gas system safety and security.

RATE CASE PROCEEDING RECOMMENDATIONS

- Require an exhibit from each utility that details the authorized expenditure from the last GRC versus the actual expenditures during that period. The exhibit should provide detailed explanations for the revised budgets and should provide accompanying work papers.

- Require an independent audit of the utility's expenditures included in the exhibit. (Potentially require utility to reimburse Commission for hiring an indene pent consultant).

- Require testimony in the GRC to detail the technical state of the utility system
    - For example, each utility should give a risk assessment of their physical system as well as an assessment of their risk tolerance.
    - They should provide testimony to identify areas of low risk and high risk and include underlying reasons for their assessments, as well as explaining the metrics underlying their analysis.

- The Chief Operating Officer of each utility, along with other relevant employees (including engineers, accountants, internal auditors, etc.) shall submit testimony detailing the overall policy of the utility's safety and security measures.
    - The testimony should encompass how safety is incorporated into their policies, goals and culture, and the efforts being made to bolster system safety & security.
    - The structure for employee and management bonuses and how such bonuses are assessed and calculated, with details as to how bonuses relate to various ratemaking categories
    - Legislative support for this requirement is provided by SB 705 (Ch. 522, Stats. 2011) adds §§ 961 and 963 to the Pub. Util. Code. This bill requires each gas corporation to develop a plan for safe and reliable operation of its gas pipeline facilities and requires the Commission to accept, modify, or reject the plan by year-end 2012, and to allow sufficient flexibility for the gas corporation to respond to safety requirements. Most importantly, this bill states that "it is the policy of the state to place safety of the public and gas corporation employees as the top priority and require the commission to require that the distribution rate of a gas corporation include sufficient revenues and employee staffing to provide for prompt provision of service to the public consistent with this policy."

- Solicit testimony from DRA and other consumer advocates to address not only the cost advocacy aspect of a GRC, but also a qualitative review of utility proposals for capital expenditure and ongoing operations and maintenance expenditures to increase system safety.

- Require the utility to file an independent audit evaluating the utility's system in terms of implementation of best practices (and the associated metrics) of the security and safety of their electric grid and gas pipelines. (Risk Assessment Unit?)

- Require the utility undergo and file a management audit that assesses the role that safety plays in the overall culture of the utility, including the use of incentives provided to employees and managers.

ANNUAL OR BI-ANNUAL SAFETY EN BANC PROPOSAL

Purpose: The purpose of such an en banc would be to keep system safety and security as a top priority for both the Commission as well as the utility.

Recommendations for En Banc Agenda:

- The CEOs of each utility shall inform the Commission of their respective company's culture and operation in terms of system safety and security.
- Best Practices - Independent experts will be invited to discuss the latest issues surrounding utility system safety and security.
- CPSD's Risk Assessment group will be invited to represent the CPUC staff's perspective.
- Consumer Advocates will be invited to bring their "qualitative" perspective of utility's proposals for system safety and security projects.
- Union representatives will be invited to give their perspective of on the field operations.

NEXT STEPS

- Hold a workshop in early January 2012 with stakeholders to review and refine the proposal.
- Issue resolution to require PG&E to submit exhibits and testimony according to the Rate Case Plan for its Test Year 2013 GRC.
- We may also wish to open a rulemaking to formally modify the Rate Case Plan and institutionalize the enhancements for all regulated utilities.

A Proposal for a CPUC/Gas Pipeline Industry Sponsored Risk Management Symposium

Location; San Francisco Airport Area

Symposium Purpose; To improve the "Safe" delivery of natural gas within California through effective Risk Management approaches that are built upon a cooperative, proactive and transparent working relationship between the Natural Gas Pipeline Industry and California's Regulatory agency, the CPUC.

Symposium Title; California's Natural Gas System-Rebuilding for a Safe Future *

Sponsors; CPUC, PG&E, SoCal, San Diego Gas and Elec. and Southwest Gas.

Beneficiaries of a Successful Symposium; The People of California

Attendees; Operations, Integrity Management/Risk Management/ Risk Assessment/ Risk Mitigation, Policy/Procedure, Engineering and Safety Personnel from Industry and appropriate CPUC Staff. In addition, invitees would include California Fire Marshall's, IBEW/UWA Leadership, Key State and Local Legislators/Legislative Staff, Housing/ Zoning Commissions, and all interested and accredited media.

Estimated Cost; Total out of pocket Costs to include a reception/buffet and day long meeting should not exceed $50,000.00 with industry sponsors paying 90% and the CPUC posting a not to exceed sponsorship burden of $5,000.00.

Scope-What this is; This would be a "Working" Symposium designed to; 1. Allow people in industry and government who are necessarily interdependent on one another to meet and hopefully to talk and share. 2. Presentations and workshops will be designed to share practices for risk assessment and risk mitigation and to better understand the needs of regulators. 3. To understand the expectations for safety and the costs of failure 4. To learn that safety, with respect to human life and property is non negotiable 5. To understand that everyone (industry/regulators/public officials and the public) are all in the same boat together.

Scope-What this is not; This Symposium is not an industry bashing opportunity. Nor is it an opportunity for politicians, lobbyists, lawyers, company executives or public relations people to advance a self-interest point of view. This is not about fines or litigation or rate cases or the cost of service or about effectiveness of Smart Meters etc – This is about making the people of California safe-sustainably so!

Agenda for the Symposium

Day 1

6-7:00 PM Reception
7-9:00 PM Dinner and Speaker

Keynote Speaker; Gov. Brown-Governor of the State of California-To speak about what the people of California expect from the companies who serve them and the regulators who represent them with respect to safety. What is the appropriate balance between safety and the cost of providing it? Hopefully he will find value for this type of bi-partisan effort, in a non political sense, to try and find a way for California to lead the nation in the area of pipeline safety while understanding and ensuring that the means are available for private industry to survive and prosper while delivering this service.

8:30 AM Keynote Speaker; Chairman Hersman-Chairman of the NTSB-To Speak about some of the nation's most serious pipeline accidents investigated by the NTSB-the costs in human terms and property damage, the most significant findings and lessons learned from those disasters and the actions that the NTSB believes can be taken to make gas pipelines safer. Hopefully she can support the theme of cooperation between industry and regulators as being essential to a successful outcome.

9:00 AM Kick-Off-President Peavy-President of the CPUC-To set the tone for the Symposium. To create the expectation for listening and learning from one another. That we are all in the same boat with respect to public safety.

9:15 Break

9:30 Panel Presentation/Discussion-Risk Assessment (the panel will include one presenter from each sponsor company and one member of CPUC's Staff-Executive Director Clanon or designee).

Topics to be covered by the Panel

. What factors and conditions increase the likelihood of gas transmission and distribution pipeline failures and what could be the consequences associated with failure?

. How these factors and conditions are identified to focus on weaknesses in systems, before failure.

. What data is used and how is it collected?

. How can system-wide data, regional/State data and national data assimilated and shared?

. What are the challenges to successfully identifying and collecting data helpful to predicting the likelihood of failures and the severity of consequences?

. What data do regulators need?

Agenda continues;

11:30 Lunch

12:00 Lunch Speaker- Topics to covered by the Speaker-It is our thinking that this role could best be handled by General Hagan of the CPUC (a nice way to introduce him to industry by dealing with topics that can be seen as conciliatory rather than confrontational)-just a thought.

. How can utility companies and regulators work more effectively and transparently in the area of public safety?

. How can the CPUC and the utility companies work together to ensure that pipeline safety risk management programs (risk assessment and mitigation) across the State of California meet the needs of utility companies and the State?

. How will the CPUC address any differences in company risk management programs and the CPUC's focus on risk management?

and this work needs to begin quickly
The PUC needs to make contact with targeted keynote speakers to determine interest and availability.
The PUC needs to identify other key California gas company sponsors and initiate contact to explain the concept and dates and hopefully gain support.

It would be desirable to target the week of May 21st, 2012 for Hall and Asso. to host a Symposium Planning Session with PUC and PG&E Symposium Coordinators to review preliminary plans and to move coordination/ownership for the Symposium forward.

Summary; It is the design intent for this symposium that the meeting represents, as much as possible, an apolitical opportunity for industry and the regulator to move the ball to benefit public safety in gas operations in California. The symposium should be viewed as the first of a series of these symposiums which can be easily expandable in the future to a "Safe California Energy" meeting which could address electricity and even liquid fuels as well as gas. The symposium should be viewed by the media and the public as a positive development that benefits public safety by focusing on the "how to" of risk assessment and risk mitigation. The opportunity for making contacts, sharing ideas and learning about the needs of the "village" it takes to ensure safe operations will be represented by this first of its kind cooperative effort between affected companies and the public. All participants to the symposium will need to be encouraged to participate openly and completely-the concept here must be that in the area of public safety there are no proprietary concepts-only ideas that work and ideas that do not, and why. The elephant in the room issue about who pays for things can be managed through the traditional rate making approach. The tone for the symposium will be cooperative, not confrontational. The media will say what they will say about the concept and the reality of what the symposium produces-for the sake of transparency all accredited media who wish to attend will be permitted, and in fact encouraged to do so. The stature of our key note speakers (Chairman Hersman and Gov. Brown) is intended to generate interest and participation in the symposium itself and to establish clear and proper expectations for the expected results. As to performance metrics for the symposium I would suggest that; 1. what the media writes and 2. how the PUC and the companies interact following the symposium will represent the rather subjective assessment for the symposium.

The Title of the Symposium is important as it conveys much to the range of Stakeholders in California. Because of this Hall and Asso. Believes that the ultimately chosen title should be a collaborative effort between the CPUC and the initial industry sponsor, PG&E. However, for consideration, other than the title used in the proposed agenda, some examples could include;
Natural Gas Systems-Reducing Risk and Improving the Infrastructure
Natural Gas Systems-Reducing Risk and Rebuilding Infrastructure
You could precede any title by adding California or the US depending on the collective view of the scope of the Symposium

Hall and Asso.'s are available to assist the meeting owners in the development of this symposium to the extent desired.

Hello,
I think this is good. I would like to suggest for your consideration two changes;

1. Under the section titled "what will success look like", I would suggest making this very simple - success is when the industries the CPUC regulates have all integrated safety in their culture and safety is priority #1. And success is when the CPUC has completely transformed its regulation from one based on self-reporting and check the box regulation to one based on risk assessment. (we would have accomplished our goal once the above two issues are completed)

And I also believe that the mission statement is a little too broad. We don't have jurisdiction over all safety related matters; our jurisdiction is over the public and employee safety of the industries we regulate and so our mission should be limited to that only.

These are just my thoughts. You and Paul are closer to the issue and therefore know the issue better.

FINAL D - TO TALK

Safety Symposium

A Proposal For A Series Of Symposiums Beginning In 2012 That Will Address Issues and Seek Solutions To Concerns Relating to Public Safety In The Public Utility Sector Of The State Of California.

Sponsors; California's Public Utility Companies and the California Public Utility Commission (CPUC).

Mission; Define, Create and Sustain a Safety Culture in the State of California

Objectives;
. Define the End Game for Public Safety in California
. Quantify Where We Are Now
. Agree on what Safety Culture is Required to Move Us from Our Current State to Our Desired State

Scope of the Symposiums; These will be working meetings that are designed; 1. To allow people in industry and government who are necessarily interdependent on one another to meet, talk, share and make recommendations that are consistent with the Symposiums' objectives, 2. Provide for workshops, panels and presentations that will be designed to share best practices in areas affecting public safety, 3. To understand the expectations for safety and the consequences of failure, 4. To allow industry to understand what the regulators need and why they need it, 5. To affirm that safety, with respect to human life and property is non-negotiable, and, 6. To understand that all parties to these symposiums, including the people of California share the same goal of dramatically improving the safety of our public utility systems.

Disclaimer; The Symposiums are not to be construed as opportunities to advance self-interest, debate rate cases, position for litigation nor provide a forum for mandates.

Attendees; Sponsoring Companies and the CPUC will send individuals who bring subject expertise to the topics of the Symposium and who are of an appropriate level in their respective organizations to influence and advance the solutions advanced.

Natural Gas Safety Symposium

May 7-8, 2013, San Francisco

What: The first ever gathering of California natural gas industry and regulatory leaders for a dialog about safety culture, the regulatory role in leading safety change, and effective emergency response.

Keynote speakers:

- Deborah A.P. Hersman, Chairman, National Transportation Safety Board
- Captain Chesley Sullenberger, former US Air Captain

Plus, panel discussions by industry and regulatory leaders

Where: Hiram Johnson State Building, Milton Marks Auditorium, 455 Golden Gate Ave., San Francisco

When: May 7, 2013, 1:30 – 4:45 p.m. and May 8, 2013, 8:30 a.m. – 12:30 p.m.

Agenda

Day 1: Tuesday, May 7, 2013, 1:30 p.m. – 4:45 p.m.

1:30 p.m.	Welcome Brigadier General (ret.) Jack Hagan, Director, Safety and Enforcement Division, California Public Utilities Commission
2 p.m.	Keynote Deborah A.P. Hersman, Chairman, National Transportation Safety Board
2:45 – 3:00	Break

3:30 p.m.	Panel 1: Building a Climate and Culture of Safety
	Moderator: TBD
	TBD – Alaska Airlines
	Captain Judy Bridges, USN, Director School of Aviation Safety, Pensacola, FL
	Robert C. Bigelow, President, Advanced Energy Design, LLC
	Paul Levy, former Chair of the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities and former CEO of Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center
	Nick Stamopoulos, Senior Vice President, Gas Operations, Pacific Gas and Electric Company
5 p.m.	Adjourn

Evening Event (Optional)

6 p.m.	Reception (cash bar), Marines' Memorial Club & Hotel, 609 Sutter St., San Francisco
7 p.m.	Dinner
	Evening Keynote: Captain Chesley Sullenberger, former U.S. Air Force, pilot of the "Miracle on the Hudson" aviation incident

Day 2: Wednesday, May 8, 2013, 8:30 a.m. – 12:30 p.m.

8:30 a.m.	Panel 2: Effectively Managing Pipeline Emergency Response
	Moderator: TBD
	Jerry Schmitz, Vice President, Engineering, Stoffell and Cain

	Brigadier General (CA) Jack Hagan, Director, Cyber and Homeland Defense, California Public Utilities Commission
12:30 p.m.	Adjourn

1:15 Panel Presentation/Discussion-Risk Mitigation (the panel will include one presenter from each sponsor company and from the CPUC's Staff-Director Clanon or designee).
Topics to be discussed by the Panel

. How data is used, analyzed and weighed to establish priorities and objectives to reduce risk.
. How objectives and priorities are incorporated into a plan.
. How the plan is implemented and monitored.
. What have been some of the specific actions taken to reduce risk.
. How performance is measured.

2:30 Break

3:00 Panel (Risk Mitigation) Discussion-Industry

4:00 Closing Remarks-Commissioner Florio

Path Forward

Paul and Nick need to approve the concept and approach-given the time remaining to the target symposium date I would suggest this be the highest priority. I am confident that PG&E as the proxy company representing industry for the symposium will need to run the concept up the flag pole and get buy-in from its Government Relations and Public Relations functions. The PUC will likewise need political and staff buy-in.
The PUC and PG&E need to appoint key personnel to own the symposium and manage the details to completion.
PG&E has resources to investigate and contract for site requirements for the symposium

The Title of the Symposium is important as it conveys much to the range of Stakeholders in California. Because of this Hall and Asso. Believes that the ultimately chosen title should be a collaborative effort between the CPUC and the initial industry sponsor, PG&E. Hello,

In advance of tomorrow's here are my thoughts. I'm pretty direct and to the point, but I hope that does not in any come across as dis-respectful. It is not meant to be in any way.

1. My first issue is with the title; yes, it is something very simple and can be fixed easily, but at the same time it is the first impression and that's very important. The title of the symposium is "California's Natural Gas System-Rebuilding for a Safe Future". This is ridiculous, because it suggests that our whole system is sub-par and is about to explode. San Bruno happened as a result of various levels of failures from all involved, but there is no need to alarm everyone continuously by harping on San Bruno. The SoCalGas system has been an industry example. We need to focus on "check the box regulation" and how we should transform this mentality. Once that mentality is transformed the utilities will naturally transform their culture to meet the regulators needs.

2. My second issue with the symposium is that its focus is not narrow and reactive. I mean, why do we need a disaster like San Bruno to have a symposium on safety? Why can't we be proactive and tackle safety of both electricity and natural gas systems. Take a look at the questions that this

MEMORANDUM

To: Energy Conference Invitees/Observers
From: Patrick Mason, President
Re: HOLD THE DATE: ENERGY CONFERENCE, April 25 – 26, 2013

The California Foundation on the Environment and the Economy (CFEE) will conduct a roundtable policy conference on Energy.

Date and Time: Thursday, April 25th starting with a buffet lunch at Noon and concluding no later than Friday, April 26th at 2:00 pm.

Place: San Francisco Bay Area

The conference will convene CPUC and California Energy Commissioners, state legislators, members of the Governor's cabinet, and senior industry, environmental and labor leaders to explore the challenges California faces as we continue to implement landmark legislation and regulation on carbon, efficiency, conservation, renewable energy and distributed generation. The conference will specifically focus 8 years ahead to the 2020 deadlines for the California Global Warming Solutions Act (AB32).

The steering committee is developing an agenda, which will focus on the role of state and federal regulatory policies and address concerns relating to:

- Integration of 33% Renewables Portfolio Standard
- Implementation of Cap & Trade, and analysis of the progress of the program after the state's first carbon auction in November
- Transmission Development to extend the impact of renewable sources of energy and help California meet its 33% RPS goal
- Distributed Generation, its impact on California energy forecasts, and electricity rate redesign
- Technological innovations enabling greater achievements in Demand Response and other conservation programs

A formal invitation with details along with a complete list of invitees and agenda will follow. If you have any questions, please call Celeste Cremen at 415-788-0812 or email her at celeste@cfee.net.

Dear Mr. Peevey,

I am writing to invite you to participate in a Roundtable Conference on Energy on Thursday, April 25 and Friday April 26, 2013 at the Silverado Conference Center in Napa, California.

The conference will specifically focus on the next 8 years as we approach the 2020 deadlines for the California Global Warming Solutions Act (AB32). We will convene California Public Utility Commissioners, California Energy Commissioners, state legislators, members of the Governor's cabinet, and senior industry, environmental and labor leaders to explore the challenges California faces as we continue to implement landmark legislation on reducing greenhouse gas emissions, and bold policies designed to increase efficiency and conservation, and encourage renewable energy and distributed generation.

The specific issue areas for discussion are:

- Integration of the 33% Renewables Portfolio Standard
- Implementation of Cap & Trade, and analysis of the progress of the program after the state's first carbon auction in November
- Transmission Development to extend the impact of renewable sources of energy and help California meet its 33% RPS goal
- Distributed Generation, its impact on California energy forecasts, and electricity rate redesign
- Technological innovations enabling innovations for Smart Grids, and greater achievements in Demand Response, and other conservation programs

Re: Materials for Energy Conference

Enclosed are the draft agenda, confirmed invitee list, participation and hotel confirmation form, as well as and directions to the Energy Roundtable Conference in Napa, California.

The conference starts with a buffet lunch on Thursday, April 25th at Noon, at the Conference Facilities at Silverado, with the roundtable beginning promptly at 1:00 p.m.

We have an impressive list of participants at the table and a well-crafted, balanced agenda. As always, adherence to the conference ground rules, specifically in terms of positive contributions designed to educate and promote consensus, is essential for the group to get the most out of our time together.

If you have general questions about the conference, or still need to confirm your attendance, please call Celeste Cremen at 415-788-0812 or celeste@cfee.net. Please email Beth Vaughan at beth@beth411.com for inquiries about the agenda.

If your family or office would like to reach you during the conference, the telephone number at the Silverado Conference Center is 707-257-0200. Also, the attire is casual for the entire conference.

We look forward to seeing you in Napa.

DRAFT AGENDA

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th

12:00 pm - 1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – Fairway Deck

1:00 pm - 1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction – Silverado West Ballroom

Patrick F. Mason*, President, CFEE

1:15 pm - 2:00 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
How California's energy sector produces and delivers power in the state, including the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid.

Jan Smutny-Jones,* Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers Assoc.
Stephen Berberich*, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

2:00 pm - 2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Michael Peevey*, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Robert Weisenmiller,* Chair, California Energy Commission

Roundtable Discussion

*presenter confirmed

2:30 pm - 3:30 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Commissioner, California Energy Commission
Mark Ferron, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
Ron Nichols, General Manager, Los Angeles Department of Water and Power
Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council
Kevin Evans, Vice President and General Manager, Integrated Demand Resources, Building Efficiency, Johnson Controls

Roundtable Discussion

3:30 pm - 3:45 pm – Break

3:45 pm - 5:15 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) How does the renewable energy policy goals fit with other state policies, e.g. vehicle electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Nick Chaset, Governor's Special Advisor for DG, CHP and Energy Storage
Laura Wisland, Senior Energy Analyst, Union of Concerned Scientists
Jim Avery, Senior VP, Power Supply, Sempra Energy Utilities
Tom Starrs, VP, Market Development and Policy, SunPower Corporation

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—TBD

Friday, April 26th—Silverado West Ballroom

7:30 am - 8:30 am – Continental Breakfast

8:30 am - 9:45 am—SESSION 5: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
How do agencies coordinate and align sometimes conflicting policies? What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change and energy goals?

Mary Nichols, Chairman, Air Resources Board
Michael Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Robert Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission
Stephen Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

Roundtable Discussion

*presenter confirmed

9:45 am - 11:00 am—SESSION 6: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What are the costs and benefits involved? As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

Mike Florio, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
John Chillemi, Senior Vice President and President, West Region, NRG
Stuart Hemphill, Senior VP, Power Supply, Southern California Edison
Fong Wan, Senior VP, Energy Procurement, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

11:00 am - 11:15 am – Break

11:15 am - 12:30 pm—SESSION 7: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting our 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals requires electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStasio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
Heather Sanders, Director, Smart Grid Technologies and Strategies, CAISO
Wade Crowfoot, Deputy Director, Governor's Office of Planning and Research
Aaron Johnson, Senior Director, Customer Programs, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

12:30 pm – Closing Remarks

12:45 pm - Adjourn

Liza,

PG&E delivered payment associated with Citation 13-005 to the CPUC's Fiscal Office today. I wanted you to be aware that included with the citation payment form is an addendum, both attached in this email. The addendum describes the substantial overlap between the subject of the citation and the subject of the Class Location OII, and requests that the Commission consider the citation and our penalty payment in its assessment of any subsequent penalty in Commission Order Instituting Investigation I.11-11-009 ("Class Location OII").

Given that this citation was not issued in a particular city and county, but rather applies broadly to PG&E's written procedures, PG&E did not provide any specific notifications to public agencies. Lastly, currently there are no known immediate safety hazards requiring immediate correction associated with this Citation.

Feel free to contact me with any questions.

ADDENDUM TO CITATION PAYMENT FORM

In connection with the above-referenced citation ("Citation") and payment of the associated fine, respondent Pacific Gas & Electric Company ("PG&E") notes that the violation identified in the Citation substantially overlaps with the subject matter of Commission Order Instituting Investigation I.11-11-009 ("Class Location OII"). For example:

- The Class Location OII specifically identified issues relating to PG&E's continuing surveillance program pursuant to 49 CFR §192.613 as falling within the scope of that proceeding: "Federal regulations require a natural gas transmission pipeline operator to have a procedure for continuing surveillance of its facilities to determine and take appropriate action related to changes in class location, failures, leakage history, corrosion, substantial changes in cathodic protection requirements, and other unusual operating and maintenance conditions. (See 49 C.F.R. §192.613.)"

- The OM&E Audit in which SED identified the Citation was conducted from February 14-17, 2012, during the pendency of the Class Location OII.

- SED's (then CPSD) May 2012 Investigative Report in the Class Location OII – issued after the OM&E Audit – included violations of §192.613 for failing to maintain a continuing surveillance procedure.

- SED's opening brief in the Class Location OII, filed in November 2012, alleged that PG&E did not maintain a formal continuing surveillance procedure.

Given the substantial overlap between the subject matter of the Citation and the subject matter of the Class Location OII, PG&E respectfully urges the Commission to take into account PG&E's $375,000 payment submitted today in connection with assessment of any subsequent penalty in the Class Location OII.

Re: Public Records Act Request
CPUC Reference No.: PRA #933

Dear Ms. Strottman:

You ask the California Public Utilities Commission (Commission/CPUC) to provide you copy of the following:

- Any citations' or issued under Resolution ALJ 274 by the Consumer Protection and Safety Division (CPSD) against natural gas utilities from December 7, 2011 until present.
- Citations CPSD Director Jack Hagan has issued against gas utilities since his tenure at the Commission.
- Proposed citations that have been submitted, but are outsanding for final approval, by CPSD Director Jack Hagan.

Among other things, the City of San Bruno requests Commission records regarding the Resolution ALJ-274 Safety Citation Program.

I am sending you a list of, and links to, the Commission records responsive to this request.

Dear Mr. Chaset,

I am writing to invite you to participate in a Roundtable Conference on Energy on Thursday, April 25 and Friday April 26, 2013 at the Silverado Conference Center in Napa, California.

The conference will specifically focus on the next 8 years as we approach the 2020 deadlines for the California Global Warming Solutions Act (AB32). We will convene California Public Utility Commissioners, California Energy Commissioners, state legislators, members of the Governor's cabinet, and senior industry, environmental and labor leaders to explore the challenges California faces as we continue to implement landmark legislation on reducing greenhouse gas emissions, and bold policies designed to increase efficiency and conservation, and encourage renewable energy and distributed generation.

The specific issue areas for discussion are:

- Integration of the 33% Renewables Portfolio Standard
- Implementation of Cap & Trade, and analysis of the progress of the program after the state's first carbon auction in November
- Transmission Development to extend the impact of renewable sources of energy and help California meet its 33% RPS goal
- Distributed Generation, its impact on California energy forecasts, and electricity rate redesign
- Technological innovations enabling innovations for Smart Grids, and greater achievements in Demand Response, and other conservation programs

PIER 35, SUITE 202 SAN FRANCISCO CA 94133
415 788 1786 www.cfee.net FAX 415 986 2227

The agenda, being developed by a joint steering committee of environmental, labor, and senior executives from across the energy industry spectrum, will consist of briefings on the current plans to implement the existing mandates, updates on what progress has been made to date, and moderated discussions of the ongoing roles of the administration, regulatory bodies and the state legislature.

This working agenda, combined with the roundtable, interactive format, is a timely introduction and progress report on what it will take to meet the goals we have already established and who is going do it.

The Foundation, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization, will sponsor your room and group meals. You will be responsible for incidental expenses and travel.

Our conference coordinator, Celeste Cremen, will be making your reservations at the Silverado Conference Center and answering any logistical questions you may have. Please contact Celeste at 415-788-0812 to confirm your participation.

I look forward to speaking with you soon.

Sincerely,

Mr. Michel P. Florio
Commissioner
505 Van Ness Ave., Room 5200
San Francisco, CA 94102

Dear Mr. Florio,

I am writing to invite you to participate in a Roundtable Conference on Energy on Thursday, April 25 and Friday April 26, 2013 at the Silverado Conference Center in Napa, California.

The conference will specifically focus on the next 8 years as we approach the 2020 deadlines for the California Global Warming Solutions Act (AB32). We will convene California Public Utility Commissioners, California Energy Commissioners, state legislators, members of the Governor's cabinet, and senior industry, environmental and labor leaders to explore the challenges California faces as we continue to implement landmark legislation on reducing greenhouse gas emissions, and bold policies designed to increase efficiency and conservation, and encourage renewable energy and distributed generation.

The specific issue areas for discussion are:

- Integration of the 33% Renewables Portfolio Standard
- Implementation of Cap & Trade, and analysis of the progress of the program after the state's first carbon auction in November
- Transmission Development to extend the impact of renewable sources of energy and help California meet its 33% RPS goal
- Distributed Generation, its impact on California energy forecasts, and electricity rate redesign
- Technological innovations enabling innovations for Smart Grids, and greater achievements in Demand Response, and other conservation programs

PIER 35, SUITE 202 SAN FRANCISCO CA 94133
415 788 1786 www.cfee.net FAX 415 986 2227

The agenda, being developed by a joint steering committee of environmental, labor, and senior executives from across the energy industry spectrum, will consist of briefings on the current plans to implement the existing mandates, updates on what progress has been made to date, and moderated discussions of the ongoing roles of the administration, regulatory bodies and the state legislature.

This working agenda, combined with the roundtable, interactive format, is a timely introduction and progress report on what it will take to meet the goals we have already established and who is going do it.

These conferences, sponsored by the participants, are a critical source of funding for CFEE, a nonprofit 501(c)(3) tax-exempt organization. We will send you an invoice for a conference fee of $350, which will be sufficient to cover our cost of your lodging and group meals. You will be responsible for your incidental expenses and travel costs.

Our conference coordinator, Celeste Cremen, will be making your reservations at the Silverado Conference Center and answering any logistical questions you may have. Please contact Celeste at 415-788-0812 to confirm your participation.

I look forward to speaking with you soon.

Sincerely,

Hi Jeanne,

At this year's CFEE roundtable energy conference to be held April 25-26, the steering committee decided that we should do an "energy 101" conference for the new legislators. We've designed the sessions around the loading order, to explain how California has prioritized actions in the energy sector, and the results of this effort, a decade later. We'd like to invite you to speak on Thursday afternoon and the session looks like this:

2:45 pm – 4:00 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Chair, California Energy Commission
Jeanne Clinton, Special Advisor to the California Public Utilities Commission

Responders:
Rep, IOU
Rep, MUNI
*Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council
Rep, Industry

Roundtable Discussion

Since Andrew McAllister is the lead Commissioner on the 2013 IEPR, with a focus on energy efficiency, I thought the two of you could take the lead in the session, explaining the state's EE policies, status thus far, and the strategy for achieving future goals and targets. Then other stakeholders at the table could respond.

Are you able to attend the conference and participate in this session? If so, is there a good time when I could talk to you so you could help me with the design of this session, and recommendations for other speakers?

Thanks,

Beth

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th—TBD

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – TBD

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcomeand Introduction

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-1:30pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
A short video will provide basic information regarding California's energy sector and the production and delivery of power in the state.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers

1:30 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologicallyadvanced, and environmentally-sound.The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter.Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

4:00 pm - 5:30 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g.How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?)Are there examples from outside the state that can inform our response? How does the Distributed Generation policy goal fit with other state policies, e.g. electrification and energy storage policies?What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting existing 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals require electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

President

November 26, 2012

Dr. Nancy E. Ryan
Deputy Executive Director of Policy
California Public Utilities Commission
505 Van Ness Ave., Room 5300
San Francisco, CA 94102-3298

Dear Dr. Ryan,

I am writing to invite you to participate in a Roundtable Conference on Energy on Thursday, April 25 and Friday April 26, 2013 at the Silverado Conference Center in Napa, California.

The conference will specifically focus on the next 8 years as we approach the 2020 deadlines for the California Global Warming Solutions Act (AB32). We will convene California Public Utility Commissioners, California Energy Commissioners, state legislators, members of the Governor's cabinet, and senior industry, environmental and labor leaders to explore the challenges California faces as we continue to implement landmark legislation on reducing greenhouse gas emissions, and bold policies designed to increase efficiency and conservation, and encourage renewable energy and distributed generation.

The specific issue areas for discussion are:

- Integration of the 33% Renewables Portfolio Standard
- Implementation of Cap & Trade, and analysis of the progress of the program after the state's first carbon auction in November
- Transmission Development to extend the impact of renewable sources of energy and help California meet its 33% RPS goal
- Distributed Generation, its impact on California energy forecasts, and electricity rate redesign
- Technological innovations enabling innovations for Smart Grids, and greater achievements in Demand Response, and other conservation programs

PIER 35, SUITE 202 SAN FRANCISCO CA 94133
415 788 1786 www.cfee.net FAX 415 986 2227

The agenda, being developed by a joint steering committee of environmental, labor, and senior executives from across the energy industry spectrum, will consist of briefings on the current plans to implement the existing mandates, updates on what progress has been made to date, and moderated discussions of the ongoing roles of the administration, regulatory bodies and the state legislature.

This working agenda, combined with the roundtable, interactive format, is a timely introduction and progress report on what it will take to meet the goals we have already established and who is going do it.

These conferences, sponsored by the participants, are a critical source of funding for CFEE, a nonprofit 501(c)(3) tax-exempt organization. We will send you an invoice for a conference fee of $350, which will be sufficient to cover our cost of your lodging and group meals. You will be responsible for your incidental expenses and travel costs.

Our conference coordinator, Celeste Cremen, will be making your reservations at the Silverado Conference Center and answering any logistical questions you may have. Please contact Celeste at 415-788-0812 to confirm your participation.

I look forward to speaking with you soon.

Sincerely,

Patrick F. Mason
President

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th—TBD

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – TBD

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-1:30 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
A short video will provide basic information regarding California's energy sector and the production and delivery of power in the state.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers

1:30 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission (5-7 min)
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission (5-7 min)

Roundtable Discussion

2:30 pm-2:45 pm – Break

*presenter confirmed

2:45 pm – 4:00 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Chair, California Energy Commission
Jeanne Clinton, Special Advisor to the California Public Utilities Commission

Responders:
Rep, IOU
Rep, MUNI
*Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council
Rep, Industry

Roundtable Discussion

4:00 pm - 5:30 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) Are there examples from outside the state that can inform our response? How does the Distributed Generation policy goal fit with other state policies, e.g. electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Michael Picker, Sr. Advisor to the Governor for Renewable Energy Facilities, Office of the Governor

Responders:
Rep, Pacific Gas & Electric
Rep, MUNI
Rep, Enviro
Rep, Industry
Rep, CAISO

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—TBD

Friday, April 26th—TBD

7:30 am - 8:30 am – Continental Breakfast – TBD

8:30 am - 10:00 am—SESSION 5: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What

*presenter confirmed

are the costs and benefits involved? As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

Stephen Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator
*Mike Florio, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
John Chillemi, Senior Vice President and President, West Region, NRG
Rep, Southern California Edison

Roundtable Discussion

10:00 am - 10:15 am – Break

10:15 am - 11:45 am—SESSION 6: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting existing 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals require electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStasio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
Joe Ronan, Senior VP, Government and Regulatory Affairs, Calpine Corporation
Rep,

Roundtable Discussion

11:45 am - 1:00 pm—SESSION 7: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What results and trends are apparent from recent auctions and how might the revenue be used to further the goals of the state? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change goals?

Mary Nichols, Chairman, Air Resources Board
Rep, Electricity producer
Rep, Manufacturer (EITE)
Rep, Manufacturer (non-EITE)
Rep, Enviro

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th—TBD

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – TBD

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-1:30 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
A short video will provide basic information regarding California's energy sector and the production and delivery of power in the state.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers

1:30 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission (5-7 min)
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission (5-7 min)

Roundtable Discussion

2:30 pm-2:45 pm – Break

*presenter confirmed

2:45 pm – 4:00 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Chair, California Energy Commission
Jeanne Clinton, Special Advisor to the California Public Utilities Commission

Responders:
Rep, IOU
Rep, MUNI
*Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council
Rep, Industry

Roundtable Discussion

4:00 pm - 5:30 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) Are there examples from outside the state that can inform our response? How does the Distributed Generation policy goal fit with other state policies, e.g. electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Michael Picker, Sr. Advisor to the Governor for Renewable Energy Facilities, Office of the Governor

Responders:
Rep, Pacific Gas & Electric
Rep, MUNI
Rep, Enviro
Rep, Industry
Rep, CAISO

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—TBD

Friday, April 26th—TBD

7:30 am - 8:30 am – Continental Breakfast – TBD

8:30 am - 10:00 am—SESSION 5: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What

*presenter confirmed

are the costs and benefits involved? As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

Stephen Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator
*Mike Florio, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
John Chillemi, Senior Vice President and President, West Region, NRG
Rep, Southern California Edison

Roundtable Discussion

10:00 am - 10:15 am – Break

10:15 am - 11:45 am—SESSION 6: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting existing 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals require electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStasio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
Joe Ronan, Senior VP, Government and Regulatory Affairs, Calpine Corporation
Rep,

Roundtable Discussion

11:45 am - 1:00 pm—SESSION 7: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What results and trends are apparent from recent auctions and how might the revenue be used to further the goals of the state? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change goals?

Mary Nichols, Chairman, Air Resources Board
Rep, Electricity producer
Rep, Manufacturer (EITE)
Rep, Manufacturer (non-EITE)
Rep, Enviro

10:00 am - 10:15 am – Break

10:15 am - 11:45 am—SESSION 6: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting existing 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals require electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStasio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
Joe Ronan, Senior VP, Government and Regulatory Affairs, Calpine Corporation

Roundtable Discussion

11:45 am - 1:00 pm—SESSION 7: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What results and trends are apparent from recent auctions and how might the revenue be used to further the goals of the state? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change goals?

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th—TBD

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – TBD

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-1:30 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
A short video will provide basic information regarding California's energy sector and the production and delivery of power in the state.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers

1:30 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission (5-7 min)
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission (5-7 min)

2:45 pm – 4:00 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Rep, Industry

Roundtable Discussion

4:00 pm - 5:30 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) Are there examples from outside the state that can inform our response? How does the Distributed Generation policy goal fit with other state policies, e.g. electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

10:00 am - 10:15 am – Break

10:15 am - 11:45 am—SESSION 6: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting existing 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals require electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStasio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
Joe Ronan, Senior VP, Government and Regulatory Affairs, Calpine Corporation

Roundtable Discussion

11:45 am - 1:00 pm—SESSION 7: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What results and trends are apparent from recent auctions and how might the revenue be used to further the goals of the state? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change goals?

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th—TBD

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – TBD

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction

Patrick F. Mason,* President, CFEE

1:15 pm-1:30 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
A short video will provide basic information regarding California's energy sector and the production and delivery of power in the state.

Jan Smutny-Jones,* Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers

1:30 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission (5-7 min)
Bob Weisenmiller,* Chair, California Energy Commission (5-7 min)

2:45 pm – 4:00 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Rep, Industry

Roundtable Discussion

4:00 pm - 5:30 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) Are there examples from outside the state that can inform our response? How does the Distributed Generation policy goal fit with other state policies, e.g. electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Hi Jeanne,

At this year's CFEE roundtable energy conference to be held April 25-26, the steering committee decided that we should do an "energy 101" conference for the new legislators. We've designed the sessions around the loading order, to explain how California has prioritized actions in the energy sector, and the results of this effort, a decade later. We'd like to invite you to speak on Thursday afternoon and the session looks like this:

2:45 pm – 4:00 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? Since Andrew McAllister is the lead Commissioner on the 2013 IEPR, with a focus on energy efficiency, I thought the two of you could take the lead in the session, explaining the state's EE policies, status thus far, and the strategy for achieving future goals and targets. Then other stakeholders at the table could respond.

Are you able to attend the conference and participate in this session? If so, is there a good time when I could talk to you so you could help me with the design of this session, and recommendations for other speakers?

Thanks,

Beth

10:15 am - 11:45 am—SESSION 6: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting existing 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals require electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

11:45 am - 1:00 pm—SESSION 7: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What results and trends are apparent from recent auctions and how might the revenue be used to further the goals of the state? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change goals?

Dear Mr. Randolph,

I am writing to invite you to participate, as an observer, in a Roundtable Conference on Energy on Thursday, April 25 and Friday April 26, 2013 at the Silverado Conference Center in Napa, California.

The conference will specifically focus on the next 8 years as we approach the 2020 deadlines for the California Global Warming Solutions Act (AB32). We will convene California Public Utility Commissioners, California Energy Commissioners, state legislators, members of the Governor's cabinet, and senior industry, environmental and labor leaders to explore the challenges California faces as we continue to implement landmark legislation on reducing greenhouse gas emissions, and bold policies designed to increase efficiency and conservation, and encourage renewable energy and distributed generation.

The specific issue areas for discussion are:

- Integration of the 33% Renewables Portfolio Standard
- Implementation of Cap & Trade, and analysis of the progress of the program after the state's first carbon auction in November
- Transmission Development to extend the impact of renewable sources of energy and help California meet its 33% RPS goal
- Distributed Generation, its impact on California energy forecasts, and electricity rate redesign
- Technological innovations enabling innovations for Smart Grids, and greater achievements in Demand Response, and other conservation programs

PIER 35, SUITE 202 SAN FRANCISCO CA 94133
415 788 1786 www.cfee.net FAX 415 986 2227

The agenda, being developed by a joint steering committee of environmental, labor, and senior executives from across the energy industry spectrum, will consist of briefings on the current plans to implement the existing mandates, updates on what progress has been made to date, and moderated discussions of the ongoing roles of the administration, regulatory bodies and the state legislature.

This working agenda, combined with the roundtable, interactive format, is a timely introduction and progress report on what it will take to meet the goals we have already established and who is going do it.

These conferences, sponsored by the participants, are a critical source of funding for CFEE, a nonprofit 501(c)(3) tax-exempt organization. We will send you an invoice for a conference fee of $350, which will be sufficient to cover our cost of your lodging and group meals. You will be responsible for your incidental expenses and travel costs.

Our conference coordinator, Celeste Cremen, will be making your reservations at the Silverado Conference Center and answering any logistical questions you may have. Please contact Celeste at 415-788-0812 to confirm your participation.

I look forward to speaking with you soon.

Sincerely,

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th—TBD

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – TBD

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-1:30 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
A short video will provide basic information regarding California's energy sector and the production and delivery of power in the state.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers

1:30 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

2:45 pm – 4:00 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Chair, California Energy Commission
Jeanne Clinton, Special Advisor to the California Public Utilities Commission

Responders:
Rep, IOU
Rep, MUNI
*Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council
Rep, Industry

Roundtable Discussion

4:00 pm - 5:30 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) Are there examples from outside the state that can inform our response? How does the Distributed Generation policy goal fit with other state policies, e.g. electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Hi Jeanne,

At this year's CFEE roundtable energy conference to be held April 25-26, the steering committee decided that we should do an "energy 101" conference for the new legislators. We've designed the sessions around the loading order, to explain how California has prioritized actions in the energy sector, and the results of this effort, a decade later. We'd like to invite you to speak on Thursday afternoon and the session looks like this:

2:45 pm – 4:00 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? Since Andrew McAllister is the lead Commissioner on the 2013 IEPR, with a focus on energy efficiency, I thought the two of you could take the lead in the session, explaining the state's EE policies, status thus far, and the strategy for achieving future goals and targets. Then other stakeholders at the table could respond.

Are you able to attend the conference and participate in this session? If so, is there a good time when I could talk to you so you could help me with the design of this session, and recommendations for other speakers?

Thanks,

Beth

Hi Carol and Sepideh

As you're probably aware, there is an Energy 101 CFEE conference coming up on 4/25 and 4/26. One of the major topics being discussed is EE. Mark has expressed interest in attending and presenting on that day with newly confirmed(!) Andrew McAllister. Jeanne Clinton has very graciously suggested that a CPUC Commissioner would be a better counterpoint, which is on 4/25 afternoon.

We do have a potential BK problem – which is if both Peevey and Florio wanted to be there the entire day both days. Sepideh - it appears from the draft agenda that Florio is talking only on day 2, 4/26. Is he planning on being there on day 1? Same question to Carol – is Peevey planning on being there the whole time, both days? I think that Mark's preference is to attend as much as possible (since he rarely does CFEE events) but will coordinate as appropriate.

If we can work this out, then I can get back to Beth V. and confirm this!
Thanks

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th—TBD

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – TBD

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-1:30 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
A short video will provide basic information regarding California's energy sector and the production and delivery of power in the state.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers

1:30 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission (5-7 min)
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission (5-7 min)

Roundtable Discussion

2:45 pm – 4:00 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Chair, California Energy Commission
Jeanne Clinton, Special Advisor to the California Public Utilities Commission

Responders:
Rep, IOU
Rep, MUNI
*Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council
Rep, Industry

Roundtable Discussion

4:00 pm - 5:30 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) Are there examples from outside the state that can inform our response? How does the Distributed Generation policy goal fit with other state policies, e.g. electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Michael Picker, Sr. Advisor to the Governor for Renewable Energy Facilities, Office of the Governor

Responders:
Rep, Pacific Gas & Electric
Rep, MUNI
Rep, Enviro
Rep, Industry
Rep, CAISO

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—TBD

Friday, April 26th—TBD

7:30 am - 8:30 am – Continental Breakfast – TBD

8:30 am - 10:00 am—SESSION 5: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What are the costs and benefits involved? As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

Rep, Southern California Edison

Roundtable Discussion

10:00 am - 10:15 am – Break

10:15 am - 11:45 am—SESSION 6: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting existing 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals require electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStasio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
Joe Ronan, Senior VP, Government and Regulatory Affairs, Calpine Corporation
Rep,

Roundtable Discussion

11:45 am - 1:00 pm—SESSION 7: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What results and trends are apparent from recent auctions and how might the revenue be used to further the goals of the state? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change goals?

I spoke with both Beth Vaughn (who's putting together the agenda for CFEE) and with Florio's/Peevey's office, and I think that we are all set. I think that you will go on day 1 and Florio will join for the dinner that night be there for day 2. Peevey will be there for both days. I tried to see if there was a way to have you be there for both days, but alas Peevey said that he was going to do both days.

Regarding advisors, I think that easily 1 can go with and there shouldn't be a problem with more than 1, if desired.

Juliane – the date of day one is 4/25 so we should block that off now.

Thanks!

Hi Jeanne,

At this year's CFEE roundtable energy conference to be held April 25-26, the steering committee decided that we should do an "energy 101" conference for the new legislators. We've designed the sessions around the loading order, to explain how California has prioritized actions in the energy sector, and the results of this effort, a decade later. We'd like to invite you to speak on Thursday afternoon and the session looks like this:

2:45 pm – 4:00 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? Since Andrew McAllister is the lead Commissioner on the 2013 IEPR, with a focus on energy efficiency, I thought the two of you could take the lead in the session, explaining the state's EE policies, status thus far, and the strategy for achieving future goals and targets. Then other stakeholders at the table could respond.

Are you able to attend the conference and participate in this session? If so, is there a good time when I could talk to you so you could help me with the design of this session, and recommendations for other speakers?

Thanks,

Beth

Hi Carol and Sepideh

As you're probably aware, there is an Energy 101 CFEE conference coming up on 4/25 and 4/26. One of the major topics being discussed is EE. Mark has expressed interest in attending and presenting on that day with newly confirmed(!) Andrew McAllister. Jeanne Clinton has very graciously suggested that a CPUC Commissioner would be a better counterpoint, which is on 4/25 afternoon.

We do have a potential BK problem – which is if both Peevey and Florio wanted to be there the entire day both days. Sepideh - it appears from the draft agenda that Florio is talking only on day 2, 4/26. Is he planning on being there on day 1? Same question to Carol – is Peevey planning on being there the whole time, both days? I think that Mark's preference is to attend as much as possible (since he rarely does CFEE events) but will coordinate as appropriate.

If we can work this out, then I can get back to Beth V. and confirm this!
Thanks
Michael

DRAFT AGENDA

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th—TBD

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – TBD

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-1:30 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
A short video will provide basic information regarding California's energy sector and the production and delivery of power in the state.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers

1:30 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission (5-7 min)
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission (5-7 min)

Roundtable Discussion

2:30 pm-2:45 pm – Break

2:45 pm – 4:00 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Chair, California Energy Commission
Jeanne Clinton, Special Advisor to the California Public Utilities Commission

Responders:
Rep, IOU
Rep, MUNI
Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council
Rep, Industry

Roundtable Discussion

4:00 pm - 5:30 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) Are there examples from outside the state that can inform our response? How does the Distributed Generation policy goal fit with other state policies, e.g. electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—TBD

Friday, April 26th—TBD

7:30 am - 8:30 am – Continental Breakfast – TBD

8:30 am - 10:00 am—SESSION 5: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What are the costs and benefits involved? As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

John Chillemi, Senior Vice President and President, West Region, NRG
Rep, Southern California Edison

Roundtable Discussion

10:00 am - 10:15 am – Break

10:15 am - 11:45 am—SESSION 6: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting existing 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals require electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStasio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
Joe Ronan, Senior VP, Government and Regulatory Affairs, Calpine Corporation
Rep,

Roundtable Discussion

11:45 am - 1:00 pm—SESSION 7: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What results and trends are apparent from recent auctions and how might the revenue be used to further the goals of the state? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change goals?

Mark
I spoke with both Beth Vaughn (who's putting together the agenda for CFEE) and with Florio's/Peevey's office, and I think that we are all set. I think that you will go on day 1 and Florio will join for the dinner that night be there for day 2. Peevey will be there for both days. I tried to see if there was a way to have you be there for both days, but alas Peevey said that he was going to do both days.

Regarding advisors, I think that easily 1 can go with and there shouldn't be a problem with more than 1, if desired.

Juliane – the date of day one is 4/25 so we should block that off now.

Thanks!
Michael

Hi Jeanne,

At this year's CFEE roundtable energy conference to be held April 25-26, the steering committee decided that we should do an "energy 101" conference for the new legislators. We've designed the sessions around the loading order, to explain how California has prioritized actions in the energy sector, and the results of this effort, a decade later. We'd like to invite you to speak on Thursday afternoon and the session looks like this:

2:45 pm – 4:00 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response

Since Andrew McAllister is the lead Commissioner on the 2013 IEPR, with a focus on energy efficiency, I thought the two of you could take the lead in the session, explaining the state's EE policies, status thus far, and the strategy for achieving future goals and targets. Then other stakeholders at the table could respond.

Are you able to attend the conference and participate in this session? If so, is there a good time when I could talk to you so you could help me with the design of this session, and recommendations for other speakers?

Thanks,

Beth

Dear Mr. Randolph,

I am writing to invite you to participate, as an observer, in a Roundtable Conference on Energy on Thursday, April 25 and Friday April 26, 2013 at the Silverado Conference Center in Napa, California.

The conference will specifically focus on the next 8 years as we approach the 2020 deadlines for the California Global Warming Solutions Act (AB32). We will convene California Public Utility Commissioners, California Energy Commissioners, state legislators, members of the Governor's cabinet, and senior industry, environmental and labor leaders to explore the challenges California faces as we continue to implement landmark legislation on reducing greenhouse gas emissions, and bold policies designed to increase efficiency and conservation, and encourage renewable energy and distributed generation.

The specific issue areas for discussion are:

- Integration of the 33% Renewables Portfolio Standard
- Implementation of Cap & Trade, and analysis of the progress of the program after the state's first carbon auction in November
- Transmission Development to extend the impact of renewable sources of energy and help California meet its 33% RPS goal
- Distributed Generation, its impact on California energy forecasts, and electricity rate redesign
- Technological innovations enabling innovations for Smart Grids, and greater achievements in Demand Response, and other conservation programs

PIER 35, SUITE 202 SAN FRANCISCO CA 94133
415 788 1786 www.cfee.net FAX 415 986 2227

The agenda, being developed by a joint steering committee of environmental, labor, and senior executives from across the energy industry spectrum, will consist of briefings on the current plans to implement the existing mandates, updates on what progress has been made to date, and moderated discussions of the ongoing roles of the administration, regulatory bodies and the state legislature.

This working agenda, combined with the roundtable, interactive format, is a timely introduction and progress report on what it will take to meet the goals we have already established and who is going do it.

These conferences, sponsored by the participants, are a critical source of funding for CFEE, a nonprofit 501(c)(3) tax-exempt organization. We will send you an invoice for a conference fee of $350, which will be sufficient to cover our cost of your lodging and group meals. You will be responsible for your incidental expenses and travel costs.

Our conference coordinator, Celeste Cremen, will be making your reservations at the Silverado Conference Center and answering any logistical questions you may have. Please contact Celeste at 415-788-0812 to confirm your participation.

I look forward to speaking with you soon.

Sincerely,

Lynn,

Attached is an invite and agenda for a CFEE conference in April that I received. I think you would really benefit from this conference. It looks like a good agenda and there is lots of good networking that goes on (especially at the dinner) that would really benefit you.

I don't go to these anymore unless there the agenda is something that I specifically care about as they tend to repeat themselves over time, but they are a great resource .

If you want to go, and want assistance getting invited let me know.

Mr. Edward Randolph
Director, Energy Division
California Public Utilities Commission
505 Van Ness Ave., Room 4004
San Francisco, CA 94102

Dear Mr. Randolph,

I am writing to invite you to participate, as an observer, in a Roundtable Conference on Energy on Thursday, April 25 and Friday April 26, 2013 at the Silverado Conference Center in Napa, California.

The conference will specifically focus on the next 8 years as we approach the 2020 deadlines for the California Global Warming Solutions Act (AB32). We will convene California Public Utility Commissioners, California Energy Commissioners, state legislators, members of the Governor's cabinet, and senior industry, environmental and labor leaders to explore the challenges California faces as we continue to implement landmark legislation on reducing greenhouse gas emissions, and bold policies designed to increase efficiency and conservation, and encourage renewable energy and distributed generation.

The specific issue areas for discussion are:

- Integration of the 33% Renewables Portfolio Standard
- Implementation of Cap & Trade, and analysis of the progress of the program after the state's first carbon auction in November
- Transmission Development to extend the impact of renewable sources of energy and help California meet its 33% RPS goal
- Distributed Generation, its impact on California energy forecasts, and electricity rate redesign
- Technological innovations enabling innovations for Smart Grids, and greater achievements in Demand Response, and other conservation programs

PIER 35, SUITE 202 SAN FRANCISCO CA 94133
415 788 1786 www.cfee.net FAX 415 986 2227

The agenda, being developed by a joint steering committee of environmental, labor, and senior executives from across the energy industry spectrum, will consist of briefings on the current plans to implement the existing mandates, updates on what progress has been made to date, and moderated discussions of the ongoing roles of the administration, regulatory bodies and the state legislature.

This working agenda, combined with the roundtable, interactive format, is a timely introduction and progress report on what it will take to meet the goals we have already established and who is going do it.

These conferences, sponsored by the participants, are a critical source of funding for CFEE, a nonprofit 501(c)(3) tax-exempt organization. We will send you an invoice for a conference fee of $350, which will be sufficient to cover our cost of your lodging and group meals. You will be responsible for your incidental expenses and travel costs.

Our conference coordinator, Celeste Cremen, will be making your reservations at the Silverado Conference Center and answering any logistical questions you may have. Please contact Celeste at 415-788-0812 to confirm your participation.

I look forward to speaking with you soon.

Sincerely,

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th—TBD

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – TBD

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-1:30 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
A short video will provide basic information regarding California's energy sector and the production and delivery of power in the state.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers

1:30 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission (5-7 min)
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission (5-7 min)

Roundtable Discussion

2:30 pm-2:45 pm – Break

*presenter confirmed

2:45 pm – 4:00 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Chair, California Energy Commission
Jeanne Clinton, Special Advisor to the California Public Utilities Commission

Responders:
Rep, IOU
Rep, MUNI
*Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council
Rep, Industry

Roundtable Discussion

4:00 pm - 5:30 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) Are there examples from outside the state that can inform our response? How does the Distributed Generation policy goal fit with other state policies, e.g. electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Michael Picker, Sr. Advisor to the Governor for Renewable Energy Facilities, Office of the Governor

Responders:
Rep, Pacific Gas & Electric
Rep, MUNI
Rep, Enviro
Rep, Industry
Rep, CAISO

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—TBD

Friday, April 26th—TBD

7:30 am - 8:30 am – Continental Breakfast – TBD

8:30 am - 10:00 am—SESSION 5: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What

*presenter confirmed

are the costs and benefits involved? As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

Stephen Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator
Mike Florio, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
John Chillemi, Senior Vice President and President, West Region, NRG
Rep, Southern California Edison

Roundtable Discussion

10:00 am - 10:15 am – Break

10:15 am - 11:45 am—SESSION 6: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting existing 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals require electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStasio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
Joe Ronan, Senior VP, Government and Regulatory Affairs, Calpine Corporation
Rep,

Roundtable Discussion

11:45 am - 1:00 pm—SESSION 7: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What results and trends are apparent from recent auctions and how might the revenue be used to further the goals of the state? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change goals?

Mary Nichols, Chairman, Air Resources Board
Rep, Electricity producer
Rep, Manufacturer (EITE)
Rep, Manufacturer (non-EITE)

Mr. Chaset,
Attached please find your invitation to our 2013 Roundtable Conference on Energy, sent at the suggestion of Cliff Rechtschaffen.
We were given the State Capitol as your address, but since that is not the case, it was returned to us today.

Please advise how we can contact you to follow up as the conference and agenda develops.

Thank you,

Joan Lynch

Hi Carol and Sepideh

As you're probably aware, there is an Energy 101 CFEE conference coming up on 4/25 and 4/26. One of the major topics being discussed is EE. Mark has expressed interest in attending and presenting on that day with newly confirmed(!) Andrew McAllister. Jeanne Clinton has very graciously suggested that a CPUC Commissioner would be a better counterpoint, which is on 4/25 afternoon.

We do have a potential BK problem – which is if both Peevey and Florio wanted to be there the entire day both days. Sepideh - it appears from the draft agenda that Florio is talking only on day 2, 4/26. Is he planning on being there on day 1? Same question to Carol – is Peevey planning on being there the whole time, both days? I think that Mark's preference is to attend as much as possible (since he rarely does CFEE events) but will coordinate as appropriate.

If we can work this out, then I can get back to Beth V. and confirm this!
Thanks
Michael

I was approached by CFEE to be on EE panel, but I suggested they instead seek out Mark Ferron, which is now "done".
I also have spent some time counseling the CFEE panel organizer on other discussants for that panel, emerging issues, ...
CFEE still invites me to attend as observer. Are you OK with this?

Dear Mr. Ferron,

I am writing to invite you to participate in a Roundtable Conference on Energy on Thursday, April 25 and Friday April 26, 2013 at the Silverado Conference Center in Napa, California.

The conference will specifically focus on the next 8 years as we approach the 2020 deadlines for the California Global Warming Solutions Act (AB32). We will convene California Public Utility Commissioners, California Energy Commissioners, state legislators, members of the Governor's cabinet, and senior industry, environmental and labor leaders to explore the challenges California faces as we continue to implement landmark legislation on reducing greenhouse gas emissions, and bold policies designed to increase efficiency and conservation, and encourage renewable energy and distributed generation.

The specific issue areas for discussion are:

- Integration of the 33% Renewables Portfolio Standard
- Implementation of Cap & Trade, and analysis of the progress of the program after the state's first carbon auction in November
- Transmission Development to extend the impact of renewable sources of energy and help California meet its 33% RPS goal
- Distributed Generation, its impact on California energy forecasts, and electricity rate redesign
- Technological innovations enabling innovations for Smart Grids, and greater achievements in Demand Response, and other conservation programs

PIER 35, SUITE 202 SAN FRANCISCO CA 94133
415 788 1786 www.cfee.net FAX 415 986 2227

The agenda, being developed by a joint steering committee of environmental, labor, and senior executives from across the energy industry spectrum, will consist of briefings on the current plans to implement the existing mandates, updates on what progress has been made to date, and moderated discussions of the ongoing roles of the administration, regulatory bodies and the state legislature.

This working agenda, combined with the roundtable, interactive format, is a timely introduction and progress report on what it will take to meet the goals we have already established and who is going do it.

These conferences, sponsored by the participants, are a critical source of funding for CFEE, a nonprofit 501(c)(3) tax-exempt organization. We will send you an invoice for a conference fee of $350, which will be sufficient to cover our cost of your lodging and group meals. You will be responsible for your incidental expenses and travel costs.

Our conference coordinator, Celeste Cremen, will be making your reservations at the Silverado Conference Center and answering any logistical questions you may have. Please contact Celeste at 415-788-0812 to confirm your participation.

I look forward to speaking with you soon.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Ferron,

I am writing to invite you to participate in a Roundtable Conference on Energy on Thursday, April 25 and Friday April 26, 2013 at the Silverado Conference Center in Napa, California.

The conference will specifically focus on the next 8 years as we approach the 2020 deadlines for the California Global Warming Solutions Act (AB32). We will convene California Public Utility Commissioners, California Energy Commissioners, state legislators, members of the Governor's cabinet, and senior industry, environmental and labor leaders to explore the challenges California faces as we continue to implement landmark legislation on reducing greenhouse gas emissions, and bold policies designed to increase efficiency and conservation, and encourage renewable energy and distributed generation.

The specific issue areas for discussion are:

- Integration of the 33% Renewables Portfolio Standard
- Implementation of Cap & Trade, and analysis of the progress of the program after the state's first carbon auction in November
- Transmission Development to extend the impact of renewable sources of energy and help California meet its 33% RPS goal
- Distributed Generation, its impact on California energy forecasts, and electricity rate redesign
- Technological innovations enabling innovations for Smart Grids, and greater achievements in Demand Response, and other conservation programs

PIER 35, SUITE 202 SAN FRANCISCO CA 94133
415 788 1786 www.cfee.net FAX 415 986 2227

The agenda, being developed by a joint steering committee of environmental, labor, and senior executives from across the energy industry spectrum, will consist of briefings on the current plans to implement the existing mandates, updates on what progress has been made to date, and moderated discussions of the ongoing roles of the administration, regulatory bodies and the state legislature.

This working agenda, combined with the roundtable, interactive format, is a timely introduction and progress report on what it will take to meet the goals we have already established and who is going do it.

These conferences, sponsored by the participants, are a critical source of funding for CFEE, a nonprofit 501(c)(3) tax-exempt organization. We will send you an invoice for a conference fee of $350, which will be sufficient to cover our cost of your lodging and group meals. You will be responsible for your incidental expenses and travel costs.

Our conference coordinator, Celeste Cremen, will be making your reservations at the Silverado Conference Center and answering any logistical questions you may have. Please contact Celeste at 415-788-0812 to confirm your participation.

I look forward to speaking with you soon.

Sincerely,

Patrick F. Mason

Hi Jeanne,

You mentioned Johnson Controls as being an interesting participant for the CFEE conference and the energy efficiency panel. I think you said Clay Nessler, VP Global Energy and Sustainability is a good speaker and may be based locally. Could you send me his contact information and maybe do an introductory email for us? Pat and I would like to set up a conference call with him to talk about the roundtable.

Clay -- First, thanks again for your participation last October in the Governor's Office Energy Efficiency "Big Think" forum.
I am writing to make an introduction for you to some folks at "CFEE" who organize forums with lucrative audiences. (:>) I've pitched the idea of your being invited to represent the EE services delivery business point of view at the upcoming "Energy 101" 2-day forum. This particular forum is targeted at orienting the State's new group of legislators (Assembly and Senate) to energy issues likely to make their way into California's legislative chambers. However, there will be many heavy hitters also attending from CA legislature, utilities, energy agencies, and advocates.

For your information, CFEE is a small non-profit organization that specializes in education, cross-organization communication, and travel-study forums to increase knowledge of technical and policy issues facing regulated industries in California. The CFEE web site can be found at: http://www.cfee.net/

Specifically, there is a session the first day of their upcoming conference, on April 25-26, on which I think your perspective could be extremely valuable. I have suggested you be one of the invited discussants, and specifically to represent the view of the EE services industry. Pat Mason and Beth Vaughn of CFEE would like to talk directly to you about this possibility. I just want to offer you a few words of context and introduction by this e-mail. I expect Beth or Pat will be in touch shortly.

best regards,

What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? I think you said Clay Nessler, VP Global Energy and Sustainability is a good speaker. Could you send me his contact information and maybe do an introductory email for us? Pat and I would like to set up a conference call with him to talk about the roundtable.

DRAFT AGENDA

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th—TBD

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – TBD

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-1:30 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
A short video will provide basic information regarding California's energy sector and the production and delivery of power in the state.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers

1:30 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission (5-7 min)
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission (5-7 min)

Roundtable Discussion

2:30 pm-2:45 pm – Break

2:45 pm – 4:00 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Chair, California Energy Commission
Jeanne Clinton, Special Advisor to the California Public Utilities Commission

Responders:
Rep, IOU
Rep, MUNI
Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council
Rep, Industry

Roundtable Discussion

4:00 pm - 5:30 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) Are there examples from outside the state that can inform our response? How does the Distributed Generation policy goal fit with other state policies, e.g. electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Michael Picker, Sr. Advisor to the Governor for Renewable Energy Facilities, Office of the Governor

Mark
I spoke with both Beth Vaughn (who's putting together the agenda for CFEE) and with Florio's/Peevey's office, and I think that we are all set. I think that you will go on day 1 and Florio will join for the dinner that night be there for day 2. Peevey will be there for both days. I tried to see if there was a way to have you be there for both days, but alas Peevey said that he was going to do both days.

Regarding advisors, I think that easily 1 can go with and there shouldn't be a problem with more than 1, if desired.

Juliane – the date of day one is 4/25 so we should block that off now.

Thanks!
Michael

Hi Jeanne,

At this year's CFEE roundtable energy conference to be held April 25-26, the steering committee decided that we should do an "energy 101" conference for the new legislators. We've designed the sessions around the loading order, to explain how California has prioritized actions in the energy sector, and the results of this effort, a decade later. We'd like to invite you to speak on Thursday afternoon and the session looks like this:

2:45 pm – 4:00 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Roundtable Discussion

Since Andrew McAllister is the lead Commissioner on the 2013 IEPR, with a focus on energy efficiency, I thought the two of you could take the lead in the session, explaining the state's EE policies, status thus far, and the strategy for achieving future goals and targets. Then other stakeholders at the table could respond.

Are you able to attend the conference and participate in this session? If so, is there a good time when I could talk to you so you could help me with the design of this session, and recommendations for other speakers?

Thanks,

Beth

Mr. Edward Randolph

Dear Mr. Randolph,

I am writing to invite you to participate, as an observer, in a Roundtable Conference on Energy on Thursday, April 25 and Friday April 26, 2013 at the Silverado Conference Center in Napa, California.

The conference will specifically focus on the next 8 years as we approach the 2020 deadlines for the California Global Warming Solutions Act (AB32). We will convene California Public Utility Commissioners, California Energy Commissioners, state legislators, members of the Governor's cabinet, and senior industry, environmental and labor leaders to explore the challenges California faces as we continue to implement landmark legislation on reducing greenhouse gas emissions, and bold policies designed to increase efficiency and conservation, and encourage renewable energy and distributed generation.

The specific issue areas for discussion are:

- Integration of the 33% Renewables Portfolio Standard
- Implementation of Cap & Trade, and analysis of the progress of the program after the state's first carbon auction in November
- Transmission Development to extend the impact of renewable sources of energy and help California meet its 33% RPS goal
- Distributed Generation, its impact on California energy forecasts, and electricity rate redesign
- Technological innovations enabling innovations for Smart Grids, and greater achievements in Demand Response, and other conservation programs

PIER 35, SUITE 202 SAN FRANCISCO CA 94133
415 788 1786 www.cfee.net FAX 415 986 2227

The agenda, being developed by a joint steering committee of environmental, labor, and senior executives from across the energy industry spectrum, will consist of briefings on the current plans to implement the existing mandates, updates on what progress has been made to date, and moderated discussions of the ongoing roles of the administration, regulatory bodies and the state legislature.

This working agenda, combined with the roundtable, interactive format, is a timely introduction and progress report on what it will take to meet the goals we have already established and who is going do it.

These conferences, sponsored by the participants, are a critical source of funding for CFEE, a nonprofit 501(c)(3) tax-exempt organization. We will send you an invoice for a conference fee of $350, which will be sufficient to cover our cost of your lodging and group meals. You will be responsible for your incidental expenses and travel costs.

Our conference coordinator, Celeste Cremen, will be making your reservations at the Silverado Conference Center and answering any logistical questions you may have. Please contact Celeste at 415-788-0812 to confirm your participation.

I look forward to speaking with you soon.

Sincerely,

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th—TBD

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – TBD

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-1:30 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
A short video will provide basic information regarding California's energy sector and the production and delivery of power in the state.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers

1:30 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Roundtable Discussion

4:00 pm - 5:30 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) Are there examples from outside the state that can inform our response? How does the Distributed Generation policy goal fit with other state policies, e.g. electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Mr. Edward Randolph
Director, Energy Division
California Public Utilities Commission
505 Van Ness Ave., Room 4004
San Francisco, CA 94102

Dear Mr. Randolph,

I am writing to invite you to participate, as an observer, in a Roundtable Conference on Energy on Thursday, April 25 and Friday April 26, 2013 at the Silverado Conference Center in Napa, California.

The conference will specifically focus on the next 8 years as we approach the 2020 deadlines for the California Global Warming Solutions Act (AB32). We will convene California Public Utility Commissioners, California Energy Commissioners, state legislators, members of the Governor's cabinet, and senior industry, environmental and labor leaders to explore the challenges California faces as we continue to implement landmark legislation on reducing greenhouse gas emissions, and bold policies designed to increase efficiency and conservation, and encourage renewable energy and distributed generation.

The specific issue areas for discussion are:

- Integration of the 33% Renewables Portfolio Standard
- Implementation of Cap & Trade, and analysis of the progress of the program after the state's first carbon auction in November
- Transmission Development to extend the impact of renewable sources of energy and help California meet its 33% RPS goal
- Distributed Generation, its impact on California energy forecasts, and electricity rate redesign
- Technological innovations enabling innovations for Smart Grids, and greater achievements in Demand Response, and other conservation programs

PIER 35, SUITE 202 SAN FRANCISCO CA 94133
415 788 1786 www.cfee.net FAX 415 986 2227

The agenda, being developed by a joint steering committee of environmental, labor, and senior executives from across the energy industry spectrum, will consist of briefings on the current plans to implement the existing mandates, updates on what progress has been made to date, and moderated discussions of the ongoing roles of the administration, regulatory bodies and the state legislature.

This working agenda, combined with the roundtable, interactive format, is a timely introduction and progress report on what it will take to meet the goals we have already established and who is going do it.

These conferences, sponsored by the participants, are a critical source of funding for CFEE, a nonprofit 501(c)(3) tax-exempt organization. We will send you an invoice for a conference fee of $350, which will be sufficient to cover our cost of your lodging and group meals. You will be responsible for your incidental expenses and travel costs.

Our conference coordinator, Celeste Cremen, will be making your reservations at the Silverado Conference Center and answering any logistical questions you may have. Please contact Celeste at 415-788-0812 to confirm your participation.

I look forward to speaking with you soon.

Sincerely,

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th—TBD

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – TBD

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-1:30 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
A short video will provide basic information regarding California's energy sector and the production and delivery of power in the state.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers

1:30 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission (5-7 min)
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission (5-7 min)

Roundtable Discussion

2:30 pm-2:45 pm – Break

*presenter confirmed

2:45 pm – 4:00 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Chair, California Energy Commission
Jeanne Clinton, Special Advisor to the California Public Utilities Commission

Responders:
Rep, IOU
Rep, MUNI
*Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council
Rep, Industry

Roundtable Discussion

4:00 pm - 5:30 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) Are there examples from outside the state that can inform our response? How does the Distributed Generation policy goal fit with other state policies, e.g. electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Michael Picker, Sr. Advisor to the Governor for Renewable Energy Facilities, Office of the Governor

Responders:
Rep, Pacific Gas & Electric
Rep, MUNI
Rep, Enviro
Rep, Industry
Rep, CAISO

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—TBD

Friday, April 26th—TBD

7:30 am - 8:30 am – Continental Breakfast – TBD

8:30 am - 10:00 am—SESSION 5: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What

*presenter confirmed

are the costs and benefits involved? As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

Stephen Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator
*Mike Florio, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
John Chillemi, Senior Vice President and President, West Region, NRG
Rep, Southern California Edison

Roundtable Discussion

10:00 am - 10:15 am – Break

10:15 am - 11:45 am—SESSION 6: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting existing 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals require electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStasio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
Joe Ronan, Senior VP, Government and Regulatory Affairs, Calpine Corporation
Rep,

Roundtable Discussion

11:45 am - 1:00 pm—SESSION 7: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What results and trends are apparent from recent auctions and how might the revenue be used to further the goals of the state? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change goals?

Mary Nichols, Chairman, Air Resources Board
Rep, Electricity producer
Rep, Manufacturer (EITE)
Rep, Manufacturer (non-EITE)

DRAFT AGENDA

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th—

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – Fairway Deck

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction – Silverado West Ballroom

Patrick F. Mason,* President, CFEE

1:15 pm-2:00 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
How California's energy sector produces and delivers power in the state, including the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid.

Jan Smutny-Jones,* Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers
Steve Berberich*, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

2:00 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey*, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Bob Weisenmiller,* Chair, California Energy Commission

Roundtable Discussion

*presenter confirmed

2:30 pm – 3:30 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister,* Commissioner, California Energy Commission
Mark Ferron,* Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
Ron Nichols,* General Manager, Los Angeles Department of Water and Power
Sheryl Carter,* Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council
Clay Nesler,* Vice President, Global Energy & Sustainability, Johnson Controls

Roundtable Discussion

3:30 pm-3:45 pm – Break

3:45 pm - 5:15 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) How does the Distributed Generation policy goal fit with other state policies, e.g. electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Nick Chaset,* Governor's Special Advisor for DG, CHP and Energy Storage
Adrienne Alvord, Director, California and Western States, Union of Concerned Scientists
Dan Skopec,* VP, Regulatory & Legislative Affairs, Sempra Energy Utilities
Tom Starrs, VP, Market Development and Policy, Sunpower

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—TBD

Friday, April 26th—Silverado West Ballroom

7:30 am - 8:30 am – Continental Breakfast

8:30 am - 9:45 am—SESSION 5: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
How do agencies coordinate and align sometimes conflicting policies? What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change and energy goals?

Mary Nichols*, Chairman, Air Resources Board
Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission

*presenter confirmed

*Steve Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

Roundtable Discussion

9:45 am - 11:00 am—SESSION 6: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What are the costs and benefits involved? As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

*Mike Florio, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
*John Chillemi, Senior Vice President and President, West Region, NRG
Stuart Hemphill, Senior VP, Power Supply, Southern California Edison
Fong Wan, Senior VP, Energy Procurement, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

11:00 am - 11:15 am – Break

11:15 am - 12:30 pm—SESSION 7: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting our 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals requires electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

Michael Gianunzio, Director Legislative and Regulatory Affairs,
Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
Heather Sanders, Director, Smart Grid Technologies and Strategies, CAISO
Wade Crowfoot, Deputy Director, Office of Planning and Research
Tom Bottorff, Senior VP, Regulatory Relations, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

Mr. Nicolas Chaset
Special Advisor to the Governor for DG, CHP & Energy Storage
Office of the Governor
State Capitol
Sacramento, CA 95814

Dear Mr. Chaset,

I am writing to invite you to participate in a Roundtable Conference on Energy on Thursday, April 25 and Friday April 26, 2013 at the Silverado Conference Center in Napa, California.

The conference will specifically focus on the next 8 years as we approach the 2020 deadlines for the California Global Warming Solutions Act (AB32). We will convene California Public Utility Commissioners, California Energy Commissioners, state legislators, members of the Governor's cabinet, and senior industry, environmental and labor leaders to explore the challenges California faces as we continue to implement landmark legislation on reducing greenhouse gas emissions, and bold policies designed to increase efficiency and conservation, and encourage renewable energy and distributed generation.

The specific issue areas for discussion are:

- Integration of the 33% Renewables Portfolio Standard
- Implementation of Cap & Trade, and analysis of the progress of the program after the state's first carbon auction in November
- Transmission Development to extend the impact of renewable sources of energy and help California meet its 33% RPS goal
- Distributed Generation, its impact on California energy forecasts, and electricity rate redesign
- Technological innovations enabling innovations for Smart Grids, and greater achievements in Demand Response, and other conservation programs

PIER 35, SUITE 202 SAN FRANCISCO CA 94133
415 788 1786 www.cfee.net FAX 415 986 2227

The agenda, being developed by a joint steering committee of environmental, labor, and senior executives from across the energy industry spectrum, will consist of briefings on the current plans to implement the existing mandates, updates on what progress has been made to date, and moderated discussions of the ongoing roles of the administration, regulatory bodies and the state legislature.

This working agenda, combined with the roundtable, interactive format, is a timely introduction and progress report on what it will take to meet the goals we have already established and who is going do it.

The Foundation, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization, will sponsor your room and group meals. You will be responsible for incidental expenses and travel.

Our conference coordinator, Celeste Cremen, will be making your reservations at the Silverado Conference Center and answering any logistical questions you may have. Please contact Celeste at 415-788-0812 to confirm your participation.

I look forward to speaking with you soon.

Sincerely,

Patrick F. Mason

The agenda, being developed by a joint steering committee of environmental, labor, and senior executives from across the energy industry spectrum, will consist of briefings on the current plans to implement the existing mandates, updates on what progress has been made to date, and moderated discussions of the ongoing roles of the administration, regulatory bodies and the state legislature.

This working agenda, combined with the roundtable, interactive format, is a timely introduction and progress report on what it will take to meet the goals we have already established and who is going do it.

These conferences, sponsored by the participants, are a critical source of funding for CFEE, a nonprofit 501(c)(3) tax-exempt organization. We will send you an invoice for a conference fee of $350, which will be sufficient to cover our cost of your lodging and group meals. You will be responsible for your incidental expenses and travel costs.

Our conference coordinator, Celeste Cremen, will be making your reservations at the Silverado Conference Center and answering any logistical questions you may have. Please contact Celeste at 415-788-0812 to confirm your participation.

I look forward to speaking with you soon.

Sincerely,

Patrick F. Mason

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th—Silverado West Ballroom

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – Fairway Deck

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcomeand Introduction – Silverado West Ballroom

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-2:00pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
How California's energy sector produces and deliverspower in the state, including the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers
SteveBerberich,President &CEO, California Independent System Operator

2:00 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologicallyadvanced, and environmentally-sound.The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter.Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission

Roundtable Discussion

*presenter confirmed

2:30 pm –3:30 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Commissioner, California Energy Commission
Mark Ferron, Commissioner,California Public Utilities Commission
Ron Nichols, General Manager,Los Angeles Department of Water and Power
Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council
Clay Nesler,Vice President, Global Energy & Sustainability, Johnson Controls

Roundtable Discussion

3:30 pm-3:45pm– Break

3:45 pm - 5:15 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g.How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?)How does the Distributed Generation policy goal fit with other state policies, e.g. electrification and energy storage policies?What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Nick Chaset, Governor's Special Advisor for DG, CHP and Energy Storage
Adrienne Alvord, Director, California and Western States, Union of Concerned Scientists
Dan Skopec, VP, Regulatory & Legislative Affairs, Sempra Energy Utilities
Tom Starrs, VP, Market Development and Policy, Sunpower

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—TBD

Friday, April 26th—Silverado West Ballroom

7:30 am -8:30 am – ContinentalBreakfast

8:30 am - 9:45 am—SESSION 5: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
How do agencies coordinate and align sometimes conflicting policies? What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change and energy goals?

Mary Nichols, Chairman, Air Resources Board
Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission

*presenter confirmed

Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission
*SteveBerberich,President &CEO, California Independent System Operator

Roundtable Discussion

9:45 am -11:00 am—SESSION 6: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What are the costs and benefits involved?As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

*Mike Florio, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
*John Chillemi, Senior Vice President and President, West Region, NRG
Stuart Hemphill, Senior VP, Power Supply, Southern California Edison
Fong Wan, Senior VP, Energy Procurement, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

11:00 am -11:15 am – Break

11:15 am -12:30pm—SESSION 7: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting our 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals requires electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStacio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
Heather Sanders,Director, Smart Grid Technologies and Strategies, CAISO
Wade Crowfoot,Deputy Director, Office of Planning and Research
Tom Bottorff, Senior VP, Regulatory Relations, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

12:30 pm –Closing Remarks

Hi there
I'm joining a call on Ferron's behalf on Friday morning at 10:30 to discuss topics for the CFEE 101. Perhaps you would like to join in? If not, maybe we could touch base later Friday afternoon.

Regarding the 4/24 meeting with Cliff, Mark agreed that we should reschedule it so that hopefully both of us can attend the PG&E event. Juliane will contact Cliff later on today to cancel/reschedule to a more generic check in.

Hi there
I'm joining a call on Ferron's behalf on Friday morning at 10:30 to discuss topics for the CFEE 101. Perhaps you would like to join in? If not, maybe we could touch base later Friday afternoon.

Regarding the 4/24 meeting with Cliff, Mark agreed that we should reschedule it so that hopefully both of us can attend the PG&E event. Juliane will contact Cliff later on today to cancel/reschedule to a more generic check in.

Hi Carol,

I was working on the CFEE energy agenda with Nancy Ryan, but since she's no longer at the CPUC I thought I'd contact you regarding the agenda and sessions we'd like President Peevey to participate on.

The objective of the conference is to educate the new legislators on the basics of energy policy in California, and explain the interdependencies between the complex issues. We thought the best way to discuss the issues was to frame the discussion around the loading order. In the first session I have Jan Smutny-Jones and Steve Berberich both showing short videos describing California's energy sector, and the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid. Nancy and I thought Peevey and Weisenmiller could provide a little history, to explain the evolution of energy policy post-energy crisis, and then the sessions walk thru the loading order.

McAllister and Ferron will lead off the Energy Efficiency session, followed by a panel focusing on Renewables and DG. Then on Friday, we'd like the "energy principals" to talk about aligning energy and climate policy – showing that there is a great deal of coordination between the agencies. Mary Nichols has the ARB Board meeting on Thursday but will arrive Thursday night for dinner – consequently this panel would kick off the Friday discussions. This will be followed by a session on the role of fossil fuel generation, how that is changing, and the inherent challenges. Finally, we'll look ahead at the goals for 2050 and discuss how the electricity industry can evolve to meet those goals.

I think Nancy spoke to Mike back in January about the conference and specifically having him speak on Thursday. I don't believe she had a chance to show him the updated agenda and talk to him about being on the Friday morning session.

Could you please show him the updated agenda and participant list? If he's okay participating on these two panels, I'd like to set up a call to discuss it with him and Pat Mason.

Thanks for checking, and I'd be happy to discuss this with you over the phone – just call my cell anytime.

Thanks,

Beth

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th—Silverado West Ballroom

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – Fairway Deck

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcomeand Introduction – Silverado West Ballroom

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-2:00pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
How California's energy sector produces and deliverspower in the state, including the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers
SteveBerberich,President &CEO, California Independent System Operator

2:00 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologicallyadvanced, and environmentally-sound.The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter.Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission

Roundtable Discussion

*presenter confirmed

2:30 pm –3:30 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Commissioner, California Energy Commission
Mark Ferron, Commissioner,California Public Utilities Commission
Ron Nichols, General Manager,Los Angeles Department of Water and Power
Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council
Kevin Evans,Vice President and General Manager, Integrated Demand Resources, Building Efficiency, Johnson Controls

Roundtable Discussion

3:30 pm-3:45pm– Break

3:45 pm - 5:15 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g.How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?)How does the Distributed Generation policy goal fit with other state policies, e.g. electrification and energy storage policies?What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Nick Chaset, Governor's Special Advisor for DG, CHP and Energy Storage
Laura Wisland, Senior Energy Analyst, Union of Concerned Scientists
Dan Skopec, VP, Regulatory & Legislative Affairs, Sempra Energy Utilities
Tom Starrs, VP, Market Development and Policy, Sunpower

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—TBD

Friday, April 26th—Silverado West Ballroom

7:30 am -8:30 am – ContinentalBreakfast

8:30 am - 9:45 am—SESSION 5: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
How do agencies coordinate and align sometimes conflicting policies? What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change and energy goals?

Roundtable Discussion

9:45 am -11:00 am—SESSION 6: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What are the costs and benefits involved?As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

11:00 am -11:15 am – Break

11:15 am -12:30pm—SESSION 7: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting our 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals requires electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

Hi Carol,

I was working on the CFEE energy agenda with Nancy Ryan, but since she's no longer at the CPUC I thought I'd contact you regarding the agenda and sessions we'd like President Peevey to participate on.

The objective of the conference is to educate the new legislators on the basics of energy policy in California, and explain the interdependencies between the complex issues. We thought the best way to discuss the issues was to frame the discussion around the loading order. In the first session I have Jan Smutny-Jones and Steve Berberich both showing short videos describing California's energy sector, and the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid. Nancy and I thought Peevey and Weisenmiller could provide a little history, to explain the evolution of energy policy post-energy crisis, and then the sessions walk thru the loading order.

McAllister and Ferron will lead off the Energy Efficiency session, followed by a panel focusing on Renewables and DG. Then on Friday, we'd like the "energy principals" to talk about aligning energy and climate policy – showing that there is a great deal of coordination between the agencies. Mary Nichols has the ARB Board meeting on Thursday but will arrive Thursday night for dinner – consequently this panel would kick off the Friday discussions. This will be followed by a session on the role of fossil fuel generation, how that is changing, and the inherent challenges. Finally, we'll look ahead at the goals for 2050 and discuss how the electricity industry can evolve to meet those goals.

I think Nancy spoke to Mike back in January about the conference and specifically having him speak on Thursday. I don't believe she had a chance to show him the updated agenda and talk to him about being on the Friday morning session.

Could you please show him the updated agenda and participant list? If he's okay participating on these two panels, I'd like to set up a call to discuss it with him and Pat Mason.

Thanks for checking, and I'd be happy to discuss this with you over the phone – just call my cell anytime.

Thanks,

Beth

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th— Silverado West Ballroom

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – Fairway Deck

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction – Silverado West Ballroom

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-2:00 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
How California's energy sector produces and delivers power in the state, including the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers
Steve Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

2:00 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission

Roundtable Discussion

*presenter confirmed

2:30 pm – 3:30 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Commissioner, California Energy Commission
Mark Ferron, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
Ron Nichols, General Manager, Los Angeles Department of Water and Power
Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council
Kevin Evans, Vice President and General Manager, Integrated Demand Resources, Building Efficiency, Johnson Controls

Roundtable Discussion

3:30 pm-3:45 pm – Break

3:45 pm - 5:15 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) How does the Distributed Generation policy goal fit with other state policies, e.g. electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Nick Chaset, Governor's Special Advisor for DG, CHP and Energy Storage
Laura Wisland, Senior Energy Analyst, Union of Concerned Scientists
Dan Skopec, VP, Regulatory & Legislative Affairs, Sempra Energy Utilities
Tom Starrs, VP, Market Development and Policy, Sunpower

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—TBD

Friday, April 26th—Silverado West Ballroom

7:30 am - 8:30 am – Continental Breakfast

8:30 am - 9:45 am—SESSION 5: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
How do agencies coordinate and align sometimes conflicting policies? What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change and energy goals?

Roundtable Discussion

9:45 am - 11:00 am—SESSION 6: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What are the costs and benefits involved? As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

In the first session I have Jan Smutny-Jones and Steve Berberich both showing short videos describing California's energy sector, and the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid. Nancy and I thought Peevey and Weisenmiller could provide a little history, to explain the evolution of energy policy post-energy crisis, and then the sessions walk thru the loading order.

McAllister and Ferron will lead off the Energy Efficiency session, followed by a panel focusing on Renewables and DG. Then on Friday, we'd like the "energy principals" to talk about aligning energy and climate policy – showing that there is a great deal of coordination between the agencies. Mary Nichols has the ARB Board meeting on Thursday but will arrive Thursday night for dinner – consequently this panel would kick off the Friday discussions. This will be followed by a session on the role of fossil fuel generation, how that is changing, and the inherent challenges. Finally, we'll look ahead at the goals for 2050 and discuss how the electricity industry can evolve to meet those goals.

I think Nancy spoke to Mike back in January about the conference and specifically having him speak on Thursday. I don't believe she had a chance to show him the updated agenda and talk to him about being on the Friday morning session.

Could you please show him the updated agenda and participant list? If he's okay participating on these two panels, I'd like to set up a call to discuss it with him and Pat Mason.

Thanks for checking, and I'd be happy to discuss this with you over the phone – just call my cell anytime.

Thanks,

Beth

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th—Silverado West Ballroom

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – Fairway Deck

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcomeand Introduction – Silverado West Ballroom

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-2:00pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
How California's energy sector produces and deliverspower in the state, including the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers
SteveBerberich,President &CEO, California Independent System Operator

2:00 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologicallyadvanced, and environmentally-sound.The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter.Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission

Roundtable Discussion

*presenter confirmed

2:30 pm –3:30 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Commissioner, California Energy Commission
Mark Ferron, Commissioner,California Public Utilities Commission
Ron Nichols, General Manager,Los Angeles Department of Water and Power
Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council
Kevin Evans, Vice President and General Manager, Integrated Demand Resources, Building Efficiency, Johnson Controls

Roundtable Discussion

3:30 pm-3:45pm– Break

3:45 pm - 5:15 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g.How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?)How does the renewable energy policy goals fit with other state policies, e.g. vehicle electrification and energy storage policies?What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Nick Chaset, Governor's Special Advisor for DG, CHP and Energy Storage
Laura Wisland, Senior Energy Analyst, Union of Concerned Scientists
Jim Avery, SeniorVP, Power Supply, Sempra Energy Utilities
Tom Starrs, VP, Market Development and Policy, SunPower Corporation

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—Merryvale Vineyards

Friday, April 26th—Silverado West Ballroom

7:30 am -8:30 am – ContinentalBreakfast

8:30 am - 9:45 am—SESSION 5: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
How do agencies coordinate and align sometimes conflicting policies? What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change and energy goals?

Mary Nichols, Chairman, Air Resources Board
Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission

*presenter confirmed

Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission
SteveBerberich,President &CEO, California Independent System Operator

Roundtable Discussion

9:45 am -11:00 am—SESSION 6: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What are the costs and benefits involved?As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

Mike Florio, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
John Chillemi, Senior Vice President and President, West Region, NRG
Stuart Hemphill, Senior VP, Power Supply, Southern California Edison
Fong Wan, Senior VP, Energy Procurement, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

11:00 am -11:15 am – Break

11:15 am -12:30pm—SESSION 7: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting our 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals requires electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStasio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
Heather Sanders,Director, Smart Grid Technologies and Strategies, CAISO
Wade Crowfoot,Deputy Director, Governor's Office of Planning and Research
Aaron Johnson, Senior Director, Customer Programs, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

Subject: CFEE Energy Roundtable - April 25-26

Hi Carol,

I was working on the CFEE energy agenda with Nancy Ryan, but since she's no longer at the CPUC I thought I'd contact you regarding the agenda and sessions we'd like President Peevey to participate on.

The objective of the conference is to educate the new legislators on the basics of energy policy in California, and explain the interdependencies between the complex issues. We thought the best way to discuss the issues was to frame the discussion around the loading order. In the first session I have Jan Smutny-Jones and Steve Berberich both showing short videos describing California's energy sector, and the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid. Nancy and I thought Peevey and Weisenmiller could provide a little history, to explain the evolution of energy policy post-energy crisis, and then the sessions walk thru the loading order.

McAllister and Ferron will lead off the Energy Efficiency session, followed by a panel focusing on Renewables and DG. Then on Friday, we'd like the "energy principals" to talk about aligning energy and climate policy – showing that there is a great deal of coordination between the agencies. Mary Nichols has the ARB Board meeting on Thursday but will arrive Thursday night for dinner – consequently this panel would kick off the Friday discussions. This will be followed by a session on the role of fossil fuel generation, how that is changing, and the inherent challenges. Finally, we'll look ahead at the goals for 2050 and discuss how the electricity industry can evolve to meet those goals.

I think Nancy spoke to Mike back in January about the conference and specifically having him speak on Thursday. I don't believe she had a chance to show him the updated agenda and talk to him about being on the Friday morning session.

Could you please show him the updated agenda and participant list? If he's okay participating on these two panels, I'd like to set up a call to discuss it with him and Pat Mason.

Thanks for checking, and I'd be happy to discuss this with you over the phone – just call my cell anytime.

Thanks,

Beth

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th—Silverado West Ballroom

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – Fairway Deck

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcomeand Introduction – Silverado West Ballroom

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-2:00pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
How California's energy sector produces and deliverspower in the state, including the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers
SteveBerberich,President &CEO, California Independent System Operator

2:00 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologicallyadvanced, and environmentally-sound.The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter.Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission

Roundtable Discussion

*presenter confirmed

2:30 pm –3:30 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Commissioner, California Energy Commission
Mark Ferron, Commissioner,California Public Utilities Commission
Ron Nichols, General Manager,Los Angeles Department of Water and Power
Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council
Kevin Evans, Vice President and General Manager, Integrated Demand Resources, Building Efficiency, Johnson Controls

Roundtable Discussion

3:30 pm-3:45pm– Break

3:45 pm - 5:15 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g.How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?)How does the renewable energy policy goals fit with other state policies, e.g. vehicle electrification and energy storage policies?What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Nick Chaset, Governor's Special Advisor for DG, CHP and Energy Storage
Laura Wisland, Senior Energy Analyst, Union of Concerned Scientists
Jim Avery, SeniorVP, Power Supply, Sempra Energy Utilities
Tom Starrs, VP, Market Development and Policy, SunPower Corporation

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—Merryvale Vineyards

Friday, April 26th—Silverado West Ballroom

7:30 am -8:30 am – ContinentalBreakfast

8:30 am - 9:45 am—SESSION 5: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
How do agencies coordinate and align sometimes conflicting policies? What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change and energy goals?

Mary Nichols, Chairman, Air Resources Board
Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission

*presenter confirmed

Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission
SteveBerberich,President &CEO, California Independent System Operator

Roundtable Discussion

9:45 am -11:00 am—SESSION 6: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What are the costs and benefits involved?As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

Mike Florio, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
John Chillemi, Senior Vice President and President, West Region, NRG
Stuart Hemphill, Senior VP, Power Supply, Southern California Edison
Fong Wan, Senior VP, Energy Procurement, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

11:00 am -11:15 am – Break

11:15 am -12:30pm—SESSION 7: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting our 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals requires electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStasio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
Heather Sanders,Director, Smart Grid Technologies and Strategies, CAISO
Wade Crowfoot,Deputy Director, Governor's Office of Planning and Research
Aaron Johnson, Senior Director, Customer Programs, PG&E

Subject: CFEE talking point ideas

Here are my notes from the Friday call. Sorry for the delay.

CFEE wants an "Energy 1" level set of remarks, not "Energy 101" and for sure not "Energy 201".

Mark will have 7-10 minutes max.
No slides, can have graphic or data handouts if necessary to convey the message.

Note: Mark will be preceded by Andrew M who will cover AB 758, CEC mission with codes & standards, and IEPR (including ZNE policy, Existing building stock and DR)

CPUC points I suggest mark try to cover:

1. CPUC jurisdiction is IOU only – about 70% of electric sales, 99% of gas deliveries (but less of gas commodity sales). Also water, some telco, rail safety, household moving vans, pink mustache private limos, … What is total annual revenue requirement for the electric and gas utilities we regulate?

2. Talk about how demand side relates to supply side. CPUC aim is to promote cost-effective DSM solutions, using utility ratepayer funds to buy "negawatts" when these are cheaper than new power plants or new energy resource contracts.

3. "A word about DR" – what is it, how mobilized (pricing versus incentive payment for participating).

4. Utility programs by definition are voluntary strategies to mobilize market and encourage investment by owners/occupants of buildings, business, industry, … The challenge is to DRIVE MARKET UPTAKE for these voluntary actions and investments.

5. Any data to characterize how EE, DR, and DG contribute to (mostly electric) resource mix? (e.g. from some Procurement primer?) Similarly, how the 2008 AB 32 Scoping Plan looked at demand-side resources for GHG reduction (doubt the proportional roles will be covered by the Peevey/Weisenmiller panel. May be covered later in Mary Nichols' panel?)

6. Where the DSM $ come from: Perhaps talk about what % of electric and gas revenues go to support "public purpose programs" – EE, low income EE and low income CARE, DG, RPS, … Sound like small %, but in $ this amounts to …. (a big number)

7. Differentiate "ratepayer" $ vs. "Tax payer" $, and what the spending requirements are (prudent, cost-effective, best fit, competitive, …)

This may be as far as 7-10 minutes will take him. If time permits, introduce could try to introduce some Energy "101" issues:

- Talk about the 3 buckets of strategies we oversee – utility-implemented, third-party competitively bid programs (for competition), and local government and RENs.

- New themes emerging

a. RENs and possibility for more third-party competition
b. Financing as way to leverage private capital to get positive cash flow solutions without needing to tap ratepayer $ to pay higher and higher rebates and incentives (there is a limit!) and so as to keep rate $ support to reasonable level.
c. Aspects of DR – wholesale, retail, via controls, pricing, storage
d. Promises and opportunities of using smart data (maybe this belongs in a later panel)

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th

12:00 pm - 1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – Fairway Deck

1:00 pm - 1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction – Silverado West Ballroom

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm - 2:00 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
How California's energy sector produces and delivers power in the state, including the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers Assoc.
Stephen Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

2:00 pm - 2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Michael Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Robert Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission

Roundtable Discussion

*presenter confirmed

2:30 pm - 3:30 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Commissioner, California Energy Commission
Mark Ferron, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
Ron Nichols, General Manager, Los Angeles Department of Water and Power
Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council
Kevin Evans, Vice President and General Manager, Integrated Demand Resources, Building Efficiency, Johnson Controls

Roundtable Discussion

3:30 pm - 3:45 pm – Break

3:45 pm - 5:15 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) How does the renewable energy policy goals fit with other state policies, e.g. vehicle electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Nick Chaset, Governor's Special Advisor for DG, CHP and Energy Storage
Laura Wisland, Senior Energy Analyst, Union of Concerned Scientists
Jim Avery, Senior VP, Power Supply, Sempra Energy Utilities
Tom Starrs, VP, Market Development and Policy, SunPower Corporation

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—TBD

Friday, April 26th—Silverado West Ballroom

7:30 am - 8:30 am – Continental Breakfast

8:30 am - 9:45 am—SESSION 5: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
How do agencies coordinate and align sometimes conflicting policies? What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change and energy goals?

Mary Nichols, Chairman, Air Resources Board
Michael Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Robert Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission
Stephen Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

Roundtable Discussion

*presenter confirmed

9:45 am - 11:00 am—SESSION 6: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What are the costs and benefits involved? As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

Mike Florio, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
John Chillemi, Senior Vice President and President, West Region, NRG
Stuart Hemphill, Senior VP, Power Supply, Southern California Edison
*Fong Wan, Senior VP, Energy Procurement, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

11:00 am - 11:15 am – Break

11:15 am - 12:30 pm—SESSION 7: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting our 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals requires electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStasio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
Heather Sanders, Director, Smart Grid Technologies and Strategies, CAISO
Wade Crowfoot, Deputy Director, Governor's Office of Planning and Research
*Aaron Johnson, Senior Director, Customer Programs, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

Re: Materials for Energy Conference

Enclosed are the draft agenda, confirmed invitee list, participation and hotel confirmation form, as well as and directions to the Energy Roundtable Conference in Napa, California.

The conference starts with a buffet lunch on Thursday, April 25th at Noon, at the Conference Facilities at Silverado, with the roundtable beginning promptly at 1:00 p.m.

We have an impressive list of participants at the table and a well-crafted, balanced agenda. As always, adherence to the conference ground rules, specifically in terms of positive contributions designed to educate and promote consensus, is essential for the group to get the most out of our time together.

If you have general questions about the conference, or still need to confirm your attendance, please call Celeste Cremen at 415-788-0812 or celeste@cfee.net. Please email Beth Vaughan at beth@beth411.com for inquiries about the agenda.

If your family or office would like to reach you during the conference, the telephone number at the Silverado Conference Center is 707-257-0200. Also, the attire is casual for the entire conference.

We look forward to seeing you in Napa.

Enclosures

Note: Although we do not provide legal advice, it is our understanding that, as a non-profit organized under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, CFEE can host your participation, which is not subject to the state gift limitation. However, the costs of your hotel accommodations and meals related to the conference are reportable. We will provide you with the reportable amount immediately following the event, which we currently estimate to be approximately $380.

Please email Celeste if you require a vegetarian dinner entrée by April 17, 2013 at Celeste@cfee.net.

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th

12:00 pm - 1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – Fairway Deck

1:00 pm - 1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction – Silverado West Ballroom

Patrick F. Mason,* President, CFEE

1:15 pm - 2:00 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
How California's energy sector produces and delivers power in the state, including the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers Assoc.
Stephen Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

2:00 pm - 2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Michael Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Robert Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission

Roundtable Discussion

*presenter confirmed

2:30 pm - 3:30 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Commissioner, California Energy Commission
Mark Ferron, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
Ron Nichols, General Manager, Los Angeles Department of Water and Power
Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council
Kevin Evans, Vice President and General Manager, Integrated Demand Resources, Building Efficiency, Johnson Controls

Roundtable Discussion

3:30 pm - 3:45 pm – Break

3:45 pm - 5:15 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) How does the renewable energy policy goals fit with other state policies, e.g. vehicle electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Nick Chaset, Governor's Special Advisor for DG, CHP and Energy Storage
Laura Wisland, Senior Energy Analyst, Union of Concerned Scientists
Jim Avery, Senior VP, Power Supply, Sempra Energy Utilities
Tom Starrs, VP, Market Development and Policy, SunPower Corporation

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—TBD

Friday, April 26th—Silverado West Ballroom

7:30 am - 8:30 am – Continental Breakfast

8:30 am - 9:45 am—SESSION 5: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
How do agencies coordinate and align sometimes conflicting policies? What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change and energy goals?

Mary Nichols, Chairman, Air Resources Board
Michael Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Robert Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission
Stephen Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

Roundtable Discussion

*presenter confirmed

9:45 am - 11:00 am—SESSION 6: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What are the costs and benefits involved? As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

Mike Florio, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
John Chillemi, Senior Vice President and President, West Region, NRG
Stuart Hemphill, Senior VP, Power Supply, Southern California Edison
*Fong Wan, Senior VP, Energy Procurement, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

11:00 am - 11:15 am – Break

11:15 am - 12:30 pm—SESSION 7: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting our 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals requires electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStasio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
Heather Sanders, Director, Smart Grid Technologies and Strategies, CAISO
Wade Crowfoot, Deputy Director, Governor's Office of Planning and Research
*Aaron Johnson, Senior Director, Customer Programs, PG&E

Re: Materials for Energy Conference

Enclosed are the draft agenda, confirmed invitee list, participation and hotel confirmation form, as well as and directions to the Energy Roundtable Conference in Napa, California.

The conference starts with a buffet lunch on Thursday, April 25th at Noon, at the Conference Facilities at Silverado, with the roundtable beginning promptly at 1:00 p.m.

We have an impressive list of participants at the table and a well-crafted, balanced agenda. As always, adherence to the conference ground rules, specifically in terms of positive contributions designed to educate and promote consensus, is essential for the group to get the most out of our time together.

If you have general questions about the conference, or still need to confirm your attendance, please call Celeste Cremen at 415-788-0812 or celeste@cfee.net. Please email Beth Vaughan at beth@beth411.com for inquiries about the agenda.

If your family or office would like to reach you during the conference, the telephone number at the Silverado Conference Center is 707-257-0200. Also, the attire is casual for the entire conference.

We look forward to seeing you in Napa.

Hi -

I can't read the handwriting on the Participation and Hotel Confirmation form, so could you please confirm that I will not be staying overnight but will be participating for lunch and dinner and that I will want to pay for both of these, either at the event or with a follow-up invoice.

Thanks

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th— Silverado West Ballroom

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – Fairway Deck

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction – Silverado West Ballroom

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-2:00 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
How California's energy sector produces and delivers power in the state, including the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers
Steve Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

2:00 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission

Roundtable Discussion

*presenter not confirmed

2:30 pm – 3:30 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Commissioner, California Energy Commission
Mark Ferron, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
Ron Nichols, General Manager, Los Angeles Department of Water and Power
Kevin Evans, Vice President and General Manager, Integrated Demand Resources, Building Efficiency, Johnson Controls
Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council

Roundtable Discussion

3:30 pm-3:45 pm – Break

3:45 pm - 5:15 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) How does the renewable energy policy goals fit with other state policies, e.g. vehicle electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Nick Chaset, Governor's Special Advisor for DG, CHP and Energy Storage
Laura Wisland, Senior Energy Analyst, Union of Concerned Scientists
Tom Starrs, VP, Market Development and Policy, SunPower Corporation
Jim Avery, Senior VP, Power Supply, Sempra Energy Utilities

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—Merryvale Vineyards

Friday, April 26th—Silverado West Ballroom

7:30 am - 8:30 am – Continental Breakfast

8:30 am - 9:45 am—SESSION 5: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
How do agencies coordinate and align sometimes conflicting policies? What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change and energy goals?

Mary Nichols, Chairman, Air Resources Board
Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission

*presenter not confirmed

Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission
Steve Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

Roundtable Discussion

9:45 am - 11:00 am—SESSION 6: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What are the costs and benefits involved? As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

Mike Florio, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
John Chillemi, Senior Vice President and President, West Region, NRG
Stuart Hemphill, Senior VP, Power Supply, Southern California Edison
Fong Wan, Senior VP, Energy Procurement, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

11:00 am - 11:15 am – Break

11:15 am - 12:30 pm—SESSION 7: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting our 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals requires electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStasio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
*Heather Sanders, Director, Smart Grid Technologies and Strategies, CAISO
*Wade Crowfoot, Deputy Director, Governor's Office of Planning and Research
Aaron Johnson, Senior Director, Customer Programs, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

12:30 pm – Closing Remarks

12:45 pm - Adjourn

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th— Silverado West Ballroom

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – Fairway Deck

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction – Silverado West Ballroom

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-2:00 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
How California's energy sector produces and delivers power in the state, including the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers
Steve Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

2:00 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission

Roundtable Discussion

*presenter not confirmed

2:30 pm – 3:30 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Commissioner, California Energy Commission
Mark Ferron, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
Ron Nichols, General Manager, Los Angeles Department of Water and Power
Kevin Evans, Vice President and General Manager, Integrated Demand Resources, Building Efficiency, Johnson Controls
Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council

Roundtable Discussion

3:30 pm-3:45 pm – Break

3:45 pm - 5:15 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) How does the renewable energy policy goals fit with other state policies, e.g. vehicle electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Nick Chaset, Governor's Special Advisor for DG, CHP and Energy Storage
Laura Wisland, Senior Energy Analyst, Union of Concerned Scientists
Tom Starrs, VP, Market Development and Policy, SunPower Corporation
Jim Avery, Senior VP, Power Supply, Sempra Energy Utilities

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—Merryvale Vineyards

Friday, April 26th—Silverado West Ballroom

7:30 am - 8:30 am – Continental Breakfast

8:30 am - 9:45 am—SESSION 5: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
How do agencies coordinate and align sometimes conflicting policies? What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change and energy goals?

Mary Nichols, Chairman, Air Resources Board
Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission

*presenter not confirmed

Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission
Steve Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

Roundtable Discussion

9:45 am - 11:00 am—SESSION 6: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What are the costs and benefits involved? As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

Mike Florio, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
John Chillemi, Senior Vice President and President, West Region, NRG
Stuart Hemphill, Senior VP, Power Supply, Southern California Edison
Fong Wan, Senior VP, Energy Procurement, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

11:00 am - 11:15 am – Break

11:15 am - 12:30 pm—SESSION 7: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting our 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals requires electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStasio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
*Heather Sanders, Director, Smart Grid Technologies and Strategies, CAISO
*Wade Crowfoot, Deputy Director, Governor's Office of Planning and Research
Aaron Johnson, Senior Director, Customer Programs, PG&E

Subject:	CFEE talking point ideas
Attach:	CPUC EE Primer_for Kyle Hiner_03-2013_v4.ppt

Some talking points suggestions from Jeanne for CFEE are below – thanks Jeanne, as always! I have a slightly different bent and so am adding mine on top of Jeanne's fantastic outline below. Hopefully, you can steal from both and "ferronize" it accordingly. I'm also attaching a 'mega slide deck' that ED staff put together that has some good visuals and phrasing. If you like any of this stuff, we can put together a 'take away' page if you would like. Let me know.

Michael's thoughts (Jeanne's outline is below):
I think that for this crowd I would suggest that you try to hit the following three categories of points in terms of an overall theme:

1. EE is a the cleanest and cheapest energy resource we have. It's also the hardest thing to do because it is not just a contract with one power plant, but lots of individual actors changing infrastructure and behavior. Would use an example of a commercial or industrial plant so that the members don't automatically jump to their own home/self reference EE in an individual context.
    a. We are a long time leader and yet we continue to push the envelope. Hundreds of programs, and touches every market segment.
    b. I would have a reference (nothing more than a mention) that we continue to need to ensure that we fully count the resource in our planning process and we have made/will make commitments to get EE fully integrated into everyone's process.
    c. Making a shift to longer lasting, deeper savings. This is moving a big ship, but the wheels are in motion.
2. Introducing some competition (the Regional Energy Network model) but the utility will continue to play a dominant role in the space. Hoping to incubate additional ideas. Local governments should play a role (etc.)
3. The ratepayer wallet is not infinite. Financing programs are critical to leverage private capital – we will not get to the market transformation system that we need without it. Ratepayers should not fund all of it, and rebates will only go so far…

That alone is probably enough for the first 5 minutes.

Some additional ideas (if they come up)

- In the transition from the short term 'widgets' model to building transformation/market transformation, data analytics and services model will be really important.
- There was long term funding for EE in the now expired/sunset PGC – that did have a market signal. The CPUC might try to re-create that market signal since it is our top priority resource.
- A metric for success should NOT be a declining TRC. We are under statutory mandate to do all cost effective EE. A really high TRC indicates that we are leaving savings on the table. The trick is to get as close to 1.0 as possible on a portfolio basis.

Subject: CFEE talking point ideas

Here are my notes from the Friday call. Sorry for the delay.

CFEE wants an "Energy 1" level set of remarks, not "Energy 101" and for sure not "Energy 201".

Mark will have 7-10 minutes max.
No slides, can have graphic or data handouts if necessary to convey the message.

Note: Mark will be preceded by Andrew M who will cover AB 758, CEC mission with codes & standards, and IEPR (including ZNE policy, Existing building stock and DR)

CPUC points I suggest mark try to cover:

1. CPUC jurisdiction is IOU only – about 70% of electric sales, 99% of gas deliveries (but less of gas commodity sales). Also water, some telco, rail safety, household moving vans, pink mustache private limos, … What is total annual revenue requirement for the electric and gas utilities we regulate?

2. Talk about how demand side relates to supply side. CPUC aim is to promote cost-effective DSM solutions, using utility ratepayer funds to buy "negawatts" when these are cheaper than new power plants or new energy resource contracts.

3. "A word about DR" – what is it, how mobilized (pricing versus incentive payment for participating).

4. Utility programs by definition are voluntary strategies to mobilize market and encourage investment by owners/occupants of buildings, business, industry, … The challenge is to DRIVE MARKET UPTAKE for these voluntary actions and investments.

5. Any data to characterize how EE, DR, and DG contribute to (mostly electric) resource mix? (e.g. from some Procurement primer?) Similarly, how the 2008 AB 32 Scoping Plan looked at demand-side resources for GHG reduction (doubt the proportional roles will be covered by the Peevey/Weisenmiller panel. May be covered later in Mary Nichols' panel?)

6. Where the DSM $ come from: Perhaps talk about what % of electric and gas revenues go to support "public purpose programs" – EE, low income EE and low income CARE, DG, RPS, … Sound like small %, but in $ this amounts to …. (a big number)

7. Differentiate "ratepayer" $ vs. "Tax payer" $, and what the spending requirements are (prudent, cost-effective, best fit, competitive, …)

This may be as far as 7-10 minutes will take him. If time permits, introduce could try to introduce some Energy "101" issues:

- Talk about the 3 buckets of strategies we oversee – utility-implemented, third-party competitively bid programs (for competition), and local government and RENs.

- New themes emerging
    a. RENs and possibility for more third-party competition
    b. Financing as way to leverage private capital to get positive cash flow solutions without needing to tap ratepayer $ to pay higher and higher rebates and incentives (there is a limit!) and so as to keep rate $ support to reasonable level.

c. Aspects of DR – wholesale, retail, via controls, pricing, storage
d. Promises and opportunities of using smart data (maybe this belongs in a later panel)

- Cleanest available fossil resources

California Long-Term Energy Efficiency Strategic Plan

- 2007: CPUC adopts Big Bold Energy Efficiency Strategies:
  1. All new residential construction will be zero net energy (ZNE) by 2020
  2. All new commercial construction in California will be zero net energy by 2030
  3. HVAC market will be transformed to ensure that its energy performance is optimal
  4. All eligible low-income customers will be given the opportunity to participate in ESAP by 2020.
- 2007: CPUC orders a Strategic Plan to achieve "all cost-effective energy efficiency."
- 2008: CPUC adopts the Strategic Plan
  - A roadmap for EE through 2020 and beyond
- 2009: CPUC approves IOU programs shaped by the Strategic Plan
- Action Plans to engage non-utility entities

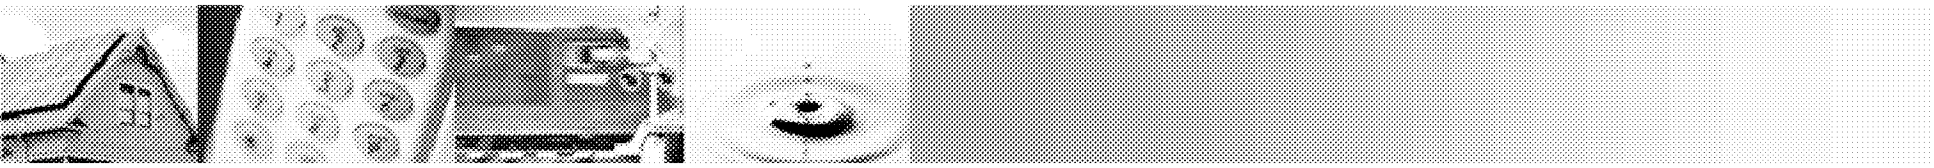
CPUC Role in Governing IOU Energy Efficiency Programs

- CPUC
  - Regulates investor-owned utilities (IOUs)
  - Sets rates, determines revenue requirement
  - Oversees IOU EE budgets and plans
- Per 2005 decision, IOUs administer EE programs approved by CPUC
  - Beginning in 2006, Commission staff (Energy Division) evaluate IOU programs



CPUC Statutory Mandates

- Foundational mandates
  - "Just and reasonable" rates – PU Code 451
  - "All practicable and cost-effective" conservation / EE – PU Code 701(b)
- More recent provisions
  - "All cost-effective EE" - PU Code Sections 454.5.(b)(9)(C) ("loading order" / electric EE procurement provision)
  - Set EE goals based on "all cost-effective EE" - PU Code 454.55 (electric) and 454.56 (gas)
  - Electric PGC surcharge – PU Code 381 and 399 (now expired)
  - Natural Gas PPP surcharge – PU Code 890-899 (no sunset)

CPUC policy emphasis focused on voluntary market

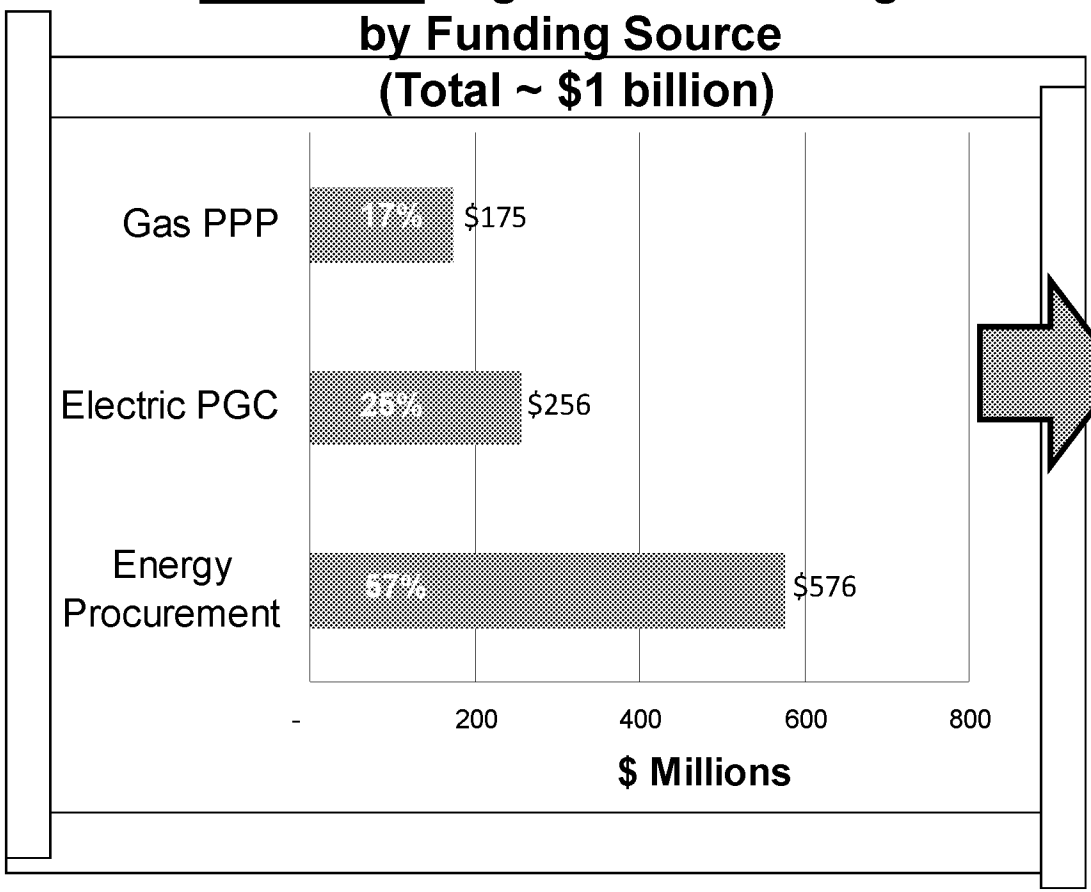
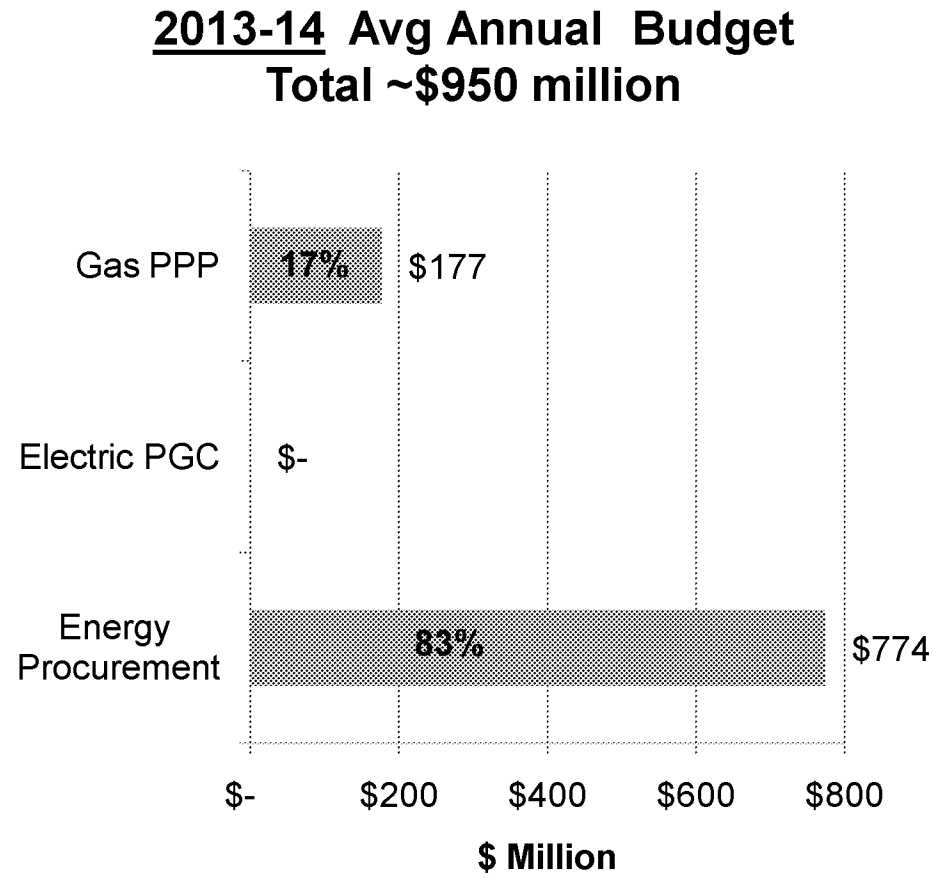
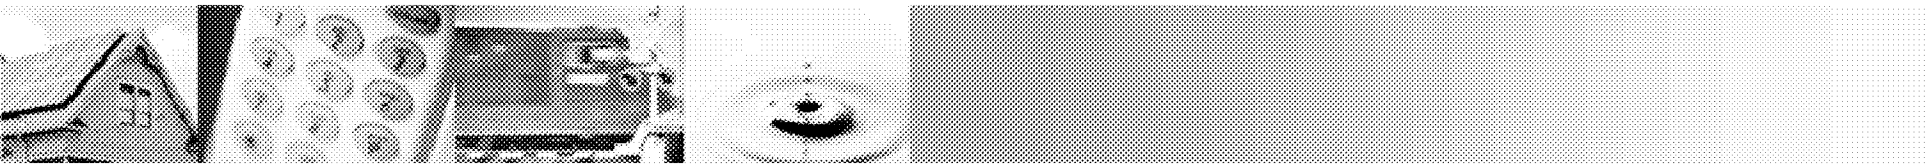
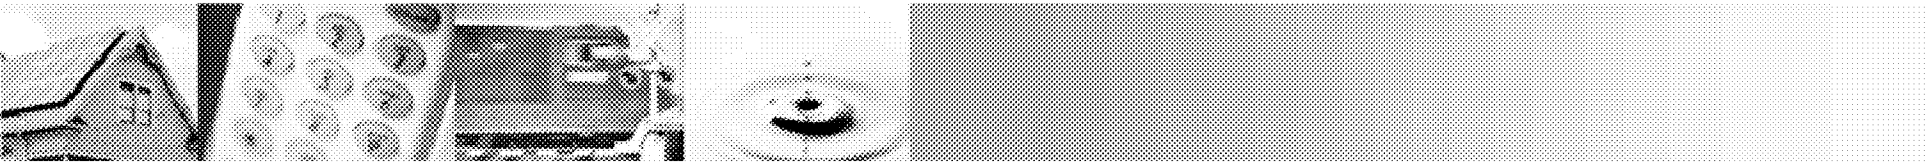
Funding Sources for Mainstream IOU Energy Efficiency Programs







Overview of IOU EE Programs



Key IOU Progam Design Requirements / Incentives

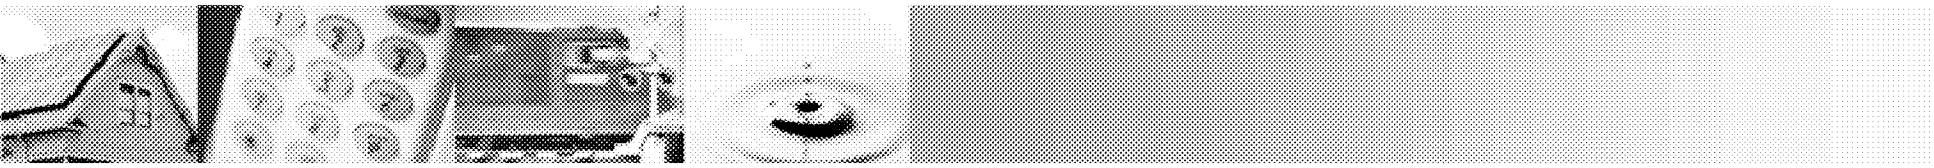
"Sticks": Legislative Requirements

- Portfolio budgets must be reviewed and approved by Commission
- IOUs must meet energy savings goals
- Portfolio must be cost effective
- Programs must meet the requirements of the portfolio guidance decision and pursue Strategic Plan objectives
- 20% of budget must be competitively bid by third party implementers

"Carrots": Utility Benefits

- Shareholder incentives
- IOUs get other "passive" benefits from EE programs (e.g., GHG, corporate "greenwashing," customer satisfaction, etc.)

CPUC02568



CPUC Process for Approval / Oversight of IOU EE Programs

- Multi-Year Budget Cycle

Policy Guidance	IOU Portfolio Applications	Portfolio Implementation
•Savings Potential / Goals •Portfolio cost effectiveness •Shareholder Incentives •20% Third-party •Strategic Plan / programmatic guidance	•Must meet savings goals •Budgets / Cost-effectiveness •Alignment with Strategic Plan	•IOU Administration •Energy Division EM&V / program implementation oversight

- Transition cycle: 2013-2014
- Next cycle: Post-2014

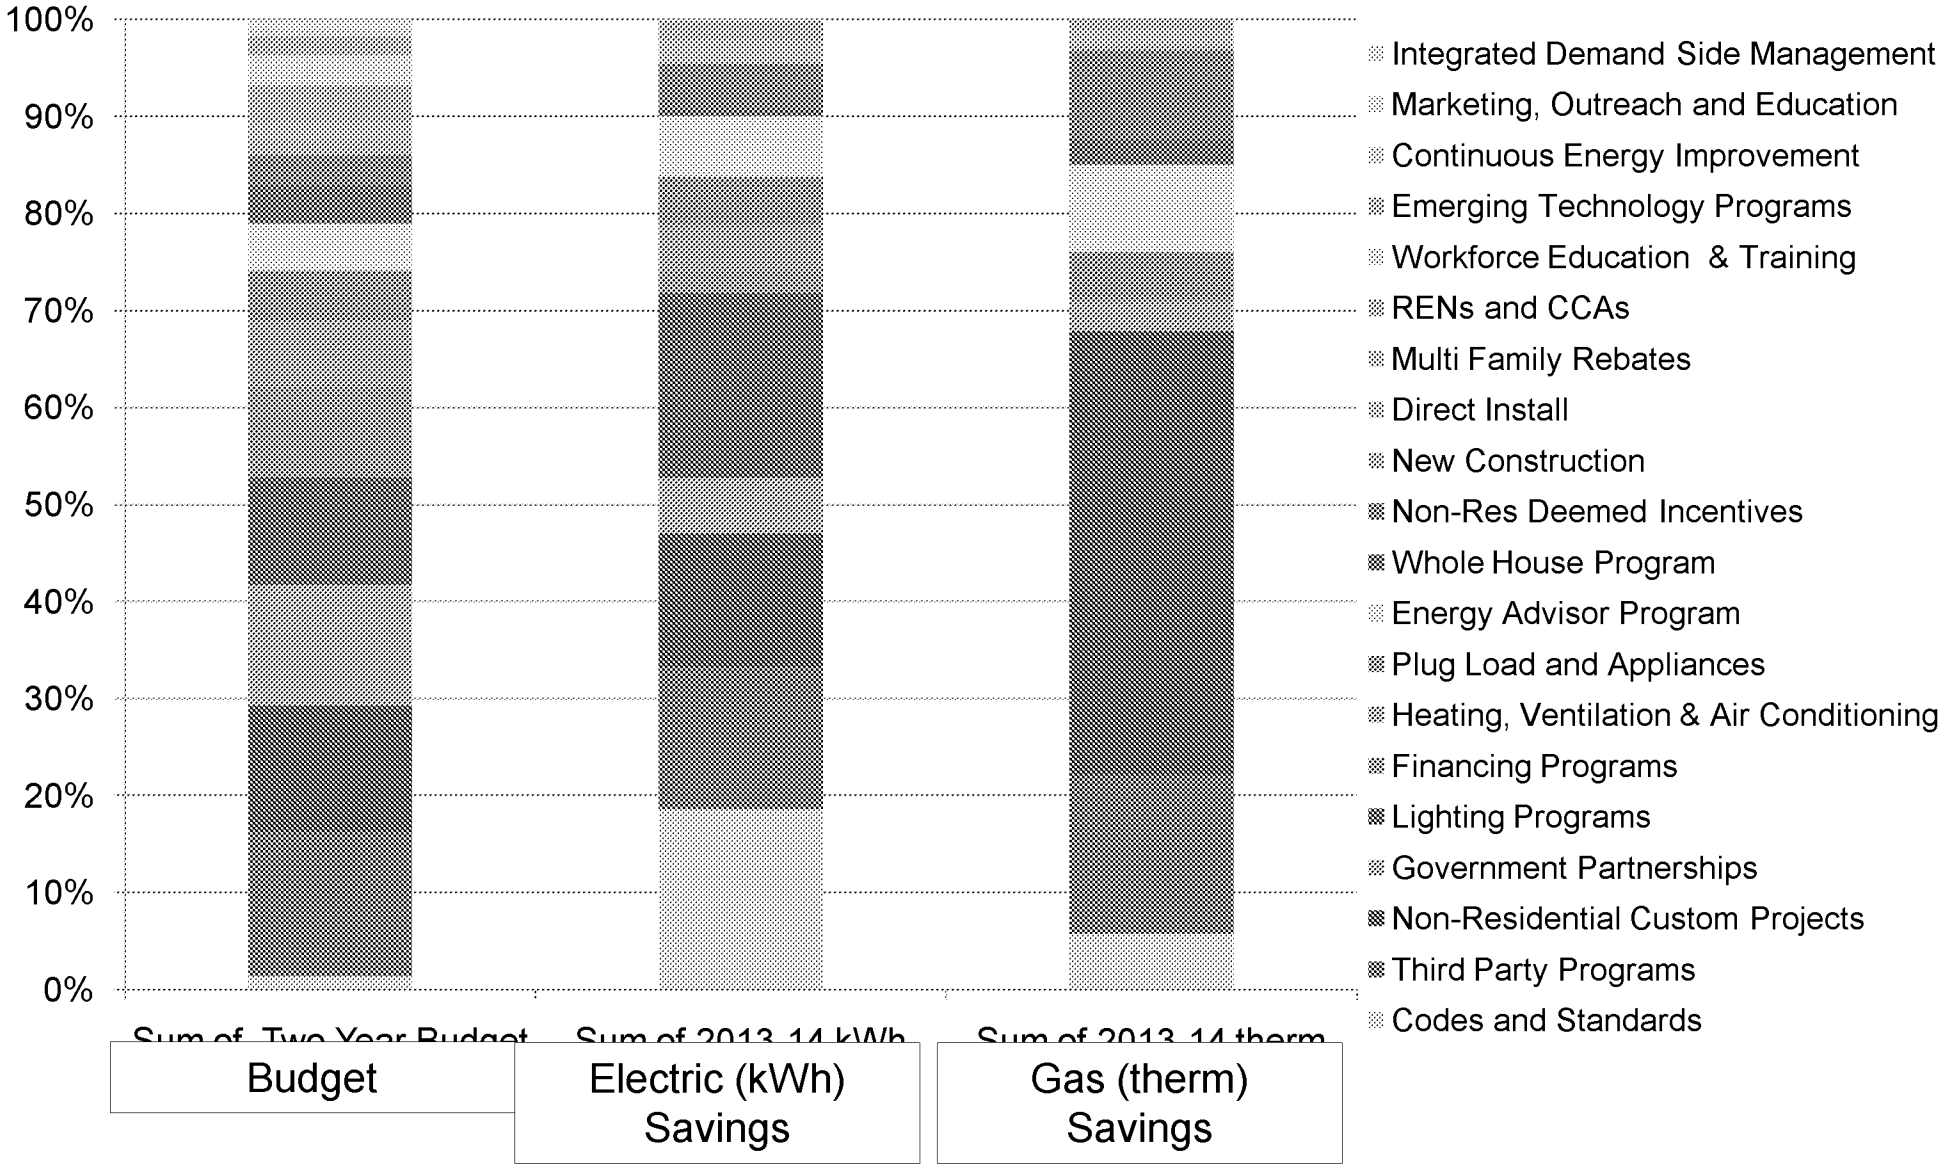
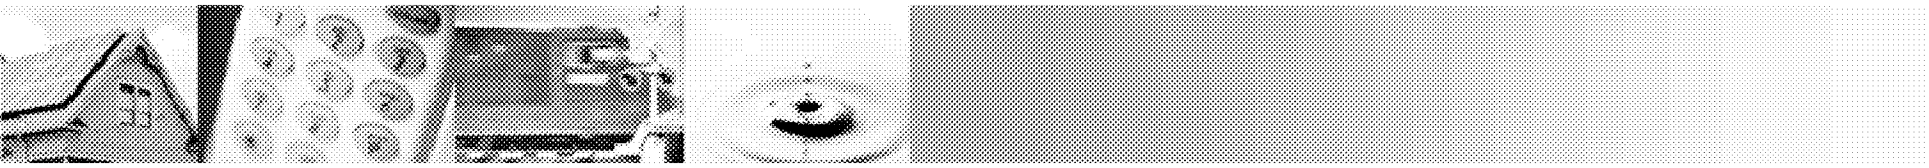
2013-14 IOU Programs: Budget and Savings





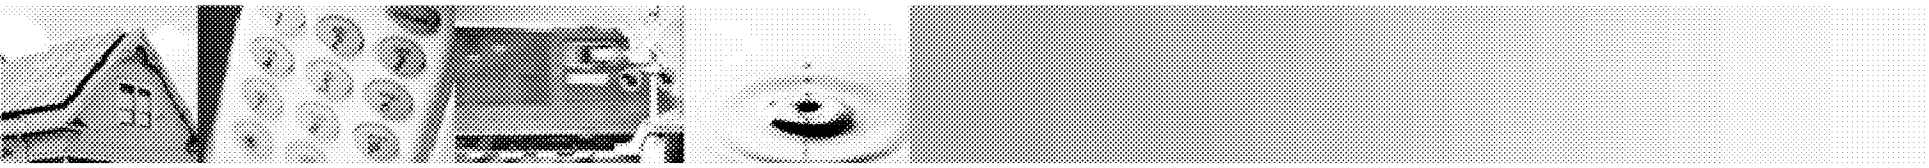
New Strategic Program Direction

New Strategic Programs

- Financing (OBF, new pilots)
- Whole-house
- Behavior (OPower energy reports)
- Integrated (EE/DR/DG) on-line audits
- Retro-commissioning
- Continuous Energy Improvement
- ZNE pilots
- LGP SP pilots

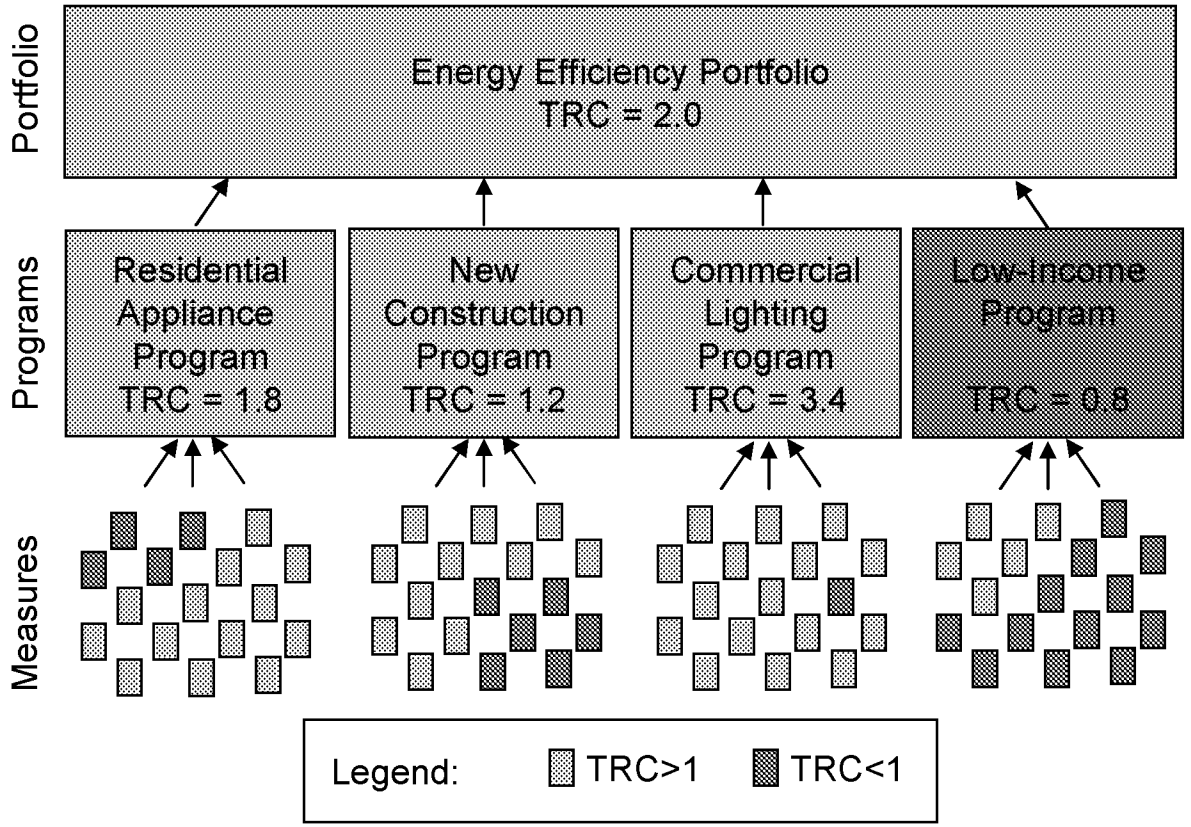
Continuing Programs

- "Widget" rebates ($/widget)
- Calculated rebates ($/kwh, $/them)
- "Upstream" mfr / distributor buy-down
- New construction
- Direct install
- State & institutional partnerships

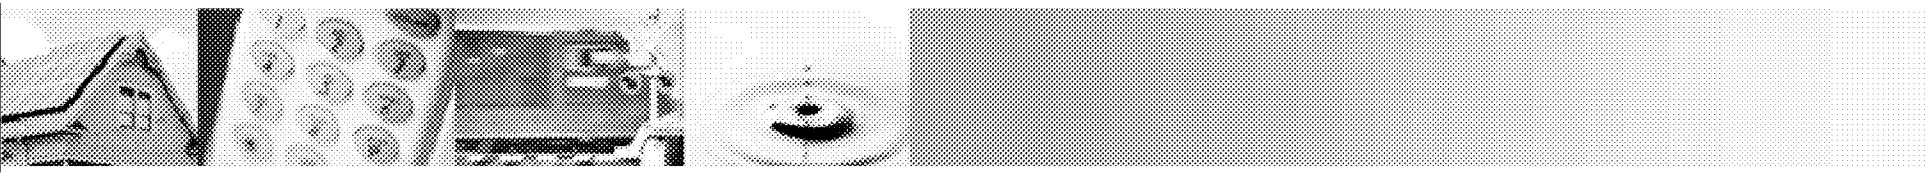


Cost-Effectiveness

CPUC determines EE cost-effectiveness at the portfolio-level and on a "net" basis



- Portfolio approach allows for inclusion of individual programs or measures that do not past cost test (EUC, ETP, new construction, etc.)
- Prospective "dual test" showing examines both TRC and PAC
- Commission determines actual TRC threshold deemed sufficient



Benefit-Cost Ratios

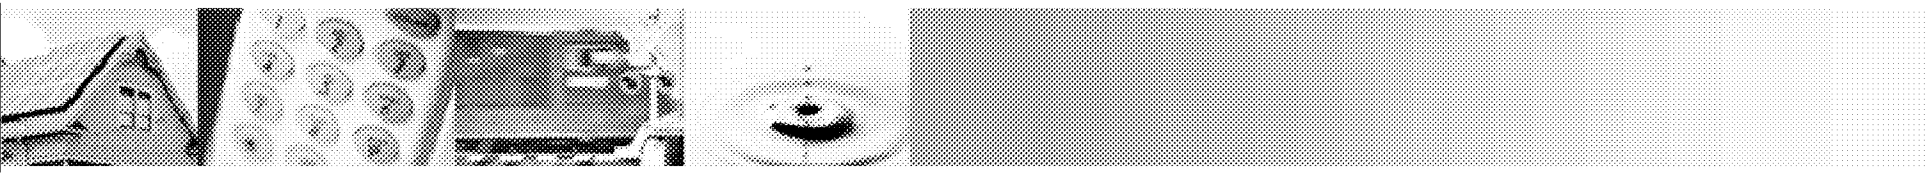
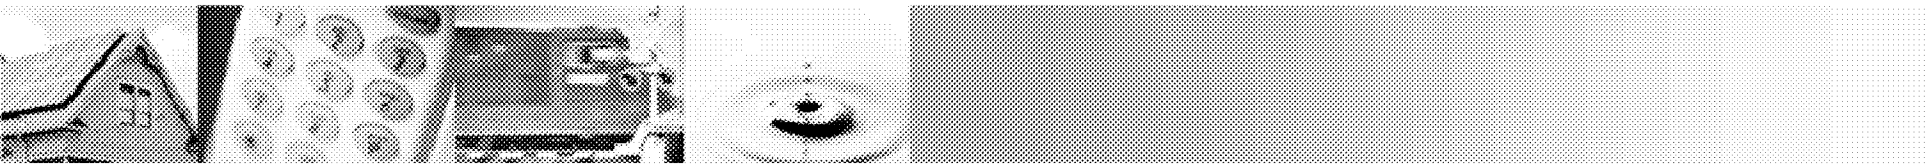
*Source: 2010-11 Annual Energy Efficiency Progress Report

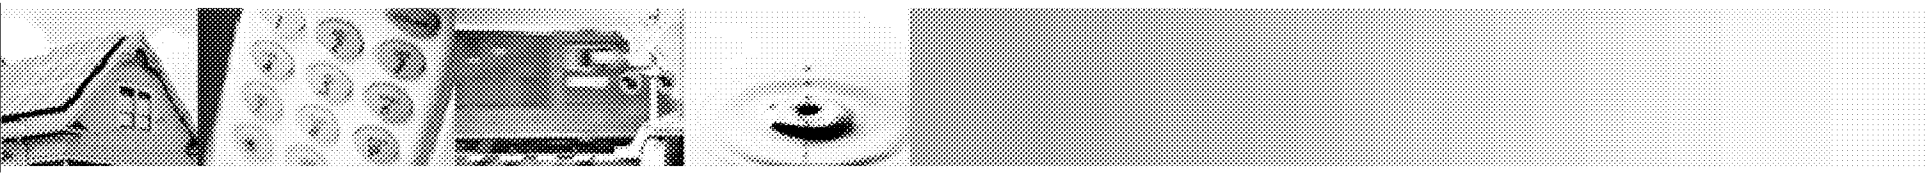


Cost-effectiveness "frontiers"

1. Current methods to quantify energy savings (from which avoided costs are derived) do not include:
   - "Spill-over" – Savings that results when program participants and/or nonparticipants adopt measures without obtaining any customer incentive as a result of some exposure to the incentive programs
   - Difficult to quantify / demonstrate with certainty
   - Well within statutory mandates
2. Current EE cost-effectiveness tests do not include the value of societal non-energy benefits (e.g., job creation, labor productivity, tax receipts growth, housing value, other env benefits), other than GHG benefits
      - Participant non-energy benefits (e.g., comfort, health, and safety) are accounted for in the NTG methodology, which allocated participant costs and benefits according to influence factors.
   - Difficult to quantify / demonstrate with certainty
   - Statutory mandates for authorizing ratepayer EE programs address energy savings, system reliability, and environmental benefits.



EE Goals



EE is at the top of the "Loading Order"

IOUs must achieve All Cost-Effective EE:

- PUC Sec 454.5 requires that IOUs "meet unmet resource needs with all available EE and demand reduction that is cost-effective, reliable, and feasible."

- PUC Sec 454.55 / 454.56 requires CPUC to establish targets for the IOUs to achieve all cost-effective electric / gas EE

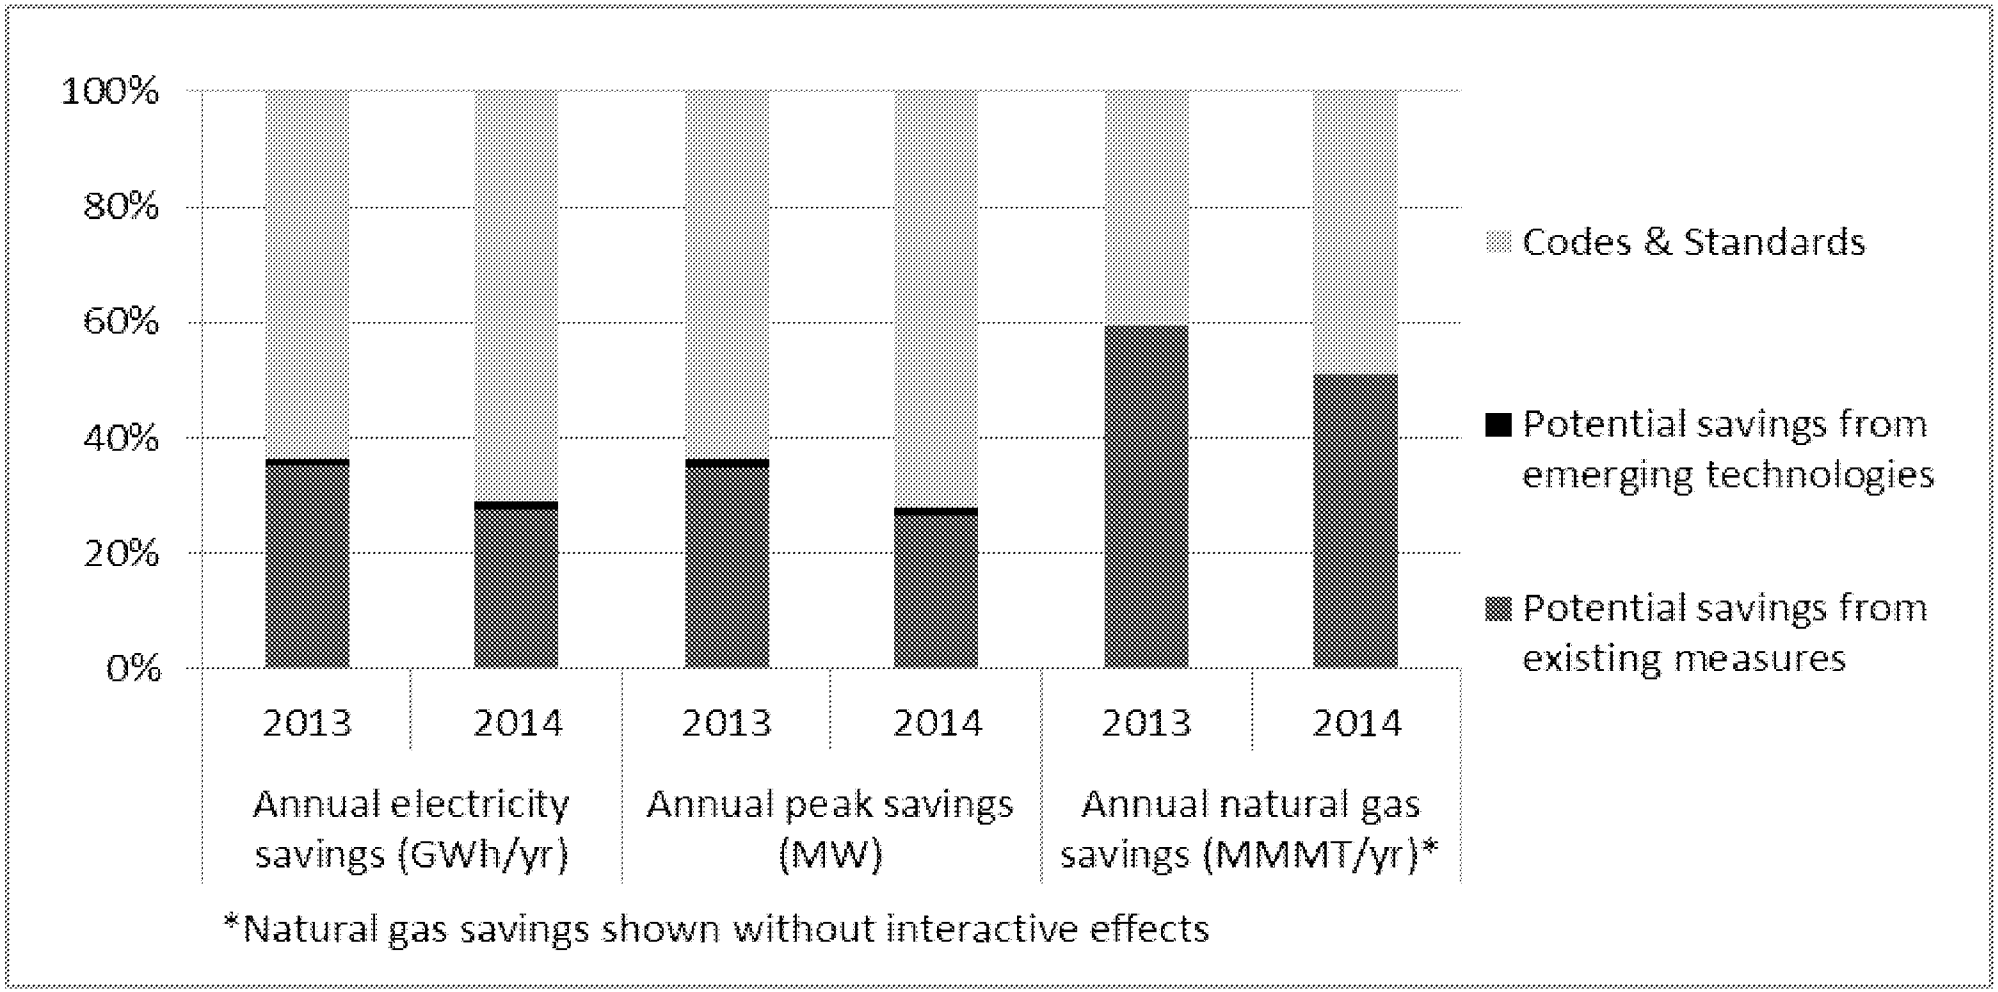
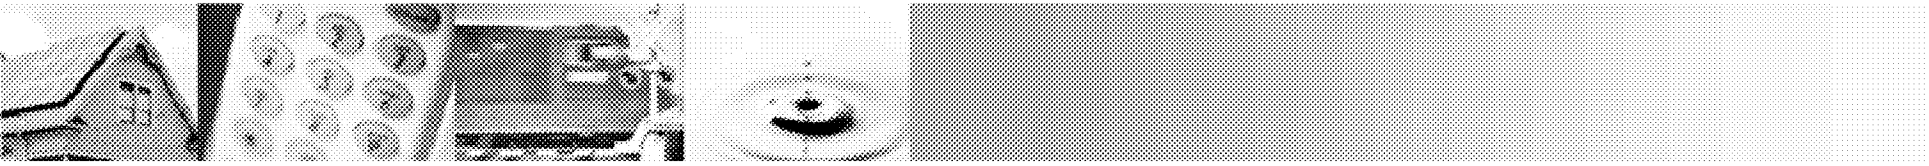
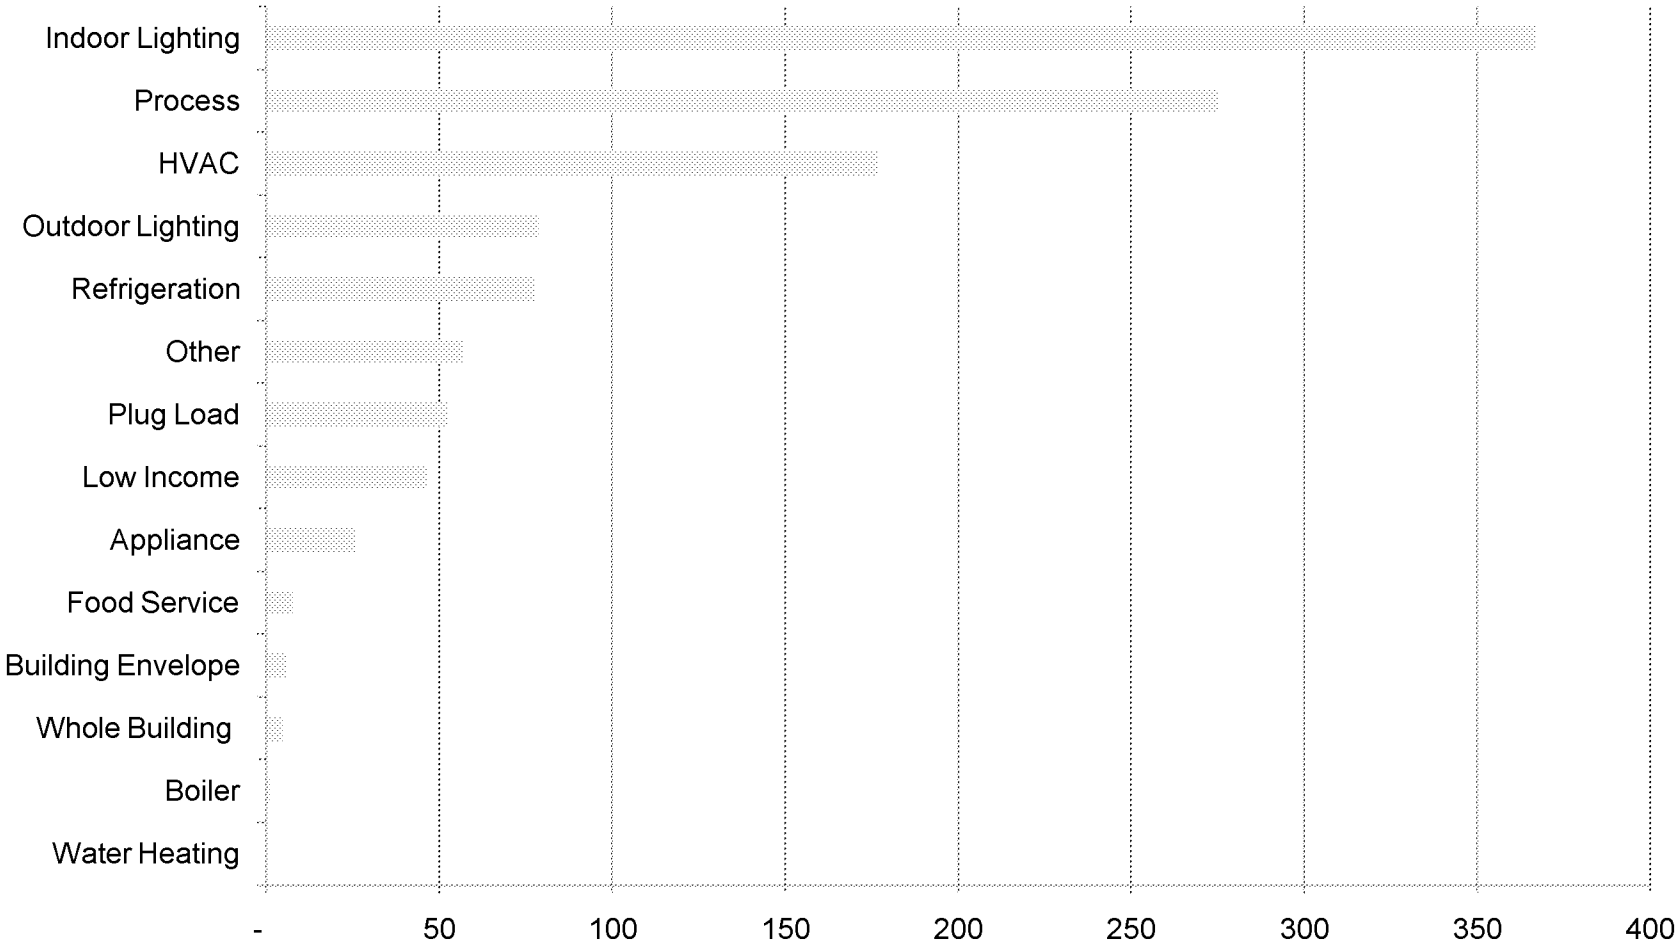
IOU 2013-14 EE Goals

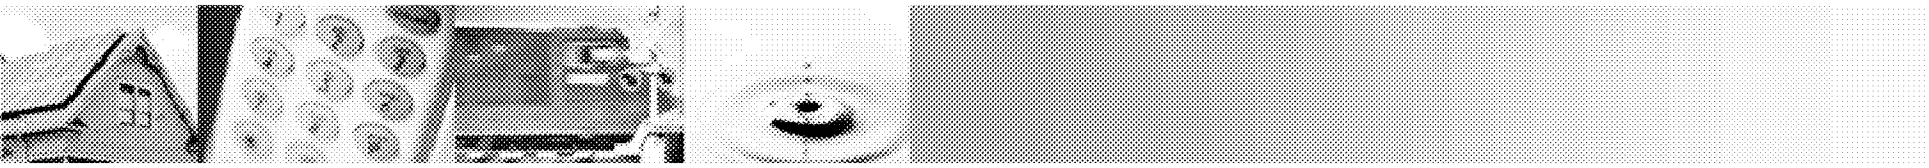


CPUC02584

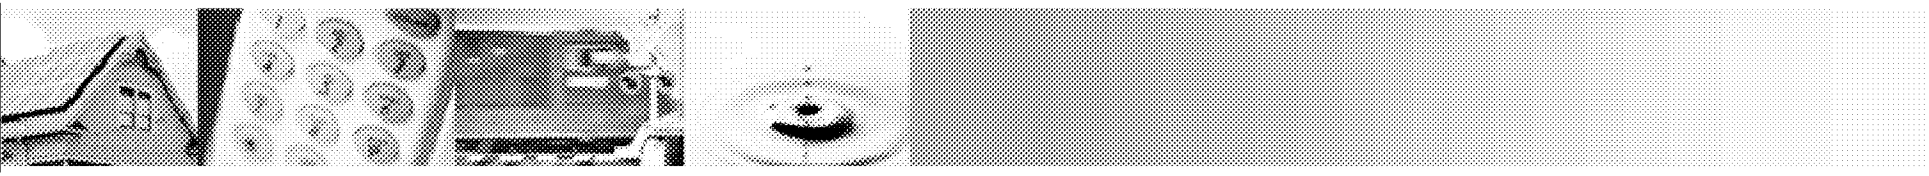


2013 Potential by Measure Type





Evaluation Measurement and Verification (EM&V)



Application of EM&V results to future portfolio design

Increasing reliability of future savings estimates

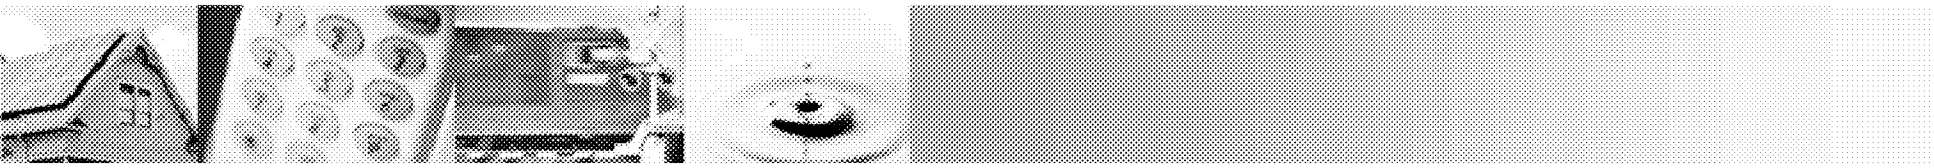
- Updating program planning values in order to create more accurate ex-ante projections of likely savings in the next program cycle
- Making procurement demand forecast estimates more accurate

Improving program efficacy

- Providing performance information to program administrators
- Identifying measures that are not cost-effective for removal or reduction in the portfolios
- Improving program processes and implementation so delivery inefficiencies are reduced or eliminated
- Developing feedback on new programs or measures for which good data does not yet exist

Providing market feedback

- Assessing the potential for remaining energy savings
- Monitoring changing market conditions to inform program design
- Constructing trend data on target markets for use in strategic planning and guidance for the next cycle



EE Evaluation, Measurement and Verification (EM&V) "101"

- Impact Evaluation is used to verify energy savings through field research. Key aspects investigated are:
  - Installation Rates (How many units got installed?)
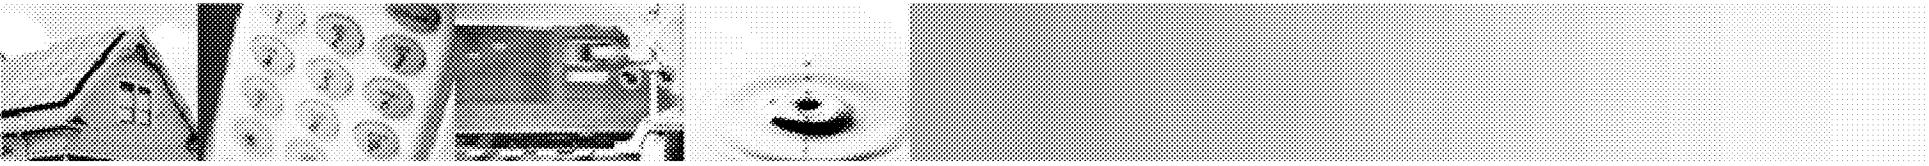
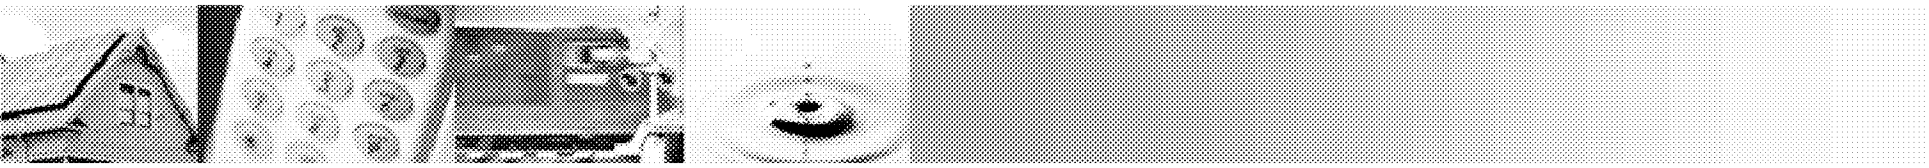
  - Unit Energy Savings (What savings were achieved?) –Factors include baseline, expected life, operating hours, peak time effects)
  - Program influence or Attribution (To what extent did the program cause the action?) -- Compared to other motivating factors, such as natural market changes, vendor advertising, price effects, environmental effects, etc.?)

- Lessons Learned are applied to future program designs & implementation strategies, including:
  - Updated energy savings expectations
  - Insight into customer segments with highest savings potential
  - Profiles of customers unlikely to take action without utility program facilitation



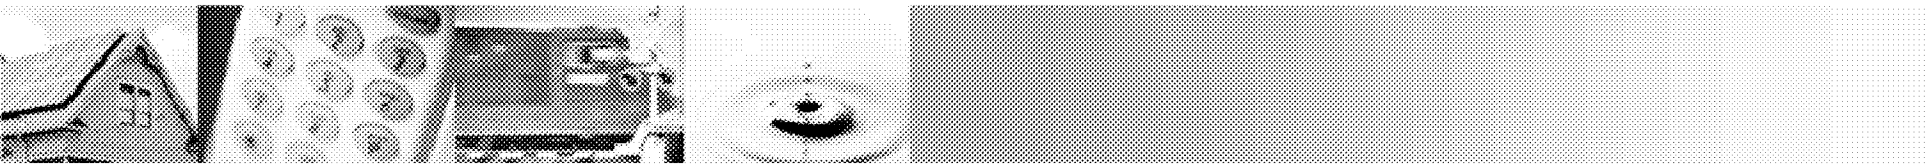
Improvements to EM&V Administration that were Implemented in 2010-2012

- First ever EM&V Work Plan – a living document developed in close collaboration with IOUs
- Evaluation needs integrated efficiently into multi-faceted studies
- Studies implemented on staged, rolling basis
- Stakeholder input scheduled; dispute resolution structure set up
- Prime contractor administrative structure to ensure consistency across sampling methodologies , identify study synergies, eliminate redundancy



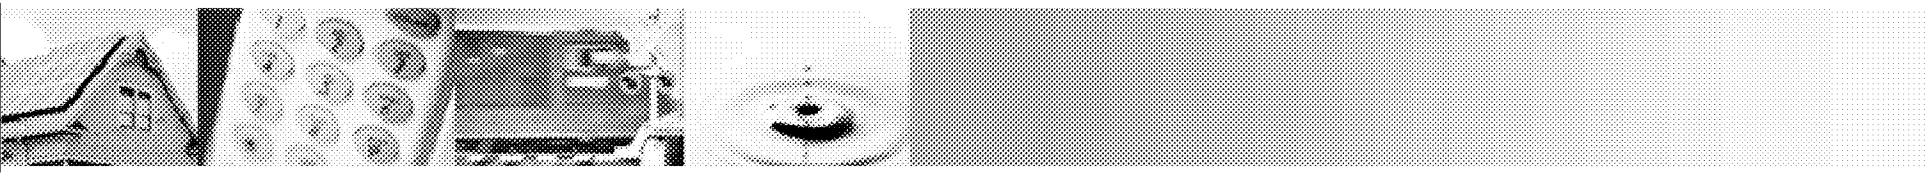
Net To Gross (NTG) Ratio

- Net to gross ratio may derate the program impacts significantly
- Key factors addressed through the net-to-gross ratio are:
  - Free Riders
  - Spillover / “Market effects”
  - Underlying participant motivations (including non-energy benefits)
  - Installation Rate
  - Persistence/Failure
  - Rebound / Take Back Effect
- Impact evaluations assess NTG ratios and inform planning parameter updates (DEER, etc.)



Tracking Progress and Evaluation

- Data has been collected on energy efficiency savings and participation since the inception of these programs
- Pre 2006 IOUs maintained all of the data but reported on regular intervals to the Commission
- Starting in 2006 Energy Division started maintaining a centralized data set of the energy efficiency activities and started reporting on the full statewide activity:
  - The monthly data is available on the Energy Efficiency Groupware Application "EEGA" and can be queried and searched on the "Savings" tab. http://eega.cpuc.ca.gov
  - Quarterly data is also reported to the Commission which details every technology that has been installed, including, savings, costs, and location.



Tracking Progress and Evaluation (cont'd)

We have also developed comprehensive summary reports that detail program impacts and other key findings.

All good points, Michael. They are good take-away themes, though I also think they fall more in the Energy 101 camp. (:>)
I expect Mark can weave in both the basics and the important take-aways. Perhaps the preceding panel and Andrew's opening remarkes will make it easier to cover ground at a good clip.

Note: the RENs are expanding the nature of competition. We already have a 20% min spend on third-party programs which was envisioned as a key policy in 2004/05 for keeping the utilities' programs "honest" and leaving room for new ideas, innovative business models, cost management. Now, maybe by letting the fox pick the chickens (TPs), we don't exactly get head-to-head competition. But just for historcal note, RENs are EXPANDING the Commisison's notion of competition. The other important point about local governments is that they have natural advantages to relate to their communities in ways that utilities and private companies/contractors don't.

I've categorized Michael's last 3 points into their grade-levels. (:>)

Perhaps the combined outline would look like:

1. Energy resource economics, incl EE is cheap (on paper), effective cost per kWh or therm, contribution to GHG emission reductions
2. The challenge of transforming and mobilizing the market, accessing private capital (financing), encouraging effective and affordable business model solutions
3. CPUC role vis-à-vis encouraging innovation, transformation and prudent use of (limited) ratpayer $.
    - Incl. how CPUC must have "light touch" on specifics of EE programs, emphasizing broad policies and principles, given both details of EE programs and market, and huge bandwidth of CPUC institutional responsibilities (and realtive to modest staff levels)
4. [Energy 101/201:] Process and metrics for mainstreaming EE (and DR) in the energy resource market, including what does "success" look like?

Subject: CFEE talking point ideas

Some talking points suggestions from Jeanne for CFEE are below – thanks Jeanne, as always! I have a slightly different bent and so am adding mine on top of Jeanne's fantastic outline below. Hopefully, you can steal from both and "ferronize" it accordingly. I'm also attaching a 'mega slide deck' that ED staff put together that has some good visuals and phrasing. If you like any of this stuff, we can put together a 'take away' page if you would like. Let me know.

Michael's thoughts (Jeanne's outline is below):
I think that for this crowd I would suggest that you try to hit the following three categories of points in terms of an overall theme:

1. EE is a the cleanest and cheapest energy resource we have. It's also the hardest thing to do because it is not just a contract with one power plant, but lots of individual actors changing infrastructure and behavior. Would use an example of a commercial or industrial plant so that the members don't automatically jump to their own home/self reference EE in an individual context.

    a. We are a long time leader and yet we continue to push the envelope. Hundreds of programs, and touches every market segment.
    b. I would have a reference (nothing more than a mention) that we continue to need to ensure that we fully count the resource in our planning process and we have made/will make commitments to get EE fully integrated into everyone's process.
    c. Making a shift to longer lasting, deeper savings. This is moving a big ship, but the wheels are in motion.
2. Introducing some competition (the Regional Energy Network model) but the utility will continue to play a dominant role in the space. Hoping to incubate additional ideas. Local governments should play a role (etc.)
3. The ratepayer wallet is not infinite. Financing programs are critical to leverage private capital – we will not get to the market transformation system that we need without it. Ratepayers should not fund all of it, and rebates will only go so far…

That alone is probably enough for the first 5 minutes.

Some additional ideas (if they come up)

- In the transition from the short term 'widgets' model to building transformation/market transformation, data analytics and services model will be really important. (Energy 201)
- There was long term funding for EE in the now expired/sunset PGC – that did have a market signal. The CPUC might try to re-create that market signal since it is our top priority resource. (Energy 101)
- A metric for success should NOT be a declining TRC. We are under statutory mandate to do all cost effective EE. A really high TRC indicates that we are leaving savings on the table. The trick is to get as close to 1.0 as possible on a portfolio basis. (Energy 201)

Subject: CFEE talking point ideas

Here are my notes from the Friday call. Sorry for the delay.

CFEE wants an "Energy 1" level set of remarks, not "Energy 101" and for sure not "Energy 201".

Mark will have 7-10 minutes max.
No slides, can have graphic or data handouts if necessary to convey the message.

Note: Mark will be preceded by Andrew M who will cover AB 758, CEC mission with codes & standards, and IEPR (including ZNE policy, Existing building stock and DR)

CPUC points I suggest mark try to cover:

1. CPUC jurisdiction is IOU only – about 70% of electric sales, 99% of gas deliveries (but less of gas commodity sales). Also water, some telco, rail safety, household moving vans, pink mustache private limos, … What is total annual revenue requirement for the electric and gas utilities we regulate?

2. Talk about how demand side relates to supply side. CPUC aim is to promote cost-effective DSM solutions, using utility ratepayer funds to buy "negawatts" when these are cheaper than new power plants or new energy resource contracts.

3. "A word about DR" – what is it, how mobilized (pricing versus incentive payment for participating).

4. Utility programs by definition are voluntary strategies to mobilize market and encourage investment by owners/occupants of buildings, business, industry, … The challenge is to DRIVE MARKET UPTAKE for these voluntary actions and investments.

5. Any data to characterize how EE, DR, and DG contribute to (mostly electric) resource mix? (e.g. from some Procurement primer?) Similarly, how the 2008 AB 32 Scoping Plan looked at demand-side resources for GHG reduction (doubt the proportional roles will be covered by the Peevey/Weisenmiller panel. May be covered later in Mary Nichols' panel?)

6. Where the DSM $ come from: Perhaps talk about what % of electric and gas revenues go to support "public purpose programs" – EE, low income EE and low income CARE, DG, RPS, … Sound like small %, but in $ this amounts to …. (a big number)

7. Differentiate "ratepayer" $ vs. "Tax payer" $, and what the spending requirements are (prudent, cost-effective, best fit, competitive, …)

This may be as far as 7-10 minutes will take him. If time permits, introduce could try to introduce some Energy "101" issues:

- Talk about the 3 buckets of strategies we oversee – utility-implemented, third-party competitively bid programs (for competition), and local government and RENs.

- New themes emerging
    a. RENs and possibility for more third-party competition
    b. Financing as way to leverage private capital to get positive cash flow solutions without needing to tap ratepayer $ to pay higher and higher rebates and incentives (there is a limit!) and so as to keep rate $ support to reasonable level.
    c. Aspects of DR – wholesale, retail, via controls, pricing, storage
    d. Promises and opportunities of using smart data (maybe this belongs in a later panel)

Mark
I spoke with both Beth Vaughn (who's putting together the agenda for CFEE) and with Florio's/Peevey's office, and I think that we are all set. I think that you will go on day 1 and Florio will join for the dinner that night be there for day 2. Peevey will be there for both days. I tried to see if there was a way to have you be there for both days, but alas Peevey said that he was going to do both days.

Regarding advisors, I think that easily 1 can go with and there shouldn't be a problem with more than 1, if desired.

Juliane – the date of day one is 4/25 so we should block that off now.

Thanks!
Michael

Hi Jeanne,

At this year's CFEE roundtable energy conference to be held April 25-26, the steering committee decided that we should do an "energy 101" conference for the new legislators. We've designed the sessions around the loading order, to explain how California has prioritized actions in the energy sector, and the results of this effort, a decade later. We'd like to invite you to speak on Thursday afternoon and the session looks like this:

2:45 pm – 4:00 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Chair, California Energy Commission
Jeanne Clinton, Special Advisor to the California Public Utilities Commission

Responders:
Rep, IOU
Rep, MUNI
*Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council
Rep, Industry

Roundtable Discussion

Since Andrew McAllister is the lead Commissioner on the 2013 IEPR, with a focus on energy efficiency, I thought the two of you could take the lead in the session, explaining the state's EE policies, status thus far, and the strategy for achieving future goals and targets. Then other stakeholders at the table could respond.

Are you able to attend the conference and participate in this session? If so, is there a good time when I could talk to you so you could help me with the design of this session, and recommendations for other speakers?

Thanks,

Beth

Dear Ms. Sadler,

I am writing to invite you to participate, as an observer, in a Roundtable Conference on Energy on Thursday, April 25 and Friday April 26, 2013 at the Silverado Conference Center in Napa, California.

The conference will specifically focus on the next 8 years as we approach the 2020 deadlines for the California Global Warming Solutions Act (AB32). We will convene California Public Utility Commissioners, California Energy Commissioners, state legislators, members of the Governor's cabinet, and senior industry, environmental and labor leaders to explore the challenges California faces as we continue to implement landmark legislation on reducing greenhouse gas emissions, and bold policies designed to increase efficiency and conservation, and encourage renewable energy and distributed generation.

The specific issue areas for discussion are:

- Integration of the 33% Renewables Portfolio Standard
- Implementation of Cap & Trade, and analysis of the progress of the program after the state's first carbon auction in November
- Transmission Development to extend the impact of renewable sources of energy and help California meet its 33% RPS goal
- Distributed Generation, its impact on California energy forecasts, and electricity rate redesign
- Technological innovations enabling innovations for Smart Grids, and greater achievements in Demand Response, and other conservation programs

PIER 35, SUITE 202 SAN FRANCISCO CA 94133
415 788 1786 www.cfee.net FAX 415 986 2227

The agenda, being developed by a joint steering committee of environmental, labor, and senior executives from across the energy industry spectrum, will consist of briefings on the current plans to implement the existing mandates, updates on what progress has been made to date, and moderated discussions of the ongoing roles of the administration, regulatory bodies and the state legislature.

This working agenda, combined with the roundtable, interactive format, is a timely introduction and progress report on what it will take to meet the goals we have already established and who is going do it.

These conferences, sponsored by the participants, are a critical source of funding for CFEE, a nonprofit 501(c)(3) tax-exempt organization. We will send you an invoice for a conference fee of $350, which will be sufficient to cover our cost of your lodging and group meals. You will be responsible for your incidental expenses and travel costs.

Our conference coordinator, Celeste Cremen, will be making your reservations at the Silverado Conference Center and answering any logistical questions you may have. Please contact Celeste at 415-788-0812 to confirm your participation.

I look forward to speaking with you soon.

Sincerely,

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th— Silverado West Ballroom

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – Fairway Deck

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction – Silverado West Ballroom

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-2:00 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
How California's energy sector produces and delivers power in the state, including the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers
Steve Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

2:00 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission

Roundtable Discussion

*presenter not confirmed

2:30 pm – 3:30 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Commissioner, California Energy Commission
Mark Ferron, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
Ron Nichols, General Manager, Los Angeles Department of Water and Power
Kevin Evans, Vice President and General Manager, Integrated Demand Resources, Building Efficiency, Johnson Controls
Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council

Roundtable Discussion

3:30 pm-3:45 pm – Break

3:45 pm - 5:15 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) How does the renewable energy policy goals fit with other state policies, e.g. vehicle electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Nick Chaset, Governor's Special Advisor for DG, CHP and Energy Storage
Laura Wisland, Senior Energy Analyst, Union of Concerned Scientists
Tom Starrs, VP, Market Development and Policy, SunPower Corporation
Jim Avery, Senior VP, Power Supply, Sempra Energy Utilities

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—Merryvale Vineyards

Friday, April 26th—Silverado West Ballroom

7:30 am - 8:30 am – Continental Breakfast

8:30 am - 9:45 am—SESSION 5: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
How do agencies coordinate and align sometimes conflicting policies? What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change and energy goals?

Mary Nichols, Chairman, Air Resources Board
Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission

*presenter not confirmed

Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission
Steve Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

Roundtable Discussion

9:45 am - 11:00 am—SESSION 6: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What are the costs and benefits involved? As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

Mike Florio, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
John Chillemi, Senior Vice President and President, West Region, NRG
Stuart Hemphill, Senior VP, Power Supply, Southern California Edison
Fong Wan, Senior VP, Energy Procurement, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

11:00 am - 11:15 am – Break

11:15 am - 12:30 pm—SESSION 7: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting our 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals requires electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStasio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District

Re: Materials for Energy Conference

Enclosed are the draft agenda, confirmed invitee list, participation and hotel confirmation form, as well as and directions to the Energy Roundtable Conference in Napa, California.

The conference starts with a buffet lunch on Thursday, April 25th at Noon, at the Conference Facilities at Silverado, with the roundtable beginning promptly at 1:00 p.m.

We have an impressive list of participants at the table and a well-crafted, balanced agenda. As always, adherence to the conference ground rules, specifically in terms of positive contributions designed to educate and promote consensus, is essential for the group to get the most out of our time together.

If you have general questions about the conference, or still need to confirm your attendance, please call Celeste Cremen at 415-788-0812 or celeste@cfee.net. Please email Beth Vaughan at beth@beth411.com for inquiries about the agenda.

If your family or office would like to reach you during the conference, the telephone number at the Silverado Conference Center is 707-257-0200. Also, the attire is casual for the entire conference.

We look forward to seeing you in Napa.

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th— Silverado West Ballroom

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – Fairway Deck

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction – Silverado West Ballroom

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-2:00 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
How California's energy sector produces and delivers power in the state, including the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers
Steve Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

2:00 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission

Roundtable Discussion

*presenter not confirmed

2:30 pm – 3:30 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Commissioner, California Energy Commission
Mark Ferron, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
Ron Nichols, General Manager, Los Angeles Department of Water and Power
Kevin Evans, Vice President and General Manager, Integrated Demand Resources, Building Efficiency, Johnson Controls
Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council

Roundtable Discussion

3:30 pm-3:45 pm – Break

3:45 pm - 5:15 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) How does the renewable energy policy goals fit with other state policies, e.g. vehicle electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Nick Chaset, Governor's Special Advisor for DG, CHP and Energy Storage
Laura Wisland, Senior Energy Analyst, Union of Concerned Scientists
Tom Starrs, VP, Market Development and Policy, SunPower Corporation
Jim Avery, Senior VP, Power Supply, Sempra Energy Utilities

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—Merryvale Vineyards

Friday, April 26th—Silverado West Ballroom

7:30 am - 8:30 am – Continental Breakfast

8:30 am - 9:45 am—SESSION 5: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
How do agencies coordinate and align sometimes conflicting policies? What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change and energy goals?

Mary Nichols, Chairman, Air Resources Board
Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission

*presenter not confirmed

Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission
Steve Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

Roundtable Discussion

9:45 am - 11:00 am—SESSION 6: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What are the costs and benefits involved? As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

Mike Florio, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
John Chillemi, Senior Vice President and President, West Region, NRG
Stuart Hemphill, Senior VP, Power Supply, Southern California Edison
Fong Wan, Senior VP, Energy Procurement, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

11:00 am - 11:15 am – Break

11:15 am - 12:30 pm—SESSION 7: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting our 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals requires electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStasio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
*Heather Sanders, Director, Smart Grid Technologies and Strategies, CAISO
*Wade Crowfoot, Deputy Director, Governor's Office of Planning and Research
Aaron Johnson, Senior Director, Customer Programs, PG&E

Hi Mike and Bob,

Pat and I have been convening conference calls with speakers on the CFEE energy conference panels, but Session 2 on Thursday afternoon is just the two of you, so we thought you could talk with each other about the panel, and/or we can get together at lunch on Thursday to coordinate.

Basically, we'd like the two of you to provide a little bit of history for the new legislators coming to the conference (19 are confirmed). We hoped you could describe how energy policy and the sector has evolved since the energy crisis, and specifically mention the loading order – what led to its adoption in the 2003 Energy Action Plan and how it is still current policy that guides procurement decisions. This will set up the following panels that will discuss: energy efficiency and D-R; renewables and DG; and role of fossil-fired generation. It's meant to be a short session (30 minutes) that provides background for the discussion that will occur over the next two days, so I'd like to suggest no power points; just short, concise remarks (5-7 min each) with time left for questions.

If you would like us to set up a call between the two of you, just let me know – otherwise we'll leave it up to the two of you to coordinate.

Thanks, Beth

Roundtable Discussion

11:00 am - 11:15 am – Break

11:15 am - 12:30 pm—SESSION 7: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting our 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals requires electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

Hi Mike and Bob,

Pat and I have been convening conference calls with speakers on the CFEE energy conference panels, but Session 2 on Thursday afternoon is just the two of you, so we thought you could talk with each other about the panel, and/or we can get together at lunch on Thursday to coordinate.

Basically, we'd like the two of you to provide a little bit of history for the new legislators coming to the conference (19 are confirmed). We hoped you could describe how energy policy and the sector has evolved since the energy crisis, and specifically mention the loading order – what led to its adoption in the 2003 Energy Action Plan and how it is still current policy that guides procurement decisions. This will set up the following panels that will discuss: energy efficiency and D-R; renewables and DG; and role of fossil-fired generation. It's meant to be a short session (30 minutes) that provides background for the discussion that will occur over the next two days, so I'd like to suggest no power points; just short, concise remarks (5-7 min each) with time left for questions.

If you would like us to set up a call between the two of you, just let me know – otherwise we'll leave it up to the two of you to coordinate.

Thanks, Beth

1:45 pm-2:15 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Re: Materials for Energy Conference

Enclosed are the draft agenda, confirmed invitee list, participation and hotel confirmation form, as well as and directions to the Energy Roundtable Conference in Napa, California.

The conference starts with a buffet lunch on Thursday, April 25th at Noon, at the Conference Facilities at Silverado, with the roundtable beginning promptly at 1:00 p.m.

We have an impressive list of participants at the table and a well-crafted, balanced agenda. As always, adherence to the conference ground rules, specifically in terms of positive contributions designed to educate and promote consensus, is essential for the group to get the most out of our time together.

If you have general questions about the conference, or still need to confirm your attendance, please call Celeste Cremen at 415-788-0812 or celeste@cfee.net. Please email Beth Vaughan at beth@beth411.com for inquiries about the agenda.

If your family or office would like to reach you during the conference, the telephone number at the Silverado Conference Center is 707-257-0200. Also, the attire is casual for the entire conference.

We look forward to seeing you in Napa.

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th— Silverado West Ballroom

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – Fairway Deck

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction – Silverado West Ballroom

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-2:00 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
How California's energy sector produces and delivers power in the state, including the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers
Steve Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

2:00 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission

Roundtable Discussion

*presenter not confirmed

2:30 pm – 3:30 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Commissioner, California Energy Commission
Mark Ferron, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
Ron Nichols, General Manager, Los Angeles Department of Water and Power
Kevin Evans, Vice President and General Manager, Integrated Demand Resources, Building Efficiency, Johnson Controls
Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council

Roundtable Discussion

3:30 pm-3:45 pm – Break

3:45 pm - 5:15 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) How does the renewable energy policy goals fit with other state policies, e.g. vehicle electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Nick Chaset, Governor's Special Advisor for DG, CHP and Energy Storage
Laura Wisland, Senior Energy Analyst, Union of Concerned Scientists
Tom Starrs, VP, Market Development and Policy, SunPower Corporation
Jim Avery, Senior VP, Power Supply, Sempra Energy Utilities

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—Merryvale Vineyards

Friday, April 26th—Silverado West Ballroom

7:30 am - 8:30 am – Continental Breakfast

8:30 am - 9:45 am—SESSION 5: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
How do agencies coordinate and align sometimes conflicting policies? What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change and energy goals?

Mary Nichols, Chairman, Air Resources Board
Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission

*presenter not confirmed

Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission
Steve Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

Roundtable Discussion

9:45 am - 11:00 am—SESSION 6: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What are the costs and benefits involved? As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

Mike Florio, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
John Chillemi, Senior Vice President and President, West Region, NRG
Stuart Hemphill, Senior VP, Power Supply, Southern California Edison
Fong Wan, Senior VP, Energy Procurement, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

11:00 am - 11:15 am – Break

11:15 am - 12:30 pm—SESSION 7: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting our 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals requires electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStasio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
*Heather Sanders, Director, Smart Grid Technologies and Strategies, CAISO
*Wade Crowfoot, Deputy Director, Governor's Office of Planning and Research
Aaron Johnson, Senior Director, Customer Programs, PG&E

Re: Materials for Energy Conference

Enclosed are the draft agenda, confirmed invitee list, participation and hotel confirmation form, as well as and directions to the Energy Roundtable Conference in Napa, California.

The conference starts with a buffet lunch on Thursday, April 25th at Noon, at the Conference Facilities at Silverado, with the roundtable beginning promptly at 1:00 p.m.

We have an impressive list of participants at the table and a well-crafted, balanced agenda. As always, adherence to the conference ground rules, specifically in terms of positive contributions designed to educate and promote consensus, is essential for the group to get the most out of our time together.

If you have general questions about the conference, or still need to confirm your attendance, please call Celeste Cremen at 415-788-0812 or celeste@cfee.net. Please email Beth Vaughan at beth@beth411.com for inquiries about the agenda.

If your family or office would like to reach you during the conference, the telephone number at the Silverado Conference Center is 707-257-0200. Also, the attire is casual for the entire conference.

We look forward to seeing you in Napa.

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th— Silverado West Ballroom

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – Fairway Deck

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction – Silverado West Ballroom

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-2:00 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
How California's energy sector produces and delivers power in the state, including the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers
Steve Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

2:00 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission

Roundtable Discussion

*presenter not confirmed

2:30 pm – 3:30 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Commissioner, California Energy Commission
Mark Ferron, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
Ron Nichols, General Manager, Los Angeles Department of Water and Power
Kevin Evans, Vice President and General Manager, Integrated Demand Resources, Building Efficiency, Johnson Controls
Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council

Roundtable Discussion

3:30 pm-3:45 pm – Break

3:45 pm - 5:15 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) How does the renewable energy policy goals fit with other state policies, e.g. vehicle electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Nick Chaset, Governor's Special Advisor for DG, CHP and Energy Storage
Laura Wisland, Senior Energy Analyst, Union of Concerned Scientists
Tom Starrs, VP, Market Development and Policy, SunPower Corporation
Jim Avery, Senior VP, Power Supply, Sempra Energy Utilities

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—Merryvale Vineyards

Friday, April 26th—Silverado West Ballroom

7:30 am - 8:30 am – Continental Breakfast

8:30 am - 9:45 am—SESSION 5: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
How do agencies coordinate and align sometimes conflicting policies? What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change and energy goals?

Mary Nichols, Chairman, Air Resources Board
Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission

*presenter not confirmed

Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission
Steve Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

Roundtable Discussion

9:45 am - 11:00 am—SESSION 6: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What are the costs and benefits involved? As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

Mike Florio, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
John Chillemi, Senior Vice President and President, West Region, NRG
Stuart Hemphill, Senior VP, Power Supply, Southern California Edison
Fong Wan, Senior VP, Energy Procurement, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

11:00 am - 11:15 am – Break

11:15 am - 12:30 pm—SESSION 7: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting our 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals requires electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStasio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
*Heather Sanders, Director, Smart Grid Technologies and Strategies, CAISO
*Wade Crowfoot, Deputy Director, Governor's Office of Planning and Research
Aaron Johnson, Senior Director, Customer Programs, PG&E

Re: Materials for Energy Conference

Enclosed are the draft agenda, confirmed invitee list, participation and hotel confirmation form, as well as and directions to the Energy Roundtable Conference in Napa, California.

The conference starts with a buffet lunch on Thursday, April 25th at Noon, at the Conference Facilities at Silverado, with the roundtable beginning promptly at 1:00 p.m.

We have an impressive list of participants at the table and a well-crafted, balanced agenda. As always, adherence to the conference ground rules, specifically in terms of positive contributions designed to educate and promote consensus, is essential for the group to get the most out of our time together.

If you have general questions about the conference, or still need to confirm your attendance, please call Celeste Cremen at 415-788-0812 or celeste@cfee.net. Please email Beth Vaughan at beth@beth411.com for inquiries about the agenda.

If your family or office would like to reach you during the conference, the telephone number at the Silverado Conference Center is 707-257-0200. Also, the attire is casual for the entire conference.

We look forward to seeing you in Napa.

11:15 am - 12:30 pm—SESSION 7: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting our 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals requires electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

Re: Materials for Energy Conference

Enclosed are the draft agenda, confirmed invitee list, participation and hotel confirmation form, as well as and directions to the Energy Roundtable Conference in Napa, California.

The conference starts with a buffet lunch on Thursday, April 25th at Noon, at the Conference Facilities at Silverado, with the roundtable beginning promptly at 1:00 p.m.

We have an impressive list of participants at the table and a well-crafted, balanced agenda. As always, adherence to the conference ground rules, specifically in terms of positive contributions designed to educate and promote consensus, is essential for the group to get the most out of our time together.

If you have general questions about the conference, or still need to confirm your attendance, please call Celeste Cremen at 415-788-0812 or celeste@cfee.net. Please email Beth Vaughan at beth@beth411.com for inquiries about the agenda.

If your family or office would like to reach you during the conference, the telephone number at the Silverado Conference Center is 707-257-0200. Also, the attire is casual for the entire conference.

We look forward to seeing you in Napa.

CFEE Energy Conference: Transitioning to a Clean Energy Future

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th— Silverado West Ballroom

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – Fairway Deck

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction – Silverado West Ballroom

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-2:00 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
How California's energy sector produces and delivers power in the state, including the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers
Steve Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

2:00 pm-2:30 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Bob Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission

Roundtable Discussion

*presenter not confirmed

2:30 pm – 3:30 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Commissioner, California Energy Commission
Mark Ferron, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
Ron Nichols, General Manager, Los Angeles Department of Water and Power
Kevin Evans, Vice President and General Manager, Integrated Demand Resources, Building Efficiency, Johnson Controls
Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council

Roundtable Discussion

3:30 pm-3:45 pm – Break

3:45 pm - 5:15 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) How does the renewable energy policy goals fit with other state policies, e.g. vehicle electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Nick Chaset, Governor's Special Advisor for DG, CHP and Energy Storage
Laura Wisland, Senior Energy Analyst, Union of Concerned Scientists
Tom Starrs, VP, Market Development and Policy, SunPower Corporation
Jim Avery, Senior VP, Power Supply, Sempra Energy Utilities

Mary, Mike, Bob & Steve,

We have the four of you speaking in the first session on Friday morning, "Aligning Energy and Climate Policies". The idea here is to have the "energy principals" talk about how they coordinate activities between their agencies, e.g. on the development of policies and the challenges of implementation. With your busy schedules we are not going to have the time for a conference call prior to this session. Let's plan to meet up during the reception/dinner on Thursday night (Mary will arrive at the conference after her Board meeting) to discuss who will say what, and in what order. You are all seasoned veterans of CFEE conferences, so you know that we ask speakers to prepare brief opening remarks (5-7 min each) to set the stage for the roundtable discussion (please no power point presentations). No doubt participants will have questions for the four of you, so I expect this session to be mostly ad lib.

Thanks for participating – we have an impressive group (see the attached participant list), with 20 legislators confirmed. If you or your staff have any questions or comments, please do not hesitate to contact me on my cell: 925-408-5142.

April 25-26, 2013
Silverado Conference Center, Napa, California

Thursday, April 25th— Silverado West Ballroom

12:00 pm-1:00 pm – Buffet Lunch – Fairway Deck

1:00 pm-1:15 pm – Welcome and Introduction – Silverado West Ballroom

Patrick F. Mason, President, CFEE

1:15 pm-1:45 pm—SESSION 1: California Energy 101
How California's energy sector produces and delivers power in the state, including the challenges of operating and maintaining the grid.

Jan Smutny-Jones, Executive Director, Independent Energy Producers
Steven Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

1:45 pm-2:15 pm—SESSION 2: The Cornerstone of California's Energy Policy – The Loading Order
Since the energy crisis, state policy has been that the overarching goal is for California's energy to be reliable, affordable, technologically advanced, and environmentally-sound. The loading order, first adopted in the 2003 Energy Action Plan, describes the priority sequence for actions to address future energy needs. The loading order identifies energy efficiency and demand response as the State's preferred means of meeting growing energy needs. After cost-effective efficiency and demand response, we rely on renewable sources of power and distributed generation, such as combined heat and power applications. To the extent efficiency, demand response, renewable resources, and distributed generation are unable to satisfy increasing energy and capacity needs, we support clean and efficient fossil-fired generation. Concurrently, the bulk electricity transmission grid and distribution facility infrastructure must be improved to support growing demand centers and the interconnection of new generation, both on the utility and customer side of the meter. Energy procurement over the last decade has been guided by these principles. How was the loading order established and why has it endured for over a decade? Is it still effective policy?

During the sessions to follow, we will examine the detailed policies that evolved from the loading order, the related goals, status towards achieving those goals, and next steps. We will also consider how these key policies line up with California's climate change policies.

Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Robert Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission

Roundtable Discussion

2:15 pm – 3:30 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response
What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Andrew McAllister, Commissioner, California Energy Commission
Mark Ferron, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
Ron Nichols, General Manager, Los Angeles Department of Water and Power
Kevin Evans, Vice President and General Manager, Integrated Demand Resources, Building Efficiency, Johnson Controls
Sheryl Carter, Co-Director Energy Program, Natural Resources Defense Council

Roundtable Discussion

3:30 pm-3:45 pm – Break

3:45 pm - 5:15 pm—SESSION 4: Renewable Resources and Distributed Generation
What are our renewable goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change policy? The state has a goal to procure 33% of the state's generation from renewable resources, and reportedly the utilities have executed sufficient power purchase agreements to exceed this goal. What is the current status towards achieving these goals? What are the challenges (e.g. How will the influx of renewable and DG energy impact the transmission and distribution system? Can we expect all of these contracts to deliver?) How does the renewable energy policy goals fit with other state policies, e.g. vehicle electrification and energy storage policies? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Nick Chaset, Governor's Special Advisor for DG, CHP and Energy Storage
Laura Wisland, Senior Energy Analyst, Union of Concerned Scientists
Tom Starrs, VP, Market Development and Policy, SunPower Corporation
Jim Avery, Senior VP, Power Supply, Sempra Energy Utilities

Roundtable Discussion

6:00 pm – Reception and Dinner—Merryvale Vineyards

Friday, April 26th—Silverado West Ballroom

7:30 am - 8:30 am – Continental Breakfast

8:30 am - 9:45 am—SESSION 5: Aligning Energy and Climate Policies
How do agencies coordinate and align sometimes conflicting policies? What has been the impact of AB 32 on California's electricity sector in terms of both the implementation of Scoping Plan measures, and the cap-and-trade program? What transformative changes are needed to meet 2050 climate change and energy goals?

Mary Nichols, Chairman, Air Resources Board
Mike Peevey, President, California Public Utilities Commission
Robert Weisenmiller, Chair, California Energy Commission
Steven Berberich, President & CEO, California Independent System Operator

Roundtable Discussion

9:45 am - 11:00 am—SESSION 6: Role of Clean and Efficient Fossil Fuel Generation
Integrating renewables into the system puts a new focus on the role and attributes of fossil fuel resources. What are the challenges and what is the strategy for long term procurement? What are the costs and benefits involved? As once-thru-cooling plants retire and the future of SONGS is uncertain, how have state policies evolved and what does the future hold?

Mike Florio, Commissioner, California Public Utilities Commission
John Chillemi, Senior Vice President and President, West Region, NRG
Stuart Hemphill, Senior VP, Power Supply, Southern California Edison
Fong Wan, Senior VP, Energy Procurement, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

11:00 am - 11:15 am – Break

11:15 am - 12:30 pm—SESSION 7: Planning for an Evolving Electricity Industry Structure
How do we accommodate and integrate this evolving structure both in long-term planning and procurement, but also in business/regulatory models or structures? This includes increasing levels of energy efficiency and demand response; a smarter grid, new types of electric services enabled by them; electric vehicles; intermittent renewables and flexible fossil resources; rate design issues, etc. Are we too insular in our approach to meeting our future energy needs in a carbon constrained economy? For example, meeting our 2020-2050 greenhouse gas goals requires electrification of the transportation sector—do our policies and structures recognize this new reality?

John DiStasio, General Manager and CEO, Sacramento Municipal Utilities District
Heather Sanders, Director, Smart Grid Technologies and Strategies, CAISO
Wade Crowfoot, Deputy Director, Governor's Office of Planning and Research
Aaron Johnson, Senior Director, Customer Programs, PG&E

Roundtable Discussion

12:30 pm – Closing Remarks

12:45 pm - Adjourn

The idea here is to have the energy principals talk about how they coordinate activities between their agencies, e.g. on the development of policies and the challenges of implementation. With your busy schedules we are not going to have the time for a conference call prior to this session. Let s plan to meet up during the reception/dinner on Thursday night (Mary will arrive at the conference after her Board meeting) to discuss who will say what, and in what order. You are all seasoned veterans of CFEE conferences, so you know that we ask speakers to prepare brief opening remarks (5-7 min each) to set the stage for the roundtable discussion (please no power point presentations). No doubt participants will have questions for the four of you, so I expect this session to be mostly ad lib.

Yes, great info to have for comparisson to our Massachusetts rep in tomorrow's meeting.
FYI, I personally prefer to look at the "PAC" perspective, since that looks at how well we are usiing ratepayer funds (including incentives).
A note about the "TRC" is that it counts total cost for a project or measure (ignoring any incentive contributions) but captures only the energy benefits and GHG benefits. If there are other "non-energy benefits" such as improved residential comfort or sound deadening (2-paned windows), or business gains from improved occupant comfort and productivity or product improvements from greater precision with (e.g.) heating or drying controls, … THOSE are not captured by the TRC case.

Also, label on bottom line should be benefit/cost ratio, not "TRC"

I am happy to discuss the details of this calculation if there are any follow up questions--this is calculated based on lifecycle savings, which people often miscalculate the cost/benefit of EE using first year savings, which makes it look mistakenly high.

Hi Andrew,

It was great to catch up last Thursday. As discussed, I am attaching my rough talking points that I cobbled together from material provided by Jeanne and Michael to use during our session on EE at the CFEE Conference on Thursday. Please let me know if you have any comments or if you have any areas that, based on what you plan to say, I should avoid or emphasize.

Talking Points on EE for CFEE Conference

1. Background on EE

Ferron self-bio: As an outsider, extremely respectful of CA long, and successful history with EE.
> Rosenfeld curve: In 1980, CA was at parity with rest of US, now CA is twice as efficient

- As a fraction of its economy, California's electricity bill is one-third lower than the national average and just over half that of Texas and Florida
- If CA were as energy inefficient as TX, then bills would be $30 billion/year higher
- But we spend a lot: approx $1 billion annually in IOU EE programs alone.
- in 2008, California utilities accounted for between a quarter and one- third of the entire U.S. industry's entire efficiency investments

> EE represents 15% of the total GHG reductions (1990 levels by 2020) more than the 12% from RPS

2. CPUC role involves encouraging innovation, transformation and prudent use of (limited) ratpayer $.

- CPUC jurisdiction is IOU only – about 70% of electric sales, 99% of gas deliveries (but less of gas commodity sales). Also water, some telco, rail safety, household moving vans, pink mustache private limos,
    - Sets rates, determines revenue requirement
    - Oversees IOU EE budgets and plans
- Per 2005 decision, IOUs administer EE programs approved by CPUC. Beginning in 2006, Commission staff (Energy Division) evaluate IOU programs
- Statutory mandates :Foundational
    - "Just and reasonable" rates – PU Code 451
    - "All practicable and cost-effective" conservation / EE – PU Code 701(b)
- More recent provisions
    - "All cost-effective EE" - PU Code Sections 454.5.(b)(9)(C) ("loading order" / electric EE procurement provision)
    - Set EE goals based on "all cost-effective EE" - PU Code 454.55 (electric) and 454.56 (gas)
    - Electric PGC surcharge – PU Code 381 and 399 (now expired)
    - Natural Gas PPP surcharge – PU Code 890-899 (no sunset)
- Program design
    - CPUC sets broad policy goals; IOUs design programs; CPUC monitors ex post performance
    - CPUC must have "light touch" on specifics of EE programs, emphasizing broad policies and principles, given both details of EE programs and market, and huge bandwidth of CPUC institutional responsibilities (and realtive to modest staff levels)

3. Challenges and Responses:

Challenges

1. EE's declining cost effectiveness: is both good news (harvesting lower lying fruit) and bad news (harder to achieve savings): We are under statutory mandate to do all cost effective EE. A really high TRC indicates that we are leaving savings on the table.

2010-12 Portfolio	TRC	PAC
Cost/kWh	$0.09	$0.06
Gross Benefits/kWh	$0.12	$0.12
Net benefits /kWh	$0.03	$0.06
Benefit/Cost Ratio	1.34	2.03

"TRC" counts total cost for a project or measure (ignoring any incentive contributions) but captures only the energy benefits and GHG benefits. TRC excludes other "non-energy benefits" such as improved residential comfort or sound deadening (2-paned windows), or business gains from improved occupant comfort and productivity or product improvements from greater precision with (e.g.) heating or drying controls. "PAC" measures how well we are using ratepayer funds (including incentives).

2. Over reliance on CFL (2/3 of 2010-12 savings) = lack of innovation; quality control vs modeling assumptions
   - But growing potential for Commercial and residential building

3. First cost barriers to EE: positive ROE but high up-front costs => lack of access to capital significant barrier

4. Disconnect with CAISO / CEC on forecasts: "additional achievable" (AKA "uncommitted" = continuation of programs but not yet funded) EE saving discounted; DR not seen as dispatchable, reliable resource
   - Utility programs by definition are voluntary strategies to mobilize market and encourage investment by owners/occupants of buildings, business, industry, … The challenge is to DRIVE MARKET UPTAKE for these voluntary actions and investments.

Responses

1. "Transition" EE decision for 2013-14
   a. Expand deep retrofit strategies for existing building stock
   b. Leverage ratepayer energy efficiency funds with private financing: OBF, ARRA programs + 4 pilots
   c. Increase the delivery of efficiency programs by third parties and local governments => RENs
   d. Promote an integrated approach to Codes and Standards
   e. Encourage innovation
2. EE as long-term resource
   a. Coordination with CEC and CAISO
   b. Long-term procurement?
   c. Threat to long-term funding of EE and DR programs (e.g., PGC)
3. DR as a resource focus:
   a. Demand Analysis Working Group (DAWG): Energy Savings, DG, Demand Forecasting

      The DAWG sets methods, inputs, and assumptions to be used for long-term energy demand assessments and forecasts to improve quantification of energy efficiency in the demand forecasts, including:
      - Inputs to and development of demand forecasts; and
      - Modeling assumptions and techniques used to produce the forecasts incorporating load-modifying activities such as energy efficiency into demand forecasts

b. Demand Response Measurement and Evaluation Cmtee (DRMEC)
The DRMEC provides oversight of all statewide and non-statewide demand response program evaluations and load impact assessments. DRMEC process evaluations consist of in-depth examinations of the design, delivery, and operations of DR programs in order to improve the ability of programs to achieve their energy savings and accomplish program goals.

Talking Points on EE for CFEE Conference

1. Background on EE

Ferron self-bio: As an outsider, extremely respectful of CA long, and successful history with EE.
> Rosenfeld curve: In 1980, CA was at parity with rest of US, now CA is twice as efficient

- As a fraction of its economy, California's electricity bill is one-third lower than the national average and just over half that of Texas and Florida
- If CA were as energy inefficient as TX, then bills would be $30 billion/year higher
- But we spend a lot: approx $1 billion annually in IOU EE programs alone.
- in 2008, California utilities accounted for between a quarter and one- third of the entire U.S. industry's entire efficiency investments

> EE represents 15% of the total GHG reductions (1990 levels by 2020) more than the 12% from RPS

2. CPUC role involves encouraging innovation, transformation and prudent use of (limited) ratpayer $.

- CPUC jurisdiction is IOU only – about 70% of electric sales, 99% of gas deliveries (but less of gas commodity sales). Also water, some telco, rail safety, household moving vans, pink mustache private limos,
    - Sets rates, determines revenue requirement
    - Oversees IOU EE budgets and plans
- Per 2005 decision, IOUs administer EE programs approved by CPUC. Beginning in 2006, Commission staff (Energy Division) evaluate IOU programs
- Statutory mandates :Foundational
    - "Just and reasonable" rates – PU Code 451
    - "All practicable and cost-effective" conservation / EE – PU Code 701(b)
- More recent provisions
    - "All cost-effective EE" - PU Code Sections 454.5.(b)(9)(C) ("loading order" / electric EE procurement provision)
    - Set EE goals based on "all cost-effective EE" - PU Code 454.55 (electric) and 454.56 (gas)
    - Electric PGC surcharge – PU Code 381 and 399 (now expired)
    - Natural Gas PPP surcharge – PU Code 890-899 (no sunset)
- Program design
    - CPUC sets broad policy goals; IOUs design programs; CPUC monitors ex post performance
    - CPUC must have "light touch" on specifics of EE programs, emphasizing broad policies and principles, given both details of EE programs and market, and huge bandwidth of CPUC institutional responsibilities (and realtive to modest staff levels)

>>>> Background slides from Primer presentation

2013-14 EE Portfolio Organization

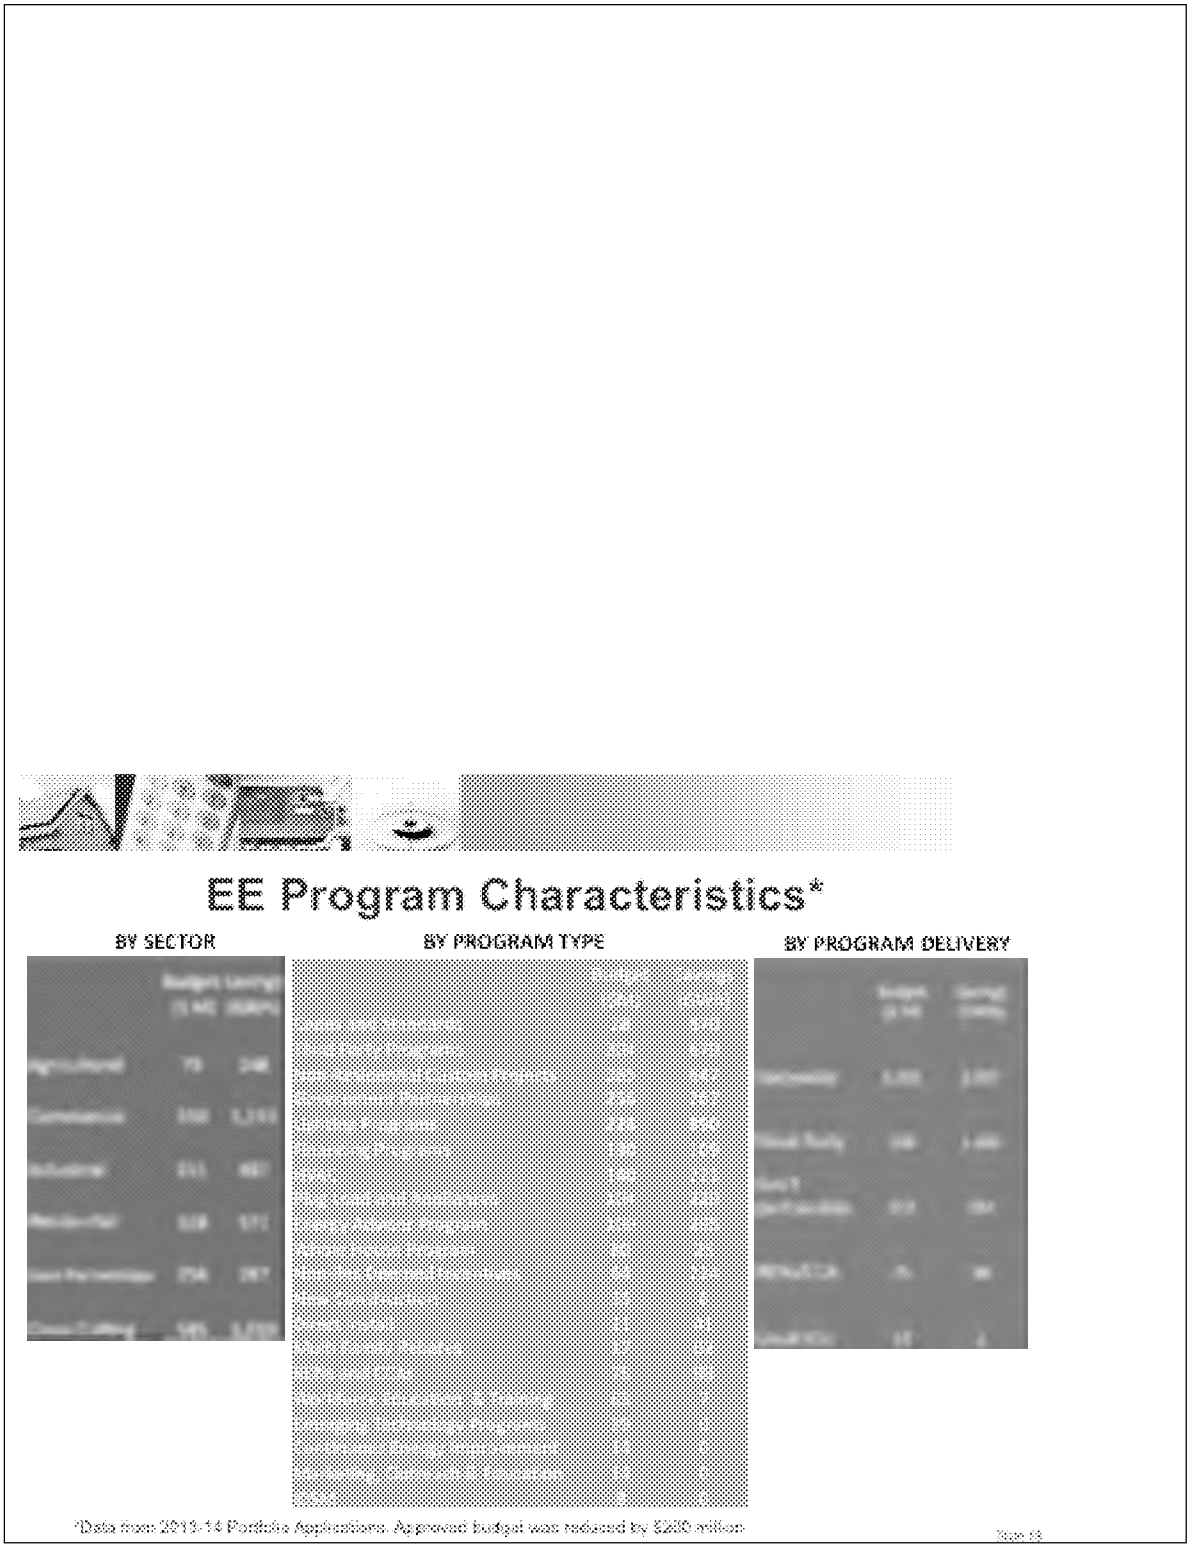
[%] = Percent of total budget ($1.9B Total)
[#] = Number of individual programs
* ME&O budgets are currently pending in an application before Commission



3. Challenges and Responses:

Challenges

1. EE's declining cost effectiveness: is both good news (harvesting lower lying fruit) and bad news (harder to achieve savings): We are under statutory mandate to do all cost effective EE. A really high TRC indicates that we are leaving savings on the table.

2010-12 Portfolio	TRC	PAC
Cost/kWh	$0.09	$0.06
Gross Benefits/kWh	$0.12	$0.12
Net benefits /kWh	$0.03	$0.06
Benefit/Cost Ratio	1.34	2.03

"TRC" counts total cost for a project or measure (ignoring any incentive contributions) but captures only the energy benefits and GHG benefits. TRC excludes other "non-energy benefits" such as improved residential comfort or sound deadening (2-paned windows), or business gains from improved occupant comfort and productivity or product improvements from greater precision with (e.g.) heating or drying controls. "PAC" measures how well we are using ratepayer funds (including incentives).

2. Over reliance on CFL (2/3 of 2010-12 savings) = lack of innovation; quality control vs modeling assumptions
   - But growing potential for Commercial and residential building

3. First cost barriers to EE: positive ROE but high up-front costs => lack of access to capital significant barrier

4. Disconnect with CAISO / CEC on forecasts: "additional achievable" (AKA "uncommitted" = continuation of programs but not yet funded) EE saving discounted; DR not seen as dispatchable, reliable resource
   - Utility programs by definition are voluntary strategies to mobilize market and encourage investment by owners/occupants of buildings, business, industry, … The challenge is to DRIVE MARKET UPTAKE for these voluntary actions and investments.

Responses

1. "Transition" EE decision for 2013-14
   a. Expand deep retrofit strategies for existing building stock
   b. Leverage ratepayer energy efficiency funds with private financing: OBF, ARRA programs + 4 pilots
   c. Increase the delivery of efficiency programs by third parties and local governments => RENs
   d. Promote an integrated approach to Codes and Standards
   e. Encourage innovation
2. EE as long-term resource
   a. Coordination with CEC and CAISO
   b. Long-term procurement?
   c. Threat to long-term funding of EE and DR programs (e.g., PGC)
3. DR as a resource focus:
   a. Demand Analysis Working Group (DAWG): Energy Savings, DG, Demand Forecasting

      The DAWG sets methods, inputs, and assumptions to be used for long-term energy demand assessments and forecasts to improve quantification of energy efficiency in the demand forecasts, including:
      - Inputs to and development of demand forecasts; and
      - Modeling assumptions and techniques used to produce the forecasts incorporating load-modifying activities such as energy efficiency into demand forecasts

b. Demand Response Measurement and Evaluation Cmtee (DRMEC)
The DRMEC provides oversight of all statewide and non-statewide demand response program evaluations and load impact assessments. DRMEC process evaluations consist of in-depth examinations of the design, delivery, and operations of DR programs in order to improve the ability of programs to achieve their energy savings and accomplish program goals.

1. Single Family Direct Loan Program (with Loan Loss Reserves);
2. Energy Finance Line-Item Charge;
3. Master metered multi-family with OBR: CE is debt service reserve fund
4. Small Business OBR Lease providers with credit enhancement

Hi Andrew,

It was great to catch up last Thursday. As discussed, I am attaching my rough talking points that I cobbled together from material provided by Jeanne and Michael to use during our session on EE at the CFEE Conference on Thursday. Please let me know if you have any comments or if you have any areas that, based on what you plan to say, I should avoid or emphasize.

Cheers

Mark

Hi Josie,

I'm not going to go to the conference. I have too much to do.

I cancelled my hotel reservation. They said it was ok. The confirmation no. is CARX453918.

Also, I left a message for Celeste Cremen, who was listed as the conference coordinator. But, if we could follow up tomorrow, I think maybe we can get the conf. fee back.

Thanks,

Char

Yes going for 2 days (to work the sidelines on EE matters). Due to Prop 39 meeting/call Thurs 9:30 - 11:00 I had expected to do last 1/2 hour by phone from car. (No time for golf; haven't taken up that sport)
Would be valuable to ride together and talk. Don't see you that often.

Re: Materials for Energy Conference

Enclosed are the draft agenda, confirmed invitee list, participation and hotel confirmation form, as well as and directions to the Energy Roundtable Conference in Napa, California.

The conference starts with a buffet lunch on Thursday, April 25th at Noon, at the Conference Facilities at Silverado, with the roundtable beginning promptly at 1:00 p.m.

We have an impressive list of participants at the table and a well-crafted, balanced agenda. As always, adherence to the conference ground rules, specifically in terms of positive contributions designed to educate and promote consensus, is essential for the group to get the most out of our time together.

If you have general questions about the conference, or still need to confirm your attendance, please call Celeste Cremen at 415-788-0812 or celeste@cfee.net. Please email Beth Vaughan at beth@beth411.com for inquiries about the agenda.

If your family or office would like to reach you during the conference, the telephone number at the Silverado Conference Center is 707-257-0200. Also, the attire is casual for the entire conference.

We look forward to seeing you in Napa.

Re: Materials for Energy Conference

Enclosed are the draft agenda, confirmed invitee list, participation and hotel confirmation form, as well as and directions to the Energy Roundtable Conference in Napa, California.

The conference starts with a buffet lunch on Thursday, April 25th at Noon, at the Conference Facilities at Silverado, with the roundtable beginning promptly at 1:00 p.m.

We have an impressive list of participants at the table and a well-crafted, balanced agenda. As always, adherence to the conference ground rules, specifically in terms of positive contributions designed to educate and promote consensus, is essential for the group to get the most out of our time together.

If you have general questions about the conference, or still need to confirm your attendance, please call Celeste Cremen at 415-788-0812 or celeste@cfee.net. Please email Beth Vaughan at beth@beth411.com for inquiries about the agenda.

If your family or office would like to reach you during the conference, the telephone number at the Silverado Conference Center is 707-257-0200. Also, the attire is casual for the entire conference.

We look forward to seeing you in Napa.

Joint Committees
- Legislative Audit
- Arts
- Rules
- Fairs, Allocation, and Classification

Jean Fuller (R)

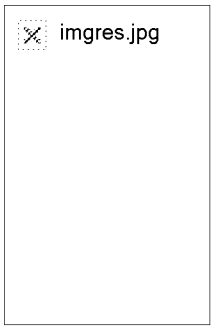
A Republican, she was previously a member of the California Assembly and the Superintendent of Schools for the Bakersfield City School District.
Assumed office December 6, 2010

Ted Gaines (R)



He won a January 4, 2011, special election to replace the late Dave Cox and took office two days later. Prior to his election to the Senate, Gaines was a California State Assemblyman, representing the 4th Assembly district, which is centered on the suburbs of Placer County, which are located east of Sacramento.

A Republican, Gaines is an opponent of what he describes as "big government social programs." [1] Gaines, a local businessman, holds views on issues that can be generally classified as conservative, which puts him in line with the area's leanings (Placer County has not voted for a Democratic nominee for President since Jimmy Carter).

Gaines is the owner of Point West Insurance which makes its headquarters in the Point West business park district of Sacramento.

Gaines and his wife Beth live in Roseville (where the Gaines family has resided for five generations) with their 6 children—5 girls and 1 boy.

Ricardo Lara

A native of Commerce, California, Lara attended Los Angeles Unified School District schools and graduated from San Diego State University, where he earned a Bachelor of Arts degree and served as student body president.[2][3] He is currently pursuing a master's degree from the University of Southern California.

A longtime Assembly staffer, Lara worked as Chief of Staff to Assemblyman Marco Antonio Firebaugh (D–South Gate) when Firebaugh served as Majority Leader. Lara later served as Fabian Nuñez's district director during Nuñez's time as Speaker. He then served as communications director for Assemblyman Kevin de León (D–Los Angeles).

- 2008 State Assembly campaign: Lara was a candidate for the Assembly in 2008, seeking the Democratic nomination in the Los Angeles-based 46th district. He faced a number of well-connected challengers, including John Pérez, the cousin of Los Angeles mayor Antonio Villaraigosa. Following a meeting at Getty House, Villaraigosa's official residence, Pérez became the consensus candidate and the other candidates, including Lara, dropped their campaigns.[3] Although the challengers' names remained on the ballot, Pérez won the primary comfortably and took the seat before being elected to the Speakership in late 2009.

Lara was subsequently appointed by Villaraigosa to the powerful Los Angeles Planning Commission, where he served until resigning to focus on his 2010 Assembly run in the 50th district. Running for the seat required Lara to move into the district, which does not include any part of the city of Los Angeles. Because Los Angeles planning commissioners are required to be residents of the city of Los Angeles, Therefore, Lara couldn't run for the 50th Assembly district while serving on the commission. He announced his candidacy for the seat in early 2009 and became a resident of Bell Gardens.[4]

- 2010 State Assembly campaign: Lara faced three primary challengers in his 2010 Assembly bid, two of whom had held elected office in the district. With the support of the state and local Democratic parties as well as the Los Angeles County Federation of Labor, Lara prevailed handily.[5] He faced a Republican opponent in the general election and won overwhelmingly. Lara was sworn in as an assemblyman on December 6, 2010 and was appointed the chairman of the joint legislative audit committee. He also serves on the following committees: appropriations; banking and finance; higher education; and water, parks, and wildlife. He also chairs the select committee on financial empowerment.

>> 2012 State Senate campaign: On October 19, 2011, Lara announced plans to run for the California Senate in the newly-drawn 33rd district in 2012. The district, which has a Hispanic majority, includes many of the communities he currently represents in the Assembly as well as much of the city of Long Beach. Assemblywoman Bonnie Lowenthal (D–Long Beach), ex-wife of current senator Alan Lowenthal, had already announced her intention to run for the seat, setting off a high-profile contest between two Assembly Democrats. Lara swiftly lined up a number of endorsements, including from Congresswoman Linda Sanchez, the California Nurses Association and the California Latino Legislative Caucus, the last of which declared the race their number one target seat.[7][8] An opinion poll also showed Lara favored to win the seat, giving him a 6-point lead over Lowenthal.[9] Two weeks after Lara's entry into the race, Lowenthal dropped her bid for the Senate and announced that she would instead seek re-election to the Assembly.

Lara is openly gay.[11] He is one of eight members of the California Legislative LGBT Caucus.

Fran Pavley

Frances J. "Fran" Pavley (born November 11, 1948[1]) is a Democratic politician who currently represents California's 27th State Senate district, including portions of Los Angeles and Ventura counties in the California State Senate. She previously represented Senate District 23, served as a state assemblywoman, and served as the first mayor of Agoura Hills. She served as a Mayor and Councilmember for four terms. She has lived in Agoura Hills with her husband, Andy, for over 30 years, where they raised their two children, as well as four guide dogs.

Lois Walk

In 2008, Lois Wolk was elected to represent the Fifth Senate District, which included most of Solano and Yolo Counties, as well as parts of San Joaquin and Sacramento County. In 2012, Wolk was re-elected to the Senate to represent the newly redrawn Third Senate District, which includes all of Napa and Solano Counties, most of Yolo County, several cities in Sonoma and Contra Costa Counties, and a portion of Sacramento County.

Senator Wolk chairs the Senate Governance and Finance Committee, the Agriculture Subcommittee on Olive Oil Production and Emerging Products, and the Select Committee on Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta. She also serves on numerous committees, including the Senate Standing Committees on Agriculture; Energy, Utilities and Communications; Health; and Natural Resources and Water.

Senator Wolk is also the Senate's representative on the Delta Protection Commission, charged with protecting and maintaining the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta's environmental, agricultural, and recreational values—and is a liaison advisor to the Delta Conservancy Board, tasked with supporting efforts that advance both environmental protection and the economic well-being of Delta residents. Additionally, she serves on the California Wildlife Conservation Board's Legislative Advisory Committee, helping to allocate funding for important environmental projects throughout the state.

Prior to his election to the Senate, Gaines was a California State Assemblyman, representing the 4th Assembly district, which is centered on the suburbs of Placer County, which are located east of Sacramento.
A Republican, Gaines is an opponent of what he describes as "big government social programs." [1] Gaines, a local businessman, holds views on issues that can be generally classified as conservative, which puts him in line with the area's leanings (Placer County has not voted for a Democratic nominee for President since Jimmy Carter).
Gaines is the owner of Point West Insurance which makes its headquarters in the Point West business park district of Sacramento. Gaines and his wife Beth live in Roseville (where the Gaines family has resided for five generations) with their 6 children—5 girls and 1 boy.

Ricardo Lara
<7b8cd0a3ceb1b29edd8b9752955726c7.jpeg>
A native of Commerce, California, Lara attended Los Angeles Unified School District schools and graduated from San Diego State University, where he earned a Bachelor of Arts degree and served as student body president.[2][3] He is currently pursuing a master's degree from the University of Southern California.
A longtime Assembly staffer, Lara worked as Chief of Staff to Assemblyman Marco Antonio Firebaugh (D–South Gate) when Firebaugh served as Majority Leader. Lara later served as Fabian Nuñez's district director during Nuñez's time as Speaker. He then served as communications director for Assemblyman Kevin de León (D–Los Angeles).
- 2008 State Assembly campaign: Lara was a candidate for the Assembly in 2008, seeking the Democratic nomination in the Los Angeles-based 46th district. He faced a number of well-connected challengers, including John Pérez, the cousin of Los Angeles mayor Antonio Villaraigosa. Following a meeting at Getty House, Villaraigosa's official residence, Pérez became the consensus candidate and the other candidates, including Lara, dropped their campaigns.[3] Although the challengers' names remained on the ballot, Pérez won the primary comfortably and took the seat before being elected to the Speakership in late 2009.
Lara was subsequently appointed by Villaraigosa to the powerful Los Angeles Planning Commission, where he served until resigning to focus on his 2010 Assembly run in the 50th district. Running for the seat required Lara to move into the district, which does not include any part of the city of Los Angeles. Because Los Angeles planning commissioners are required to be residents of the city of Los Angeles, Therefore, Lara couldn't run for the 50th Assembly district while serving on the commission. He announced his candidacy for the seat in early 2009 and became a resident of Bell Gardens.[4]
- 2010 State Assembly campaign: Lara faced three primary challengers in his 2010 Assembly bid, two of whom had held elected office in the district. With the support of the state and local Democratic parties as well as the Los Angeles County Federation of Labor, Lara prevailed handily.[5] He faced a Republican opponent in the general election and won overwhelmingly. Lara was sworn in as an assemblyman on December 6, 2010 and was appointed the chairman of the joint legislative audit committee. He also serves on the following committees: appropriations; banking and finance; higher education; and water, parks, and wildlife. He also chairs the select committee on financial empowerment.
>> 2012 State Senate campaign: On October 19, 2011, Lara announced plans to run for the California Senate in the newly-drawn 33rd district in 2012. The district, which has a Hispanic majority, includes many of the communities he currently represents in the Assembly as well as much of the city of Long Beach. Assemblywoman Bonnie Lowenthal (D–Long Beach), ex-wife of current senator Alan Lowenthal, had already announced her intention to run for the seat, setting off a high-profile contest between two Assembly Democrats. Lara swiftly lined up a number of endorsements, including from Congresswoman Linda Sanchez, the California Nurses Association and the California Latino Legislative Caucus, the last of which declared the race their number one target seat.[7][8] An opinion poll also showed Lara favored to win the seat, giving him a 6-point lead over Lowenthal.[9] Two weeks after Lara's entry into the race, Lowenthal dropped her bid for the Senate and announced that she would instead seek re-election to the Assembly.

Lara is openly gay.[11] He is one of eight members of the California Legislative LGBT Caucus.

Hi Andrew,

It was great to catch up last Thursday. As discussed, I am attaching my rough talking points that I cobbled together from material provided by Jeanne and Michael to use during our session on EE at the CFEE Conference on Thursday. Please let me know if you have any comments or if you have any areas that, based on what you plan to say, I should avoid or emphasize.

Cheers

McAllister CFEE talking points: 4/25/13

2:15 pm – 3:30 pm—SESSION 3: Pushing the Envelope on Energy Efficiency and Demand Response

What are our energy efficiency goals in terms of state and local energy policies, and climate change goals? What is the current policy on demand response? What has been achieved and what is our current status? How can we capture 100% of cost-effective energy efficiency? What are the challenges? What are the costs and benefits involved? What are the next steps?

Roundtable Discussion

Overview: California Leadership. The CPUC's Zero Net Energy Action Plan and the Energy Commission's Integrated Energy Policy Report (IEPR) set zero net energy goals for new homes by 2020, and new commercial buildings by 2030.[1] California's Long-Term Energy Efficiency Strategic Plan calls for energy consumption in existing residential buildings to be reduced by 40 percent by 2020.[2] California Air Resources Board's Climate Change Scoping Plan sets deep targets for reduced energy consumption from energy efficiency improvements by 2020.[3] Specific legislative mandates also exist: for example, Assembly Bill 1103 (2007) requires nonresidential building owners to disclose benchmarking data and ratings to prospective buyers, lessees, or lenders. Finally, Governor Brown's Clean Jobs Plan of 2010 calls for increased efficiency in existing buildings.

CEC and PUC are sister agencies and work together very closely to coordinate and complement. Core to EE is the management of the utilities—investor-owned and publically-owned—who every 3 years are required to develop goals for cost-effective energy efficiency and programs that will achieve them.

CEC highlights:

1. Codes & Standards: motivation and impact. California first introduced energy efficiency building standards in 1978 with the implementation of Title 24. Since 1978, the state has saved $70+ billion in electricity and natural gas costs and averted building at least 15 large power plants.[4]

- All appliances sold in CA shall meet State and federal energy and water efficiency standards
- First standards effective 1977 – refrigerators, freezers, and air conditioners
- ~ 17 categories of appliances regulated
- Cover 50+ residential and commercial appliances
- $39B cumulative electricity savings
- Annual electricity consumption reduction ~ 18,000 GWh
- In 2012, ~ 19,000 appliances newly certified
- Appliance categories covered by federal standards are pre-empted from more stringent state standards (in practice, CA provides leadership, DOE often follows).
- Currently in middle of T20 process for a bunch of new items [chart]

b. Building Standards (Title 24, Part 6)
   - First building standards adopted in 1978
   - Updated approximately every three years
   - Ensure better windows, insulation, lighting, ventilation systems, and other features that reduce energy consumption are installed in homes and businesses.
   - $35B cumulative electricity savings
   - Residential – space heating, space cooling, water heating
   - Nonresidential – space heating, space cooling, water heating, lighting
   - Beginning in 2013, synchronized with update of other parts of Title 24 (plumbing, electrical, etc)
   - 2013 standards effective 1/1/2014
   - Very high level of stakeholder engagement, for 2013 update process there were ~ 45 industry stakeholder meetings (informal pre-rulemaking), ~ 15 workshops (formal rulemaking), responded to 1000+ public comments
   - 2013 savings percentage sounds very aggressive (25% residential, 30% nonresidential) but needs clarification since it is a percent of a smaller amount of energy over time (due to energy reduction from prior standards)
   - Striving to stay on trajectory for 2020 residential ZNE
   - For 2013: single-family home with a 30-year mortgage, standards return ~ $6,200 in energy savings (over course of 30 years) on a homeowner's ~ $2,300 investment (increased first cost)
   - new T24 standards take effect Jan 2014, and represent around a 25% improvement over the previous version of code.

2. Existing buildings. AB 758. Massive opportunity and challenge. With more than 55 percent of California's 13 million residential buildings and over 40 percent of its nonresidential buildings having been built prior to the energy efficiency standards,[5] existing buildings contribute nearly one quarter of California's greenhouse emissions.[6] In order to massively scale-up EE in existing buildings, two issues we know we need to solve are:

   a. more regular access to better data, and
   b. improved code compliance.

3. Demand Response. Concept and practice. Critical that the agencies solve this together, and we are working actively on several fronts: (CPUC proceedings; CEC IEPR; ISO Roadmapping)
4. R&D. – supports program activities hand-in-glove: examples [may or may not mention]
5. Finally, note that there are several dozen POUs that supply around 30% of te state's electricity. CEC is a relatively weak regulator, but the only state-level one we have! EE investments tend to be lower than PUC. POUs are highly variable – small/large, level of sophistication. Several assns (North/South).

An observation that I would make about both sets of talking points is that EE is a portfolio of LOTS different programs. It may be worth one of the two of you off-handedly mentioning we are not talking about one single effort, but lots of coordinated efforts. While we all 'know this' it might not be obvious just from the high level talking points and I don't know if the members have an intrinsic feel for any of this...

Hi Celeste

As Josie has discussed with you, I ended up being charged by Silverado for the room in addition the conference fee. Josie indicated to me that if I sent you the receipt (see attached) that you could then arrange for a refund and then the provided invoice from CFEE could be processed. Please confirm and thank you.

Let me know if you need anything else.
Michael

Pursuant to the Americans with Disabilities Act, individuals who, because of a disability, need special assistance to attend or participate in a Senate Committee hearing, or in connection with other Senate services, may request assistance at the Senate Rules Committee, 1020 N Street, Suite 255 or by calling 916-651-1505. Requests should be made one week in advance whenever possible.

DEPARTMENTS PROPOSED FOR VOTE ONLY

0555 Secretary for Cal-EPA

1. Transfer of the Office of Education and the Environment to the Department of Resources Recycling and Recovery (CalRecycle). Pursuant to Chapter 39, Statutes of 2012 (SB 1018, Leno), this proposal transfers the Office of Education and the Environment from the Secretary's office at Cal-EPA to CalRecycle. The proposal shifts 10 positions and associated funding for the program.

Recommendation: APPROVE Item 1.

Vote:

CPUC02853

3720 California Coastal Commission

The California Coastal Commission, following its initial creation in 1972 by a voter initiative, was permanently established by the State Coastal Act of 1976. In general, the act seeks to protect the state's natural and scenic resources along California's coast. It also delineates a "coastal zone" running the length of California's coast, extending seaward to the state's territorial limit of three miles, and extending inland a varying width from 1,000 yards to several miles. The commission's primary responsibility is to implement the act's provisions, including regulation of development in the coastal zone. Additionally the Commission serves as the state's planning and management agency for the coastal zone. The commission's jurisdiction does not include the San Francisco Bay Area, where development is regulated by the San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission.

Governor's Budget. The Governor's Budget includes $17.8 million for the operation of the Coastal Commission. This is a reduction of $300,000, mostly reflected in the completion of a significant data project at the Commission.

Items Proposed for Vote-Only

1. Coastal and Marine Education Whale Tail License Plate Program. The Governor's Budget requests $357,000 from the Coastal Beach and Coastal Enhancement Account (funds derived from the sale of Whale Tail license plates) for grants to nonprofits and government agencies consistent with its strategic program.

Recommendation: APPROVE Item 1.

CPUC02854

Items Proposed for Discussion

1. Adapting to Climate Change—Commission Responsibilities

Background—Land Use Planning in the Coastal Zone. Land use planning in the coastal zone, as in the rest of the state, is the primary responsibility of local governments. However, the Coastal Act imposes a number of requirements on land use in the coastal zone. Most significantly, the act requires local governments to adopt Local Coastal Programs (LCPs) to govern development of land in their jurisdictions that lie within the coastal zone.

In preparing to develop LCPs, many local governments have chosen to divide their coastal zone territory into several segments. This is done when a local government's coastal jurisdiction encompasses several distinct regions with different land use issues. A separate LCP is developed for each coastal segment. There are currently 128 coastal segments within the 76 coastal cities and counties.

An LCP must contain (1) a land use plan and (2) zoning ordinances to implement the land use plan. In general, LCPs must be designed to ensure maximum public access to the coast, provide recreational facilities, protect the marine environment, and otherwise promote the goals and objectives of the Coastal Act.

The Coastal Commission reviews and certifies LCPs for conformity with the act. As originally passed, the act required all local governments in the coastal zone to have submitted LCPs to the commission by January 1, 1980. However, this deadline has been extended several times, and today some jurisdictions still have not submitted LCPs to the commission.

The Commission's status of LCP review includes:

- 92 LCP segments are certified.
- 79 of 92 certified LCP segments (86 percent) were certified more than 20 years ago.
- 24 of 92 certified LCP have been comprehensively updated.

Sea Level Rise Adds Complexity. As has been seen throughout the country with Hurricane Sandy, as well as the recent "king tides" (very high tides) in Southern California, much of the developed California coast is susceptible to the impacts of sea level rise. In recent events, high tides inundated parts of the Pacific Coast Highway, Huntington Beach and other low-lying areas of Southern California. Parts of the San Francisco Bay Area also experienced flooding, including portions of Highway One in Marin County. These very high tides are considered a good indicator of the possible impacts of sea level rise and create challenges for local planners and developers in low lying areas.

Many of the areas without certified LCPs are at sea level, with significant development. These include most of the City of Los Angeles, including the airport, as well as parts of San Pedro and Venice. Also among the non-certified LCPs are the Santa Ana River, San Diego's Mission Bay and the City of Santa Monica.

CPUC02855

Staff Comments. The Coastal Commission has maintained a steady budget over the past several years but has struggled to make progress in updating LCPs. There are many reasons for this including (1) funding has not been available to assist local jurisdictions in updating their coastal plans; (2) some locals are reluctant to take back coastal permitting and prefer to have the state provide this service; and, (3) recent local funding issues have, as with other areas of government, reduced their ability to do forward thinking planning.

Sea level rise has added urgency to the issue of outdated, incomplete and uncertified LCPs. Local planning and preparation are critical if the State is to maintain its coastal development zones and prepare for possible inundations. Creating a local plan is part of every coastal jurisdiction's responsibility to determine how to preserve life and property along the California coast.

Questions for the Commission. The Commission should address the following questions in their opening statement.

- The commission cannot continue to be the coastal permitting agency for 36 jurisdictions along the California coast, particularly in light of sea level rise. How would the commission proposed to close this gap and help the remaining local entities to update their LCPs?
- What concerns does the commission have about sea level rise, particularly in areas where LCPs have not been certified?
- What would it take to make significant progress in updating and approving these LCPs and how do we ensure that those without certified LCPs move to certify?

Recommendation: Informational Item.

8660 California Public Utilities Commission

The California Public Utilities Commission (CPUC) is responsible for the regulation of privately owned "public utilities," such as gas, electric, telephone, and railroad corporations, as well as certain video providers and passenger and household goods carriers. The PUC's primary objective is to ensure adequate facilities and services for the public at equitable and reasonable rates. The PUC also promotes energy conservation through its various regulatory decisions.

Governor's Budget. The Governor's Budget proposes $1.4 billion and 1,053 positions to support the CPUC in the budget year.

Items Proposed for Discussion

1. Update on Safety Oversight

Last year, the California Public Utilities Commission (CPUC) came to the Legislature with its "Global Safety" budget change proposal, claiming the San Bruno explosion was a "game changer" with regard to how the CPUC viewed its safety responsibility. The Legislature approved 22 positions to strengthen safety oversight and enforcement over gas, electric, communications and rail public utilities.

Background. On September 9, 2010, a natural gas transmission pipeline, owned and operated by Pacific Gas and Electric (PG&E), ruptured in a residential area in the city of San Bruno, California. The accident killed eight people, injured many more, and caused significant property damage. The released natural gas ignited sometime after the rupture and the resulting fire destroyed 37 homes and damaged 18 others.

Prior to the San Bruno explosion, the CPUC's safety staffing levels reflected its expectation that utilities inherently recognize public safety as their top priority. Thus, the CPUC focused on fulfilling its own state and federal mandates, primarily through audits, inspections, and after-the-fact investigations, conducted within industry-specific programs, in a reactive mode. The CPUC stated that San Bruno "was a game-changer in terms of how the commission intends to conduct critical safety oversight going forward. Recommendations from gas safety experts, the Independent Review Panel (IRP or Panel) and the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB), as well as our own lessons learned, apply across all industries under our jurisdiction."

California's energy and transportation systems are antiquated, overloaded, prone to accidents, and need closer scrutiny. The majority of the electrical system was installed in the 1950s and 1960s, which means such facilities are nearing the end of their useful lives. Generators, poles, wires, pipelines, and tracks constructed in lightly populated areas in the 1950s, are now surrounded by homes, parks and schools. For example, PG&E installed the San Bruno gas transmission line in 1956, well before housing development in the area.

CPUC02857

Safety Culture Investigation. Last year, the CPUC admitted that policy objectives took priority over safety, prior to the San Bruno explosion. CPUC's reactive safety strategy, premised on the assumption that utilities recognized public safety as their top priority, was inherently misguided. Both the NTSB recommendations and the IRP report validated the need for a comprehensive relook at natural gas pipeline safety and additional activities and resources at both the State and Federal level to ensure safe operation and support comprehensive safety program reform.

In the Fall of 2012, the CPUC engaged an independent consulting firm, for an undisclosed amount, to facilitate its "Safety Culture Change" project. This project began with an initial discovery phase, which consisted of a document review, interviews and focus groups. The purpose of this phase was to uncover the existing culture, identify culture changes needed, and to develop a draft problem statement that would allow the CPUC to plan its culture change strategy.

A report of this discovery phase was released to the CPUC on January 25, 2013. It identifies significant cultural problems at the CPUC and a fundamental failure of leadership. The report strongly suggests that safety concerns continue to be a secondary priority at the CPUC and this message is transmitted from leadership to staff and the utilities it regulates. Through months of focus groups and interviews with employees, the report identifies a few of the prevailing perceptions of the employees at the CPUC:

- "For the past ten years we have been mostly focused on climate change policies. Everything else takes a back seat. We have not been focused on creating the safety infrastructure."

- There has been a lot of lip service to safety. I have not seen enough action yet to back up the talk."

- "When Commissioners vote, they don't support safety, so there's no incentive for the utilities to be safer. If they knew they were 100 percent liable for safety problems, they'd take it more seriously. If the commission lets them put the burden on ratepayers, rather than shareholders, there is no incentive for the utilities to change."

The core mission of the CPUC is to ensure "safe, reliable utility service and infrastructure at reasonable rates." In the past several years, the CPUC has focused on other non-statutorily directed activities, including the Electric Program Investment Charge (EPIC), the Climate Change Institute, grants of ratepayer funds to Lawrence Livermore Laboratory, and implementing the 33 percent Renewables Portfolio Standard (RPS) several years prior to Legislative direction. Results of the San Bruno explosion investigation revealed that the CPUC was unaware of PG&E's under-spending on gas safety measures. In so directing resources to unauthorized activities, the CPUC has neglected its statutorily and constitutionally-mandated core functions to ensure compliance with safety requirements.

Staff Comments. This issue provides a basis for discussion of several items in the agenda that following. While there may be a response to the issue of prioritizing safety, it seems clear that the CPUC has spent considerable time on some policy objectives while deprioritizing critical functions such as safety, budgeting, and basic ratemaking. In meetings with staff of the CPUC, generally the discussion focuses on requests for more positions at all levels because, for example, when proceedings come up, there are not enough administrative law judges to hear cases, or not enough individuals to budget. These requests make it seem as though the CPUC is short-staffed, and unable to complete its basic core functions. As will be discussed under other items, staff suggests the CPUC is fully staffed and rather would better serve the public and its mission by eliminating unnecessary and extracurricular policy projects and focus its staff from top to bottom on its core mission—safety oversight and ratemaking.

Recommendation: Informational Item.

CPUC02859

2. Public Utilities Commission Performance Audit

Background. On January 10, 2013, the Department of Finance (DOF) Office of State Audits and Evaluations (OSAE) released its performance audit of the CPUC budget process. The audit identified significant weaknesses with CPUC's budget operations that negatively affect the commission's ability to prepare and present reliable and accurate budget information. Specifically, the audit found that:

- The organizational structure of CPUC does not facilitate cohesive budgeting practices.
- The CPUC's budget forecasting methodologies produced results that differed significantly from actual results, with most of these differences unexplainable.
- Cases of fiscal mismanagement in which accounting records for certain funds were misrepresented and incorrect. For example, OSAE identified records that did not include certain fund transactions that ranged from roughly $40,000 to $275 million.
- The CPUC's reconciliations of certain funds—where there were differences between DOF and State Controller's Office records—were inaccurate. (In order to reconcile current year, as well as past variances, the Administration made total budget adjustments in the hundreds of millions of dollars.)
- According to the audit, CPUC must implement and strengthen the fiscal controls over its budgeting practices and procedures in order to produce reliable and accurate budgetary information for the Governor, the Legislature, DOF, and other stakeholders.

Governor's Proposal. The Governor requests $210,000 and 3 positions to provide budget support to the CPUC, including internal budgeting allocations and expenditure monitoring reporting.

LAO Concerns. The LAO reviewed the audit and found that in addition to the questionable internal budgeting functions, external auditing functions were also deficient. Specifically:

> "We find that the above OSAE audit raises several issues that merit legislative oversight, in order to ensure that CPUC's budget process becomes more transparent and accurate. We also note that the audit's findings regarding problems with the commission's internal budgeting and accounting practices raise questions about CPUC's ability to effectively audit the records and accounts of the utilities that it regulates. Under current law, CPUC is required to audit at least once every three years utility "balancing accounts." (Balancing accounts are authorized by the CPUC for specific projects, programs, or other requirements that the utility must implement in accordance with CPUC decisions.) These accounts are established by the utilities and used to track revenues and expenditures for such activities as electricity procurement, energy efficiency programs, and the EPIC program.

CPUC02860

> Balancing accounts help to ensure that ratepayers only pay CPUC-authorized amounts and that the utilities will be able to recover the amounts needed to support their revenue requirements or costs. If a utility receives more revenue than is needed from ratepayers, then ratepayers receive a credit. Alternatively, if the utility has not received enough revenue, then ratepayers will be required to pay more to make up the difference."

Initial Legislative Response. The chairs of the Senate Budget Subcommittee #2, Assembly Budget Subcommittee #3 and the chairs of both the Assembly and Senate energy and utilities committees wrote a letter to the Joint Legislative Audit Committee recommending further audits of the CPUC's external auditing functions. Specifically, the question of balancing accounts and monitoring of the Investor Owned Utility funds was questioned.

Staff also performed a statutory review of the pertinent sections of code. Of relevance, Public Utilities Code (PUC), Section 314.5 states:

> "The commission shall inspect and audit the books and records for regulatory and tax purposes (a) at least once in every three years in the case of every electrical, gas, heat, telegraph, telephone, and water corporation serving over 1,000 customers, and (b) at least once in every five years in the case of every electrical, gas, heat, telegraph, telephone, and water corporation serving 1,000 or fewer customers. An audit conducted in connection with a rate proceeding shall be deemed to fulfill the requirements of this section. Reports of such inspections and audits and other pertinent information shall be furnished to the State Board of Equalization for use in the assessment of public utilities."

Staff Comments. The OSAE follows years of questions brought to the CPUC on: (1) its ability to manage funds; (2) the use of staff for policy purposes while budget monitoring seemed to be missing; and, (3) questions about fund balances on the many off-budget accounts managed by the CPUC.

In meetings with budget staff, CPUC executives attempted to divert responsibility for its external auditing functions to the Division of Ratepayer Advocates (DRA). (DRA will come before this committee under a separate item). However, as the LAO points out, the CPUC must audit utility balancing accounts (external accounts) every three years. The CPUC executives attempted to state that the DRA is required to conduct these audits with positions that have been approved by the Legislature over the years. After a review of statute, it is clear that statute authorizes the DRA to conduct audits in order to objectively review the CPUC's ratemaking cases. It is also clear that should DRA conduct an audit, the CPUC may use this in its evaluation of the utilities. However, nowhere in statute does it say that the DRA is responsible for conducting the every-three-year audits required by Section 314.5.

There remain several questions for the CPUC. Among them is the clear question of why budgeting is given such a low priority at the executive level of the Commission. The CPUC maintains that one person manages budgets for the over 1,000 person department, including managing funds for all of the relevant accounts maintained. This seems both highly unlikely and highly suspect.

The basic checks and balances seem to be missing, more so than in any other agency brought before this subcommittee. In most cases, the CPUC says that those responsible for budgeting were given "other policy duties" that subsumed their jobs. Culpability seems to remain at the highest levels of the agency, rather than line staff. The development of policy, rather than the execution of the core mission of the CPUC, will be discussed in the next agenda item.

Staff are reluctant to recommend approving additional positions for the CPUC. This issue, combined with others on this agenda, does not paint a picture of a capable state agency, particularly one whose responsibilities go far beyond simple rate-setting but rather to the core of safety in utilities, transit and rail. However, it seems clear that the CPUC does not have any budget staff with the exception of the recent hire of a budget administrator (whose recent promotion leaves no dedicated budget staff at the CPUC). Normally, in circumstances such as these where a need is clear but questions remain about the functions of the department, staff recommends limited-term positions. In this case, that recommendation might result in the hiring of lesser-caliber individuals who may not be able to manage the significant problems presented by the CPUC budget. Staff will reserve its recommendations for executive staff until a later agenda item.

It is apparent that the CPUC personnel, who were supposed to be maintaining budgets for the agency, were likely added more than 10 years ago and converted to other purposes over the years. Therefore, it seems clear that a reduction in staffing corresponding to the increase in budget staff is necessary. Staff recommends three positions in CPUC be made limited-term for one year and that these positions be made eligible for conversion to permanent only after a full review the CPUC's budgeting functions in the forthcoming year. These positions should be at the program administration level.

Questions for the Agency. The CPUC should address these questions in their opening statement:

- The CPUC has consistently maintained that it has never received budget staff; however, in the current Salaries and Wages there are a number of positions that could be budget-related. Many of these were approved many years ago as the divisions were established. What impact has the conversion of budget-related positions to policy had on the CPUC and could these audit findings have been prevented with some simple budgeting and accounting directed by executive staff?

- Describe the corrective actions that the CPUC will take to correct this problem in the forthcoming years. Does the commission believe that a lack of internal controls and fiscal management compounded other problems that the Commission is currently facing?

Recommendation:

(1) APPROVE budget proposal as budgeted.

(2) CONVERT three program administration level positions to one-year limited-term until such time as the CPUC can demonstrate the disposition of its original budget positions.

3. Trusts and Entities Created by the PUC

Background. The CPUC is entrusted with rate-making at investor-owned utilities. Within this capacity, the CPUC reviews current policy and attempts to set rates in a manner that is forward thinking and in compliance with the terms of state law. In recent years, the Commission has extended its reach a number of times beyond its rate-making capabilities, spending considerable time and effort to create entities that use ratepayer funds but are outside the state budget process. It is common for Commissioners or their designees to serve on these nonprofits as board members, officers, or advisors. In many of these cases, the Legislature has stepped in to stop these practices. This issue was highlighted in the adoption of a report annually to the legislature (PUC Section 326.5) in 2008, wherein the Legislature required the Commission to report on expenditures from specific non-budget entities established by the CPUC.

Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory ($150 Million Project). in July 2011, the CPUC sought authority to increase customer rates to recover more than $150 million for research conducted by Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory (LLNL) for a five-year cooperative research and development agreement entitled "California Energy Systems for the 21st Century Project," (CES-21 Project). The CPUC issued a decision in late 2012 authorizing the utilities to enter into the agreement, and to provide the CPUC with a list of proposed projects annually. The utilities would be exempt from anti-trust laws. There was no competitive solicitation for this project or consideration of other currently pending proposals at both the Legislature and the CPUC, such as the Public Goods Charge and the Electric Program Investment Charge.

Commissioners Directing Programs Outside Ratemaking Process. It is clear from the public record of the CPUC proceedings that this proposal was not only directed by the CPUC, but that for more than a year prior to the application's submission, the president of the CPUC worked with the utilities and LLNL to develop the proposal. The president, as revealed in now-public email records, oversaw the shaping of the proposal and calling it the "overall grand project with all three energy utilities." The entirety of this project would be undertaken outside the State's budget process, with utilities required to send their contributions directly to LLNL, with no state review.

Upon developing the proposal, the president of the CPUC assigned the approval of this project to himself. He then approved the proposal in its entirety.

Circumvention of Legislative and Budget Process. The CPUC has crossed the line between budget and policy, both of which are the purview of the Legislature. The CPUC in its quasi-legislative capacity, has attempted to usurp the Legislative branch's prerogative to determine what future projects and policies make sense. The major five-year proposal described above should be vetted in the Legislature, either in a policy bill or in the budget process. The manner in which this project was approved would circumvent both of these processes and effectively challenge the notion of checks and balances.

CPUC02863

Staff Comments. As will be discussed in a later agenda item, this is not the first or the only proposal the Commission has approved recently that circumvents Legislative authority. At the same time, the CPUC annually requests multiple positions to continue its work. It would seem that the establishment of these programs and policies that circumvent legislative authority, including all research, proceedings and Administrative Law Judge time should be considered an extracurricular activity of the CPUC and as such, subject to budget reduction. Not only should the use of CPUC staff and time be subject to legislative review, they also should be subject to Legislative approval through the policy process.

Questions for the Agency. The CPUC should address these questions in their opening statement:

- What other projects is the CPUC currently considering that would either direct utilities to establish programs outside of Legislative purview or would establish a nonprofit without the approval of the Department of Finance ?

- What was the role of the other commissioners in establishing this proposal?

Recommendations:

(1) APPROVE a request to the Fair Political Practices Commission to review the CPUC practice of directing, adjudicating and approving the establishment of nonprofits for possible conflict of interest or bequest violations.

(2) APPROVE trailer bill language halting the establishment of California Energy Systems for the 21st Century Project (Lawrence Livermore) and to refund all ratepayer funds that have been directed to this project.

3) APPROVE trailer bill language that prohibits the CPUC from creating non-state entities through decisions, settlements, rules, orders, or mergers.

5) APPROVE trailer bill language that prohibits the CPUC from awarding contracts to non-profits in which a sitting commissioner serves as an employee, officer, or director.

6) APPROVE trailer bill language that prohibits CPUC commissioners from serving on commission-established non-state entities.

4. Energy Program Investment Charge (EPIC)

Background. In December 2011, funding for the state's Public Goods Charge (PGC) on electricity ratepayers expired. The PGC funded energy efficiency research and development and renewable energy programs. Efforts to continue the surcharge, which requires a 2/3 vote of the Legislature failed. The charge, considered a tax for voting purposes, supported about a quarter of the total energy efficiency programs funded by the state and energy utilities.

In September 2011, the Governor sent a letter to the CPUC requesting that they take action under its quasi-legislative authority to ensure that programs, like those funded under the PGC, would be continued, but with the modifications legislators discussed during the PGC renewal deliberations. In December 2011, the CPUC initiated a rulemaking (essentially started a pathway to a new policy) to continue the programs similar to PGC, with a sole focus on the investor-owned utilities (IOUs). The commission planned a two-phased deliberation. The first phase addressed the appropriate funding levels for renewables and research and development. The second phase, currently under way, creates a detailed program.

2012 Budget Action. In the 2012 Budget, the Legislature approved $1 million from the EPIC and 4.5 positions specifically to complete an investment plan for the future appropriations from this charge, established for the CPUC (and also described above) in the 2012 budget. Considerable thought was given to this appropriation given as was established administratively. Specifically the budget trailer bill requires the CPUC to administer the fund, and funds are required to be collected by the CPUC and forwarded to the CEC for administration. The budget trailer bill language specifically did not authorize the levy of this charge at the CPUC or increase the amount collected for an existing charge.

Governor's Overall 2013-14 EPIC Proposal. The Governor requests baseline authority for 55.5 position, $575,000 in technical assistance funds and $159.3 million in project funds for the implementation and execution of the EPIC program (the majority of which will be discussed under a separate agenda item within the California Energy Commission). The proposal includes an additional $25 million in EPIC Funds the CPUC may approve for the New Solar Homes Partnership program. Proposed expenditures would roughly be broken out with $76 million for applied research, $62 million for demonstration and deployment, and $20 million for market facilitation. All funding for the programs would be derived from utility ratepayers. The program would increase to $185 million in 2014-15.

The proposal continues to assume that the EPIC Program will be developed fully by the CPUC, who would then direct the CEC programs related to EPIC. The Legislature would essentially be approving programs already developed by the CPUC. In addition, the CPUC could develop programs and activities by the investor-owned utilities that would not be subject to legislative budgetary review.

Circumvention of the Legislature. As will be discussed under the California Energy Commission items, the state currently spends over $1 billion per year on energy efficiency programs, most of this derived directly from utility ratepayers. In developing the EPIC Program at the CPUC, the Administration purposefully bypassed the Legislature after the failed reauthorization of the Energy Public Goods Charge. The Legislature should consider whether or not the CPUC is the appropriate place to allow new policies to be developed, including those that increase costs to energy customers in the state. Is it appropriate for one state agency to develop programs for another state agency without statutory approval by the Legislature? If so, what would stop the CPUC from developing any number of off-budget activities without statutory approval?

The EPIC program continues funding for activities that were authorized by two-thirds vote of the state Legislature. These original funds were approved as a tax for basic activities such as research and development. This new program did not have such authorization. The CPUC should describe the nexus between the program activities and fee payers, based on fee versus tax-related case law. The Administration also has not submitted a plan for proposed expenditures under the EPIC program as required by the 2012 budget. Therefore, there is little review for the budget change proposal.

Governor's Proposal (CPUC). The budget requests $88,000 and one position to oversee the EPIC program development at the CPUC.

Staff Comments. As with the previous item, this proposal undoes the balance of authority between the three branches of government by bypassing the Legislature. As such the policy has not been vetted in a legislative hearing, rather through the ratemaking processes of the CPUC. The position requested seems quite unnecessary since it is clear the CPUC redirected multiple internal staff to develop the program, review comments from stakeholders, develop the regulatory policy and framework, and to adjudicate the ratemaking case.

Questions for the Agency. The department should address these questions in their opening statement:

- What is the status of any lawsuits on this item and what is the nature of the complaints?

- Statute requires the utilities to direct funds to the CPUC for transfer to the CEC. In meetings with legislative staff, this did not seem to be the case. Describe the discrepancy.

Recommendation:

(1) DENY the proposal.
(2) REQUIRE the CPUC to account for all personnel hours used to develop and adjudicate this program, including at the commissioner level.

5. Expanding Policy Programs at CPUC—Demand-Side Program Facilitation and Expansion

Governor's Proposal. The Governor requests one position and $88,000 from the PUC Utilities Reimbursement Account to enable the growth and integration of demand response into wholesale markets.

Staff Comments. Based on the overabundance of staff and time to develop policies outside of the legislative process, staff recommends the commission absorb the costs of this proposal.

Recommendation: DENY proposal.

6. Administrative Law Judge Support for Recent Legislation

Governor's Proposal. The Governor requests two administrate law judge (ALJ) positions and $231,000 from the PUC Utilities Reimbursement Account to implement the requirements of recently passed legislation.

Staff Comments. Based on the overabundance of staff and time to develop policies outside of the legislative process, staff recommends the commission absorb the costs of this proposal and redirect current ALJ positions to appropriately focus on statutory requirements.

Recommendation: DENY proposal.

7. High-Speed Rail Oversight

Governor's Proposal. The Governor requests 3.0 positions and $330,000 from the Public Transportation Account, State Transportation Fund, to oversee the design and construction of California's new High-Speed Rail system. The CPUC is required to oversee rail safety systems in California including the High-Speed Rail system. The CPUC requests staff to review design, construction and operation of equipment, and associated electrical facilities.

LAO Recommendation. Reject proposed funding for CPUC.

> "Our analysis finds that the requested funding for CPUC to develop high–speed rail regulations is premature given the reality that California's high–speed train service will not be in operation before 2021 at the earliest."

Staff Comments. Staff concurs with the LAO.

Recommendation: REJECT proposal.

8660 Division of Ratepayer Advocates (California Public Utilities Commission)

The Division of Ratepayer Advocates (DRA) is an independent division of the California Public Utilities Commission (CPUC) that advocates solely on behalf of residential and small commercial utility ratepayers. As the only state agency charged with this responsibility, DRA plays a critical role in ensuring that the customers of California's investor-owned utilities are represented at the CPUC and in other forums that affect how much consumers will pay for utility services and the quality of those services. DRA's staff of experts performs detailed analyses in the areas of communications, energy, and water to determine the impact that they will have on ratepayers' bills, as well as the impacts on safety and service quality. Additionally, DRA evaluates the environmental impact of regulatory issues and seeks to ensure that any utility actions will comport with CPUC rules and California laws.

Governor's Budget. The Governor's Budget includes $24.4 million for the operation of the DRA. DRA's staff consists of 137 technical, policy, and financial analysts with professional backgrounds as engineers, auditors, and economists with expertise in regulatory issues related to electricity, natural gas, telecommunications, and water industries in California.

Introduction. The DRA usually comes before this subcommittee under the auspices of the CPUC. However, in recent years considerable tension has emerged in hearings and prehearings between staff of the DRA and the CPUC. Therefore, this subcommittee will hear the DRA as a separate and stand-alone entity to review its budget proposals.

Background. Since its establishment in 1984 by the CPUC and subsequent codification (Chapter 856, Statutes of 1996) as an independent entity within the PUC, the DRA has provided a voice for lower rates at CPUC proceedings and other forums. Various legislative efforts over the years have sought to give the DRA more independence from the CPUC while keeping it as a division of the Commission and therefore allowing it access to information provided during hearings and proceedings. At this time, the DRA is maintained as a division within the CPUC, requesting and reporting its budget through the CPUC executive management. The DRA is also referred to in statute as the Office of Ratepayer Advocates.

Concerns About DRA Budget Processes. As has been discussed in previous agenda items, the CPUC has had considerable problems in its development of the annual budget, creating difficulties for legislative oversight. In order to develop its budget, the DRA submits its budget request to the executive staff of the CPUC which then may adjust this request before final submission to the Department of Finance and Legislature. This process is appropriate for divisions reporting directly to the Executive Director; however, the DRA Director is appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate. Within other state agencies, separate entities are generally either budgeted entirely outside the governing agency or are allotted a clear "line item" annually, that separates the chain of command.

Governor's Proposals. The Governor's budget includes three separate requests for DRA.

1. DRA Energy Financial Examiners. Request for two positions and $151,000 from the PUC Ratepayer Advocate Account to perform audits of energy companie's financial records, in conjunction with General Rate Cases, natural gas proceedings, the Energy Resource Recovery Account, and other proceedings initiated by the CPUC or the investor-owned utilities.

2. DRA Water Auditors. Request for two positions and $151,000 from the PUC Ratepayer Advocate Account to meet the increased workload associated with inspection of water utilities' accounting records. The two positions will be assigned to DRA's Water Branch which has experienced significant increases in both the frequency and complexity of utility rate requests within the past four years.

3. DRA Gas Safety. Increase of one position and $89,000 from the PUC Ratepayer Advocate Account, to accommodate expanding workload related to natural gas safety. This will allow DRA to keep pace in this increasing workload area.

Staff Comments. Staff are concerned about oversight of DRA in the budget process and have concerns about the current structure and management of DRA. There is also some confusion about the name of the Division.

Recommendation:

1. APPROVE Items 1-3.
2. APPROVE trailer bill language that changes the name of the "Division of Ratepayer Advocates" to the "Office of Ratepayer Advocates."
3. APPROVE trailer bill language that requires DRA to submit its budget to the Department of Finance directly.
4. APPROVE trailer bill language that allows DRA to employ its own personnel, including attorneys, instead of having them supplied by the CPUC.

3360 Energy Resources Conservation Development Commission (California Energy Commission)

The Energy Resources Conservation and Development Commission (commonly referred to as the California Energy Commission or CEC) is responsible for forecasting energy supply and demand; developing and implementing energy conservation measures; conducting energy-related research and development programs; and siting major power plants.

Governor's Budget. The Governor's Budget includes $486 million (no General Fund) for support of the CEC, a decrease of approximately $21 million, due primarily to the phasing down of the Public Interest Energy Research (PIER) Program and the Renewable Resources Trust Fund (RRTF) as a result of the failure to reauthorize the Public Goods Charge.

Items Proposed for Vote-Only

1. Finance Letter—Appliance Efficiency Database Modernization. The budget requests $2.4 million to replace the current system with an automated system to allow manufacturers to electronically complete and submit necessary applications and appliance data. This proposal is supported by a completed Feasibility Study Report.

2. Conversion of Two Limited-Term Positions to Permanent. The budget requests authority to convert two limited-term positions to permanent to continue implementation of the ongoing and permanent solar electric mandates in Chapter 132, Statutes of 2006 (SB 1, Murray). These positions were originally made limited-term in 2007 and extended twice, based on ongoing workload associated with the legislation.

Recommendation: APPROVE Items 1-2.

Items Proposed for Discussion

1. Public Goods Charge Ramp Down

Governor's Proposal. The Governor's budget identifies the reduction of nine positions ($980,000) and the elimination of new project funding in response to the January 1, 2012 sunset of the authority to collect the Public Goods Charge (PGC) on January 1, 2012. As a result, no additional funds were collected after January 1, 2012, and the duties and positions necessary to administer the Renewable Energy and Public Interest Energy Research Programs are required to ramp down.

Proposed Ramp-Down. Beginning in 1996, a series of legislative efforts have authorized ratepayer funding to increase the proportion of research and development, renewable energy, and energy efficiency servicing California utility customers. Following the failed renewal of the PGC, the CEC must reduce activities in the following areas:

- Renewables Facilities Programs
- Emerging Renewables Program
- Consumer Education Program
- New Solar Homes Partnership
- Public Interest Energy Research Program

Because funding for many of these programs creates an ongoing workload, the PGC ramp-down is anticipated to take several years.

Questions for the Commission. The department should address these questions in their opening statement:

- How long will the PGC ramp-down take?

- What are the direct impacts of the reduction of these funds on current programs and is there any effort to renew the PGC through statute?

Recommendation: APPROVE proposal.

2. Implementation of the Electric Program Investment Charge (EPIC) and Energy Efficiency Programs Statewide

BACKGROUND:

During the 2012 session, the Legislature considered multiple policy and budget proposals to increase energy efficiency and its funding. These included an Administration proposal to reinstate the Public Goods Charge through a California Public Utilities Commission (CPUC) rulemaking process (discussed below under the Electricity Procurement Investment Charge header), various greenhouse gas emission reduction programs that target energy programs, and renewable energy bills.

Given what seemed to be an abundance of existing energy-efficiency programs, the 2012 budget required the LAO to review energy efficiency programs throughout state government and to provide both (1) a list of all programs and funding related to energy efficiency and alternative energy, and (2) provide a preliminary assessment of these programs in terms of priority, overlap, and redundancy. The LAO report is partially summarized in this analysis on current energy efficiency budget issues.

Summary of State Energy Efficiency and Alternative Energy Programs

Program Category	2012-13	Cumulative Funding to Date
Energy Efficiency (Investor Owned Utility, federal funding and state financing programs)	$1 billion	$9.5 billion
Renewable Energy (Public Interest Renewable Energy Program, Go Solar California Program, Self-Generation Incentive Program, And Clean Energy Upgrade Financing Program	$317 million	$4.2 billion
Advanced Transportation and Low-Carbon Fuels	$250 million	$683 million
Energy Research	$44 million	$556 million
Totals	$1.6 billion	$15 billion

a) Source: Legislative Analyst's Office, 2012

In no less than 10 separate programs, and spanning five state departments, over $1.6 billion was spent directly on energy efficiency and alternative energy programs. Cumulatively, to date, nearly $15 million has been spent by the state. The vast majority of funding for these programs comes from utility ratepayers. Most of these programs are located in three state departments: the CPUC, the California Energy Resource Conservation and Development Commission (CEC), and the California Alternative Energy and Advanced Transportation Authority.

NEW PROGRAMS AND THE BIGGER PICTURE:

Cap and Trade Funding. In the near future, new funding will be available to support programs as a result of the state's cap-and-trade auctions, a tool to reduce greenhouse gas emissions (GHG). As part of the Global Warming Solutions Act of 2006, commonly referred to as AB 32, the goal of reducing greenhouse gas emissions to 1990 levels by 2020 was established in statute. AB 32 revenues generated from the auctions constitute a mitigation fee, and a nexus must exist between an activity for which the fee is paid and the adverse effects related to the activity on which that fee is levied. Therefore, in order for their use to be valid as mitigation fees, revenues from cap-and-trade auctions must be used only to mitigate GHG emissions or the harms caused by these emissions. A number of the existing energy efficiency and alternative energy programs currently also have a focus on GHG emission reductions. It is conceivable that the new auction revenues could either supplant or be used in addition to funding for these existing programs. The Governor has not released his expenditure plan for auction credits and therefore it is unknown what the budget proposals may entail.

Proposition 39, passed in November 2012, eliminates the ability of multi-state businesses to choose the way in which their taxable income is determined. As a result, some corporations will pay higher taxes, resulting in projected revenues of $1 billion per year. Under the measure, half the annual revenues—up to $550 million—will be deposited into a new Clean Energy Job Creation Fund to support projects intended to improve energy efficiency and expand the use of alternative energy for a five-year period (2013-14 through 2017-18). The Legislature will determine spending from the fund and is required to use the monies for cost-effective projects run by agencies with expertise in managing energy projects. These projects must also be coordinated with the CEC, CPUC, and with a newly-established nine-member oversight board to annually review spending from the program. Proposition 39 requires funds to be used to support:

- Energy efficiency retrofits and alternative energy projects in public schools, colleges, universities, and other public facilities;
- Finance and technical assistance for energy retrofits; and,
- Job training and workforce development related to energy efficiency and alternative energy.

Why State Program Funding is Not the Whole Picture. One cannot review energy efficiency in the state solely on the basis of state-funded programs. In addition to programs where funding is managed through state agencies, other actions and agencies impact our state's overall energy efficiency and may have had even more profound effects. For example, both the state and federal government have building standards that reduce energy usage in all new construction. Appliances have minimum energy standards and a federal "energy star" program that allows consumers to compare and choose energy efficient products. Commercial buildings, outdoor lighting and many other areas of energy are regulated by both state and local agencies. In many cases, locals may go further than the state. Local water and energy utilities (those local entities that provide water and energy directly to customers), also have programs designed to reduce energy usage—including many programs independently not managed by the state.

GOVERNOR'S PROPOSAL:

Proposition 39. The Governor's budget includes all of the revenue derived from proposition 39 in the calculation of the education Proposition 98 minimum guarantee. The budget proposes to use that funding for energy efficiency projects at schools and community colleges. This was discussed at length in the Senate Budget Joint Hearing of Subcommittees #1 and #2 on April 4, 2013.

Electricity Procurement Investment Charge (EPIC). The Governor's proposal for EPIC is discussed on page 15 of the agenda.

ISSUES TO CONSIDER:

LAO Analysis and Recommendations. The LAO reviewed the various energy efficiency and alternative energy programs for overlap and coordination issues. They recommend a comprehensive strategy be developed that: (1) avoids program duplication, particularly where departments have overlapping jurisdiction; (2) align programs with legislative priorities, including those the CPUC administers for investor-owned utilities; (3) measures program effectiveness across the state agencies.

The LAO has made a strong case for development of unified energy efficiency and alternative energy policies. The lack of coordination makes it difficult to determine where scarce resources should be directed, and how much a given ratepayer should pay. This also sets up an unbalanced ratepayer system wherein those in investor-owned utilities ratepayer areas pay into a statewide program while those in other areas, such as those in publicly-owned utilities ratepayer areas, do not. The Legislature should consider policy before budget, and should determine which activities should be funded by clarifying statute before budget actions take place.

EPIC Program—Legislative Involvement Needed? The state currently spends over $1 billion per year on energy efficiency programs, most of this derived directly from utility ratepayers. In developing the EPIC Program at the CPUC, the Administration purposefully bypassed the Legislature after the failed reauthorization of the Energy Public Goods Charge. As discussed under the CPUC, the Legislature should consider whether or not the CPUC is the appropriate place to allow new policies to be developed, including those that increase costs to energy customers in the state. Is it appropriate for one state agency to develop programs for another state agency without statutory approval by the Legislature? If so, what would stop the CPUC from developing any number of off-budget activities without statutory approval?

The EPIC program continues funding for activities that were previously authorized by two-thirds vote of the state Legislature. However, this new program did not have such an authorization. The CPUC and CEC should describe the nexus between the program activities and fee payers based on fee versus tax-related case law. The Administration also has not submitted a plan for proposed expenditures under the EPIC program as required by the 2012 budget. Therefore, there is little review for the budget change proposal.

Staff Comments. The CEC has spent considerable time and effort to develop the EPIC Investment Plan. This plan largely mirrors previous efforts to renew the Public Goods Charge. Given lingering questions about the nature of the charge and its status as a fee or a tax, it would be premature to authorize any spending for this program without clear statutory authorization. However with statutory authorization, the plan for expenditure of funds including the ramp-down of previous PGC programs and possible shifts to new and emerging research and development programs may be a worthwhile policy discussion.

Questions for the Agency. The Commission should address these questions in their opening statement:

- This program clearly needs to be authorized by the Legislature in statute that includes program parameters, focus and goals. The CPUC does not set renewable or energy efficiency policy for this state. Can the Administration produce draft legislation authorizing this program for review by budget and policy committees?

- What is the impact of holding off funding for this program until statute authorizes the expenditure of funds.

Recommendation:

(1) APPROVE positions and funding provisionally such that no positions may be added, nor funds expended, until a statute expressly authorizes the EPIC program including program provisions.

Julie, here is my copy of the draft concept document that I believe General Hagen has previewed earlier with Jim Hall and associates. Sorry for my notes on the first page. I believe this type of symposium will be a first in the country, sponsored by the Commission.

As we discussed, I'll try to find some possible venues for the meeting, which is now calendared for January 8 after noon to January 9 at noon, including a dinner with keynote speaker Chairman Hersman from the NTSB. [Chairman Hersman is holding the time on her calendar.]

Please let me know how I can help/participate, as PG&E's rep. I believe that the work to flesh out the content of the symposium and invite speakers, will need to happen in time to get their attendance confirmed by about late-October.

Thx,
Jane

Safety Symposium

A Proposal For A Series Of Symposiums Beginning In 2012 That Will Address Issues and Seek Solutions To Concerns Relating to Public Safety In The Public Utility Sector Of The State Of California.

③ Formal Invite to Chrman Hersman

Sponsors; California's Public Utility Companies and the California Public Utility Commission (CPUC).

④ Clear Tony's calendar

Mission; Define, Create and Sustain a Safety Culture in the State of California

Objectives;
. Define the End Game for Public Safety in California
. Quantify Where We Are Now
. Agree on what Safety Culture is Required to Move Us from Our Current State to Our Desired State

Scope of the Symposiums; These will be working meetings that are designed; 1. To allow people in industry and government who are necessarily interdependent on one another to meet, talk, share and make recommendations that are consistent with the Symposiums' objectives, 2. Provide for workshops, panels and presentations that will be designed to share best practices in areas affecting public safety, 3. To understand the expectations for safety and the consequences of failure, 4. To allow industry to understand what the regulators need and why they need it, 5. To affirm that safety, with respect to human life and property is non-negotiable, and, 6. To understand that all parties to these symposiums, including the people of California share the same goal of dramatically improving the safety of our public utility systems.

Disclaimer; The Symposiums are not to be construed as opportunities to advance self-interest, debate rate cases, position for litigation nor provide a forum for mandates.

Attendees; Sponsoring Companies and the CPUC will send individuals who bring subject expertise to the topics of the Symposium and who are of an appropriate level in their respective organizations to influence and advance the solutions advanced.

These Symposiums will be ongoing annual or semi annual events per year beginning with the first Symposium which is targeted to be held during the first 10 days of Dec. 2012. Symposium topics should be timely and forward thinking. Possible topics could include;

1. Building A Safety Culture in California's Public Utility Industry (Target 1st Symposium Topic).
2. Risk Identification, Risk Mitigation and Risk Management
3. Right of Way Management and the State of California's One Call System
4. Public Safety Benchmarks and Performance Metrics
5. Industry Self Reporting and Citation Authority
6. Emergency Response, Disaster Communication and Cooperative Disaster Mitigation

Symposium Management and Coordination; It is anticipated that a select committee comprised of Sponsor Company representatives and the CPUC will be put forth and empowered to develop and execute a series of Symposiums consistent with the Objectives. The Team will select its own leader.

Financing for each Symposium will be shared by the sponsors. All in costs for each event are anticipated to be less than $100,000.00.

It is anticipated that from time to time subject matter experts and public officials not employed by or under the direction of sponsors will be invited to participate in any given Symposium where their participation can reasonably be expected to further the objectives of the specific Symposium's agenda.

Outside attendees; In the interests of full disclosure and transparency all event working sessions will be open to media and will provide limited space opportunities for members of the public.

Example Symposium Agenda

Date; Dec. 1-10, 2012

Location; San Francisco Bay Area

Title; Safe California-Creating a Culture of Change to Benefit the People of California. (Example working title only)1.

Day 1

6-7:00 Reception for Sponsor Attendees (not open to media or the public). The objective here is to provide an opportunity for people to meet each other, to establish lines of communications and build relationships.
7-9:00 Dinner and Speaker

Keynote Speaker; Debra Hersman, Chairman of the NTSB. Hopefully she would speak about some of the nation's most serious pipeline accidents as investigated by the NTSB defining the costs in human terms and property damage; As part of this presentation, she would share the most significant findings and lessons learned from these disasters and the actions that the NTSB believes can be taken to significantly increase pipeline safety nationwide. Hopefully she can support the premise that cooperation between industry and regulators is essential to a successful outcome.

Day 2

8:30AM Kick Off-President Peavy of the CPUC-To Set the tone for the Symposium. To create the expectation for listening and learning from one another. We are all in the same boat now.
8:45AM PG&E Chairman, CEO and President Tony Earley would discuss the "unique" collaborative opportunity to transform the relationship between regulators and industry to one that becomes a partnership for public safety.

9:15 Panel Discussion-Creating a New Culture of Safety-The Past. Panelists would discuss topics including: What is today's safety culture? Do we have the right model in place to foster a partnership between industry and regulators that assures Californians that they have the safest natural gas/electrical distribution systems in the US? How do you foster understanding and create an environment between regulated industry and the regulators that produces a positive outcome? What are the barriers to success and how do we overcome them? The session will be followed by Q&A with a moderator.

10:30 Working sessions will be held in separate rooms to allow interested attendees to focus on one of the panel presentations. This open session is intended to allow participants a free forum for their thoughts and recommendations. A session moderator will prepare a group report out.

11:30 Working session report out. This is not a debate period but rather a listening opportunity.

12:00 Lunch

12:45 Presentation by a senior California Elected Official (potentially Senator Alex Padilla, Chairman of the California State Senate Utilities Committee) who would speak about what the people of California expect from the companies who serve them and the regulators who represent them with respect to safety. Safety vs Cost-how do we achieve the correct balance between the two. This presentation would provide a key political player a bi-partisan forum to further California's leadership, via a public-private partnership, in the area of public utility safety.

12:30 Panel Discussion-Creating a New Culture of Safety-The Future. Panelists would discuss such topics as; What kind of safety culture do we want? How will we know when we have arrived? Can we afford what we think we want? Who is accountable?

1:45 Working sessions (above)

3:00 Working session report out (above).

4:00 Conclusion-What do we do with this now?

(1)

Other Symposium Titles for Consideration

1. Safe: Securing a Future in Energy
2. Pause California: Partnership for Utility Safety Excellence
3. Public-Private Partnership for a Safe California
4. Powering California's Safety
5. Keeping California Safe: A Conference on Utility Improvement
6. Working Together to Build a Safer California
7. California's Energy Future Symposium
8. Partnership for a Safer Energy Future
9. Building a Blueprint for a Safe California

Hi -- no problem. I'm in the field tomorrow, but here's a quick "what I know right now" and I will try to catch you during the day/Thursday.

The week of 1/8-9 there is a large convention in the city, all hotel spaces with conference rooms have been taken, by a global JP Morgan event. The one location that we were able to get out of 10 that we tried is the Stanford Court Renaissance on Nob Hill. We don't personally have experience of an event at this location (though a million years ago I had dinner there!) -- so I can send some folks to check it out if we're interested.

The alternatives are: 1) keep with the current dates of 1/8-9 and commit to the Stanford Court (once we look at it), 2) keep the dates, but go outside of San Francisco, 3) change the date -- and get confirmation with Chairman Hersman, etc...

Perhaps you want to talk to Paul Clannon and then we can go from there. If we go to option 3, I'll have to ask Jim Hall to call the Chairman, etc... but we would first begin to line up venue/dates that would be available to try to make it efficient.

I'll try to think about any other alternatives, and then let's discuss. Also, we'll need a plan of how to engage the other utilities, Thx Jane

Honorable Deborah A. P. Hersman
Chairman
National Transportation Safety Board

Dear Chairman Hersman:

On behalf of the California Public Utilities Commission and California's public utilities I would like to thank you for confirming your intent to speak at our [DATE] symposium, "Safe California – Creating a Culture Change to Benefit the People of California." The first in a series of safety symposiums, "Safe California" will address key issues and explore solutions to public safety concerns in California's public utility sector. We hope that through this event and subsequent working meetings we will be able to better define, create and sustain a safety-first culture for public utilities in the State of California.

The symposia will allow both industry leaders and government representatives to convene, discuss and make recommendations that will help to create a more purposeful safety-first culture across California. This will be achieved through interactive workshops, panels and presentations, designed to share best practices for public safety. We will help foster understanding of safety expectations and the consequences of failure, and assert that safety, with respect to human life and property, is non-negotiable. Our goal is to collaborate across industry and government to help dramatically improve the safety of our public utility systems.

As you plan for participation, I suggest we arrange a time to review logistics and ideas for your remarks. In the meantime, please feel free to contact me directly at [EMAIL/PHONE]. On behalf of the CPUC and our state's public utility companies, thank you very much for playing such an integral role in helping us kick off our first of a series of symposiums.

Sincerely,

Michael R. Peevey
President
California Public Utilities Commission

On behalf of the California Public Utilities Commission and California's public utilities I would like to thank you for confirming your intent to speak at our [DATE] symposium, "Safe California – Creating a Culture Change to Benefit the People of California." The first in a series of safety symposiums, "Safe California" will address key issues and explore solutions to public safety concerns in California's public utility sector. We hope that through this event and subsequent working meetings we will be able to better define, create and sustain a safety-first culture for public utilities in the State of California.

The symposia will allow both industry leaders and government representatives to convene, discuss and make recommendations that will help to create a more purposeful safety-first culture across California. This will be achieved through interactive workshops, panels and presentations, designed to share best practices for public safety. We will help foster understanding of safety expectations and the consequences of failure, and assert that safety, with respect to human life and property, is non-negotiable. Our goal is to collaborate across industry and government to help dramatically improve the safety of our public utility systems.

As you plan for participation, I suggest we arrange a time to review logistics and ideas for your remarks. In the meantime, please feel free to contact me directly at [EMAIL/PHONE]. On behalf of the CPUC and our state's public utility companies, thank you very much for playing such an integral role in helping us kick off our first of a series of symposiums.

Sincerely,

Michael R. Peevey
President
California Public Utilities Commission

Hi Julie, am back in SF this week (gladly!). Here's the current utility part of the working group for the CPUC Safety Symposium:

- Brett Lane, Sempra
- Jerry Schmitz, Southwest Gas
- Jane Yura, PG&E

It may be a good idea for you to schedule a conference call soon to discuss next steps. Maybe get the team to think about the agenda, before the call. I was thinking additional invitees could be AGA (American Gas Association), and possibly the State Fire Marshall/OES, perhaps PHMSA...?

Let me know,
Thx

Subject: CPUC Meeting - Hotel Space Status Update

Hi Jane,

Renee asked me to reach out to you and share the status of the hotels that had availability for the CPUC meeting on January 8th and 9th.

Hotels

Renaissance – The Stanford Court Hotel
•Large meeting space and breakout rooms are still on "soft hold"

Hilton – San Francisco Union Square
•Large meeting space and breakout rooms are still on "soft hold"

Palace Hotel
•Space is available but they are hesitant to guarantee us meeting space without a commitment of 100 guest rooms.

Notes
The "soft hold" is informal with no obligation by either party. The hotel can release our requested dates/space at any time. We have asked them to give us a call if another group is interested.

Next Steps
Next steps should include scheduling a site visit to your preferred location, signing a contract and making a deposit. Attached you will find a summary of projected costs.

Concerns
Due to the JP Morgan Healthcare conference scheduled for the same week as the CPUC meeting dates, overnight stays will be difficult to book as well as more expensive than normal rates. So while the meeting space and breakout rooms are still on "soft hold", we cannot guarantee the same for the hotel rooms for the guests. If we book a contract with a room block, then we can be assured that the attendees will be able to secure a room. Therefore, it is important to identify how many out-of-town guests will attend and require overnight accommodations.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Best,

Andrea

Hi Sally. I'm at the Biltmore which is just a few blocks away. Another option is a hotel in Japantown, about 6 blocks (10 – 15 min walk) from the office (where the conference will be). It used to be called the Grand Kyoto, but now it's called the Doubletree by Hilton. http://doubletree3.hilton.com/en/hotels/california/doubletree-by-hilton-hotel-los-angeles-downtown-LAXDTDT/index.html . It is in an area with lots of great Japanese and other restaurants.

Jane/Julie-I have attached 2 documents for your review; 1. A draft relating to the meetings purpose and 2. A list of things we need to get done. Please review in advance of our telco if you can. Jane I had originally suggested to Julie that we try to do this call about 9AM PT on Thur. the 13th. However, in the interim my Mother has developed some problems that I need to attend to so I will be flying to Houston tomorrow and will return on Thur. the 13th. If possible I would prefer if we could move the call to the 14th (Fri.) anytime that would suit the two of you. If you could collaborate and just advise me by email (wds2texas@aol.com) or text (· Redacted ') I will call in. Also Jane if possible could you set up a telephone link for us? I know that Julie is off next week so if we can make the discussion on Fri. that would be great.

The documents are only drafts and can be changed any way we want-I just wanted to give us a place to start.

Thank you both and I look forward to the call.

Bill Scott

Symposium Planning Deliverables-DRAFT

Items to be discussed;

1. Symposium Deliverable-What are we trying to accomplish? A draft document for conversation purposes is attached separately.
2. Date of the First Symposium-target date as required by Gen. Hagan shall be prior to the end of May 2013.
3. Attendees-who are we going to invite? Assume participation by all California regulated Gas Utilities and the CPUC. Assume 10-15 participants per company and 10 from the PUC-total 55-75 or so.
4. Open to and invited guests-assume vested interest parties such as the press, company Board of Directors personnel, public safety people such as Fire Marshalls, advocacy groups, other California regulators, Federal Regulators such as PHMSA representatives, speakers, elected officials and other interested individuals-total 50. Total expected participants and observers 100-150. Outside observers are not anticipated to have a voice during this event-this is a working meeting and not a public forum for input-however as mentioned the work product and meeting itself shall be open to the public. Outside parties should also not be invited to the opening night dinner/speaker presentation.
5. Where are we going to hold the Symposium? PUC preference has been expressed for this first event to be held in the City of San Francisco.
6. Who is going to pay the cost of the event? Depends on the scope of the meeting and where it is held but budget will likely be in the $50,000.00+ range. It is anticipated that all Council Member Companies and the CPUC will participate financially to fund the event. It is important that the CPUC provides some funding for the event-the amount of that funding is certainly open to consideration.
7. What does the structure of the Symposium look like-it has been suggested that we have an evening social and buffet dinner with a guest speaker on day one with the event starting approximately at 6PM and concluding by 9PM. Day 2 would start early-say by 8 with a continental breakfast and coffee preceding. The agenda would be a mix of presentations by both industry members and CPUC personnel followed by break out groups to further discussion. Topics would be assigned in advance to generate focus. It is anticipated that Gen. Hagan and one of the Member Council Company executives would address the group during this work day to set expectations. The meeting day will include lunch and is expected to conclude by 5PM.
8. Guest Speaker for the first evening kick-off. Discussion to this point has centered on Debra Hersmann, Chairman of the NTSB. She has been contacted by Jim Hall of Hall and Asso. And has expressed willingness to participate-the only issue is date alignment.
9. Work Team-who is going to drive this Symposium? I recommend that the Team be a working team composed of one person or more (as required) from each prospective member company and the PUC. Initially the group would be Chaired Jointly by Jane Yura from PG&E and Julie Halligan from the CPUC. Other Council Member companies need to be identified and contacted-who is going to do this? Bill Scott/Bob Chipkevitch from Hall and Asso. Shall support the Team as outside content and resource persons.

10. Logistics need to be identified by this team and resources committed to cause the event to take shape which includes Symposium deliverables, the final agenda, cost definition-allocation, facility identification and contracting, speaker identification and confirmation and so forth. The Work Team in #9 above shall drive these tasks utilizing company/CPUC personnel and resources as required. It is expected that the final draft document detailing Symposium Deliverables is completed for final review with Gen. Hagan during the week of Jan. 28th, 2013. PRELIMINARY COUNCIL MEMBER COMPANY APPROVAL is also independently anticipated by this date. Final approval to proceed should be anticipated within two weeks of this internal review.
11. Other Items?

Jane/Julie-I have attached 2 documents for your review; 1. A draft relating to the meetings purpose and 2. A list of things we need to get done. Please review in advance of our telco if you can. Jane I had originally suggested to Julie that we try to do this call about 9AM PT on Thur. the 13th. However, in the interim my Mother has developed some problems that I need to attend to so I will be flying to Houston tomorrow and will return on Thur. the 13th. If possible I would prefer if we could move the call to the 14th (Fri.) anytime that would suit the two of you. If you could collaborate and just advise me by email (wds2texas@aol.com<mailto:2texas@aol.com>) or text (Redacted) I will call in. Also Jane if possible could you set up a telephone link for us? I know that Julie is off next week so if we can make the discussion on Fri. that would be great.

The documents are only drafts and can be changed any way we want-I just wanted to give us a place to start.

Thank you both and I look forward to the call.

Symposium Deliverable-DRAFT

Objective-To craft a Symposium jointly sponsored by the CPUC and Industry (Regulated Gas Utilities in the State of California) that will address Public Safety Metrics which will serve to measure Utility Performance in the area of Gas Utility Public Safety in the State of California. The metrics chosen by the Symposium Attendees will be collaboratively derived. They (the measures ultimately selected) will; 1. Represent at a high level the true, consistent and verifiable Public Safety Performance of California Gas Utilities 2. The measures selected will be concurred in publically by the CPUC as representative of the performance of the regulated Gas Utility Companies in the State of California 3. The measures when approved and published will be made public. 4. The number of measures chosen for development and publication shall be as agreed to by the Council of Members and the CPUC but generally they shall be; limited in number, be developed in a consistent fashion by the Member Companies, and 5. The measures may be used by the member companies in support of ratemaking applications before the CPUC and they may be used likewise by the CPUC during the ratemaking process and/ or in support of CPUC rulemaking.

It is the intent of the parties to this first Symposium, tentatively scheduled for May 2013, that this initial Symposium will represent the first of an ongoing series of Symposiums between the CPUC and California's regulated Gas Companies. Topics to be addressed will be defined collaboratively by a to be established Council of Member Companies and the CPUC-however, the purpose of all future Symposium's will be designed to further the cause of communication and focus on topics of mutual interest to the benefit of public safety.

It is understood that the Members and the CPUC may desire to include other regulators (PHMSA for example), non-regulated companies in or outside the State of California and such other professionals, experts, consultants, elected public officials or other parties as may be deemed beneficial to the purpose of the Symposium. It is finally understood that the costs of each Symposium shall be shared by all sponsoring parties to the Symposium in a fashion agreed to by the Council of Member Companies and the CPUC.

Finally, there is no expectation that the Symposium itself is intended to produce a final work product relating to the Symposiums topic-rather the Symposium is intended to provide a forum for understanding and discussion-the work product of any Symposium shall be the responsibility of the Council of Members and the CPUC subsequent to the Symposium.

Hello everyone, just confirming our call tomorrow afternoon. I am attaching a draft schedule that may be helpful for our discussion (it is very rough, and will need much adjusting, details...).

Also, I hope to have some possible venues that are being reviewed through our PG&E contacts with various hotels.

Looking forward to the call,

Hi Julie --- sorry to hear you are out ill --- I actually just got back in last week after being out for a while with the flu. It's been a prolonged recovery on my end.

We postponed the call we were to have with Bill Scott (from Jim Hall and associates) – but I did get a chance to talk with Bill a bit. We thought it might be a good idea to get Sempra (Bret Lane) and Southwest Gas (Jerry Schmitz) and PG&E (me) together with you, when Bill Scott and Jim Hall are here on 1/30 Wednesday.

I contacted Bret and Jerry, and they could fly in for a meeting late the morning of 1/30 or early afternoon. Do you think you could accommodate a meeting? Future ones could be via phone, but it may be good to have one face-to-face to discuss content, logistics, and any assignments you'd like to make.

Get better soon,

Jane

Hi Julie – I received confirmation that Bret Lane (Sempra) and Jerry Schmitz (SoWest Gas) will be flying in for the meeting at 2:15, as well as some of Jim Hall's team --- I just generally gave the location as the CPUC. Could you please confirm that is okay.

Thx! hope all's better.

Thanks Jane.
Yes, this cold or flu is miserable. I m scheduled to be in the office on the 30th, so it should work. The only meeting on my calendar right now is a 1-2 pm meeting, so i would just need to work around that.

Hi Julie --- sorry to hear you are out ill --- I actually just got back in last week after being out for a while with the flu. It's been a prolonged recovery on my end.

We postponed the call we were to have with Bill Scott (from Jim Hall and associates) – but I did get a chance to talk with Bill a bit. We thought it might be a good idea to get Sempra (Bret Lane) and Southwest Gas (Jerry Schmitz) and PG&E (me) together with you, when Bill Scott and Jim Hall are here on 1/30 Wednesday.

I contacted Bret and Jerry, and they could fly in for a meeting late the morning of 1/30 or early afternoon. Do you think you could accommodate a meeting? Future ones could be via phone, but it may be good to have one face-to-face to discuss content, logistics, and any assignments you'd like to make.

Get better soon,

Jane

Julie--- I hope it was okay for Bill Scott to help us with the meeting this Wednesday on the safety symposium. I thought he could provide some resource support vs having to find folks on your team or at the utilities. He will help us as much or little as you'd like.

Separately, I know we're trying to set up time this week to reach agreement on the encroachment plan and any penalties. I can rearrange my calendar to fit whatever schedule works for you. We can even keep the Wednesday symposium planning meeting short, and then work on it, since I will be at your offices.
Thx

I think it would be helpful to go over the agenda and potential speakers in advance of Friday's call with the group. I want to compare notes to make sure we are all on the same page about the potential topics after the last meeting. That will help me think of topics/speakers as well. Let me know if there is a good time.

CALIFORNIA'S FIRST ANNUAL JOINT SYMPOSIUM ON NATURAL GAS SAFETY

May 7 & 8, 2013

Mark Hopkins Hotel, San Francisco

Sponsored by the California Public Utilities Commission

In cooperation with the Natural Gas Utilities of California

This year's theme is

Gas Safety: A Shared Responsibility

Details to follow in late March.

We are currently planning for a session that begins after lunch on Tuesday, May 7 and concludes early afternoon on Wednesday, May 8.

Hi Julie – in case we don't connect this morning, before our 1:30 call, here's what I recommend to move the team along:

Theme: "Gas Safety: a shared Responsibility"

1. request the team to submit a list of recommended invitees by next Friday. PG&E will help develop a consolidated list for everyone, which we can then see/discuss. The list should include name, organization/company, email address (we will send invites electronically) – I can send a simple excel template after the call.

2. assign us to identify the presenters for the 3 panels, and the areas they will cover: Regulatory (Lead: Julie, support Laura), Utilities (Lead: Jane, Bret and Jerry), Industry (Bill Scott)-- next Friday's call, report out on the invitees and the presenters.

3. Logistics: I can report out on venue, how we're going to send invitations electronically and manage rsvp's

Am on a conference call till 11--

Thx,
Jane

Theme: "Gas Safety: a shared Responsibility"

1. request the team to submit a list of recommended invitees by next Friday. PG&E will help develop a consolidated list for everyone, which we can then see/discuss. The list should include name, organization/company, email address (we will send invites electronically) – I can send a simple excel template after the call.

2. assign us to identify the presenters for the 3 panels, and the areas they will cover: Regulatory (Lead: Julie, support Laura), Utilities (Lead: Jane, Bret and Jerry), Industry (Bill Scott)-- next Friday's call, report out on the invitees and the presenters.

3. Logistics: I can report out on venue, how we're going to send invitations electronically and manage rsvp's

Am on a conference call till 11--

Thx,

Jane

Hi Julie, it's time to dig up the invite letter to NTSB chairman Hersman from Pres. Peevey --- now that we have a venue (Mark Hopkins hotel, SF) and we can say afternoon of 5/7 to give the opening keynote for the symposium on "Safety – a Shared Responsibility".... If you need help, let me know (I have the old draft somewhere in a file).
Thx

Just a status update – Bob Chipkevich has sent us all a draft of suggestions for the Public Safety panel; Jerry Schmitz, Bret and Jane have a call to discuss the Utility industry panel first thing tomorrow, to share with the team during the 1:30 PST call tomorrow; hopefully Julie and Bret have had a chance to touch bases on the other Industry panel; and Julie with Peter on the Regulatory panel. I know everyone is working on their proposed attendees' list.

If any panel recommendations are ready by noon, pls forward to the team for the 1:30 discussion. (Dial In #1-877-326-0011, 415 973 1398)

Julie --- here are the panel recommendations for the Utility Industry Panel that you can begin to review. We included the recommendations by Bob Chipkevich for the Public/First Responders Panel. And made suggestions for the other two, for our call this afternoon. I know there is work in progress this morning --- but thought it better to get out earlier,

Hi Julie, any word from Paul? We're reaching the critical week on our timeline, as the speakers are lining up etc. I checked, and we have not secured the venue until we hear from you,
Thx

Hi All,

My meeting with Paul has been scheduled over our meeting this afternoon. Since many of the issues that this group is trying to reach closure on are the same ones I need to discuss with Paul, I need to take the meeting and reschedule our check in until next week. We don't need to wait until Friday if the group can fit in ½ hour earlier.

Best,

March xx, 2013

Honorable Deborah A. P. Hersman
Chairman
National Transportation Safety Board

Dear Chairman Hersman:

On behalf of the California Public Utilities Commission and California's public utilities I would like to thank you for confirming your intent to speak at our May 7, 2013 symposium, "Forging a New Vision of Safety in California." The first in a series of safety symposiums, "Safety in California" will address key issues and explore solutions to public safety concerns in California's public utility sector. We hope that through this event and subsequent working meetings we will be able to better define, create and sustain a safety-first culture for public utilities in the State of California.

The symposia will allow both industry leaders and government representatives to convene, discuss and make recommendations that will help to create a more purposeful safety-first culture across California. This will be achieved through interactive workshops, panels and presentations, designed to share best practices for public safety. We will help foster understanding of safety expectations and the consequences of failure, and assert that safety, with respect to human life and property, is non-negotiable. Our goal is to collaborate across industry and government to help dramatically improve the safety of our public utility systems.

As you plan for participation, I suggest we arrange a time to review logistics and ideas for your remarks. In the meantime, please feel free to contact me directly at [EMAIL/PHONE]. On behalf of the CPUC and our state's public utility companies, thank you very much for playing such an integral role in helping us kick off our first of a series of symposiums.

Sincerely,

Michael R. Peevey
President
California Public Utilities Commission

General,
Would love to attend, if on California's dime...as you know CR and Sequestration is hitting our travel budget. You can count me in.

I have a couple recommendations for your panel, 2 former Directors of the School now out in the civilian world leading some commercial safety efforts, Robert " Cosmo" Conway at Disney and Ken "Nubs" Neubauer at Futron Co. Also, just met Col Ken Cameron, USMC (ret), like you, a Platoon leader in Vietnam, ended up as a Space Shuttle Commander for NASA, and then was NASA's Deputy Director of Engineering and Safety. He lives in Houston, not sure if he would be interested butI think he would be great for your panel. Finally, Doc Figlock who runs the Naval Aviation's, Climate Surveys for the CO's, he is right down the road at Monterrey.

Pulling the string on investigation training out there. Will send when I have all the info, we have a couple places we use.

Below is contact info for potential panel members:

Caveman,

How would you like to come to San Francisco 7-8 May and be on a panel at my first Safety Symposium to speak on climate and culture as it effects safety. The Audience would be the presidents, CEO's, and board of directors of the gas companies in California and the Californian Public Utilities Commission Commissioners. About 100 people.

Who else would you recommend be on this panel? We have Capt Sullenberger as a quest speaker.

We will pay your freight.

Separate item: Where can I send my people to good accident investigation training and where is the format for an accident investigation not the JAG manual investigation, but mishap investigation? I am trying to establish a two track investigation process: Safety investigation with privileged information and a separate punitive investigation for responsibility.

Let me know what you think and I hope to see you in May.

Safety Culture – Theory and Practice

Abstract

Safety Culture is seen as a way of ensuring high levels of safety performance in organisations, in contrast to the systematic engineered management of hazards and effects. This paper examines the notion of a safety culture in terms of the characteristics of being informed and trusting. These notions are related to more general organisational dimensions describing behaviours an attitudes. Cultures are seen as being defined by their Values, their Beliefs, their Common working Practices and also the ways in which they respond to unusual situations. In a Safety Culture these are all aligned to ensure safe operation even, or especially, when hazardous operations are undertaken. The evolutionary framework of cultures from the Pathological and the Reactive, through the Calculative or Bureaucratic to the Proactive and Generative cultures are described. The Generative culture is equated with the High Reliability Organisations identified in studies of military and civil high risk operations. Next a model is proposed for how to change organisations in order to acquire a safety culture. Finally the barriers to successful intervention are discussed. These include the nature of bureaucratic organisations, the conflicting goals of regulators, failures of management and the fact that change processes are hard.

Introduction - Why Safety Culture?

Safety is an ubiquitous concept. In some industries, such as commercial aviation, safety is so embedded into the organisation that it can be difficult to see just what the general concept of safety means, so I want to start by expanding the notion. Most people see safety as concerned primarily with the personal well-being of stakeholders, by which I mean all those involved, not just the immediate actors and owners. Some also add the integrity of the business and its assets. While these are necessary preconditions, I view safety, and more specifically safety management, in a more active way. I see the creation of a safe environment as allowing dangerous activities to take place successfully, which means without harm or damage. What this means is that safety is more than a passive and well-meaning notion, such as "Thou shall do no harm". Instead safety is something that has to be actively managed to allow profit or advantage to be gained. The oil and gas industry is one that is naturally dangerous – fire and explosion are natural hazards of the product, mass and power inherent in the means of production. The aviation industry is another; flying is the defiance of gravity and, outside of the Zeppelin, high speeds are also inherent. In both these cases, as well as similar industries, risk is the name of the game. Even an apparently sedentary occupation, such as banking, involves risk and the potential for massive loss. Those organisations that manage their risks best are in place to make the most profit. Those that do not manage so well are either perceived as dangerous or are forced to scale down their operations to achieve acceptable levels of safety.

What has safety culture to do with this? The answer is that there are a number of ways of achieving high levels of safety. These range from having a systematic and highly controlled prescription of all activities in order to exclude the possibility of hazards ever becoming loose, to creating an organisational culture within which everyone is personally involved in ensuring the safety of all concerned, such as DuPont's interdependent culture. The term safety culture can be applied to both, but they clearly represent quite different cultures. What has become clear is that there is a natural and evolutionary progression of cultures, first laid out by Westrum (1991), and that the end-point of this progression is what we call a true Safety Culture. What has also become clear more recently is that, while the road to achieving this ideal state is not an easy one, the benefits to be gained most certainly outweigh the costs of attaining it. In particular there are advantages to be had from actually reducing the time, and especially paperwork, devoted to safety. The reason for this is that much of what takes place in managing safety in earlier stages is the direct result of a failure of trust and a lack of confidence. These shortcomings lead to over-management and, accordingly, more hard work than is necessary.

Paper presented at the RTO HFM Workshop on "The Human Factor in System Reliability – Is Human Performance Predictable?", held in Siena, Italy, 1-2 December 1999, and published in RTO MP-032.

This paper first examines the notion of a safety culture and attempts to identify the components in a way that is useful. Then I will discuss how one might go about achieving the goal of being a real safety culture. Next I will discuss briefly some of the barriers that are liable to prevent the full development. Finally I will draw conclusions in which the commercial factor again plays a role.

What is a Safety Culture?

Every organisation has some common, internal, characteristics that we call its culture. These characteristics have often become invisible to those inside, but may be startling to outsiders coming from a different culture. The notion of an organisational culture is notoriously difficult to define (Furnham, 1997; Schein, 1992, 1996), so I take a very general approach and see the organisational culture as, roughly "Who and what we are, what we find important, and how we go about doing things round here". Rousseau (1988) defined culture more specifically as "the ways of thinking, behaving and believing that members of a social unit have in common". A safety culture is a special case of such a culture, one in which safety has a special place in the concerns of those who work for the organisation[1].

We can first distinguish culture into its static and its dynamic components. The term static refers to what is, generally the unchanging values held by the organisation, and the beliefs that permeate its members. The term dynamic refers to how the organisation operates, the types of work processes it feels comfortable with. Table 1 shows a set of definitions of the four major components that can be identified as constituting corporate culture (Hudson, 1998). The distinction between common working practices and problem solving methods is not always drawn, but this may be because researchers tend to study companies in either periods of stability or of great change, but not through both. Operating in a stable world highlights the daily working practices, while periods of change are dominated by problem-solving processes. The High Reliability Organisations studied by the Berkeley Group (LaPorte & Consilini, 1991) are characterised by radically different ways of operating under normal and high stress situations.

A safety culture is one in which safety plays a very important role. Because safety is such a complex phenomenon, it is not enough just to add – "And be safe". The next sections examine the characteristics of a safety culture and look at the types of culture that can be recognised as forming a progression along which organisations develop.

The characteristics of a Safety Culture

What does an organisational culture that gives safety a priority look like? Reason (1997) has identified a number of characteristics that go to make up such a safety culture. These are:

- an informed culture-one in which those who manage and operate the system have current knowledge about the human, technical, organisational and environmental factors that determine the safety of the system as a whole,
- a reporting culture: a culture in which people are willing to report errors and near misses,
- a just culture: a culture of 'no blame' where an atmosphere of trust is present and people are encouraged or even rewarded for providing essential safety-related information- but where there is also a clear line between acceptable and unacceptable behaviour and,

[1] In one sense safety always has a place in an organisation's culture, which can then be referred to as the safety culture. But it is only past a certain stage of development that an organisation can be said to take safety sufficiently seriously to be labelled as a safety culture, a culture of safety.

- a flexible culture which can take different forms but is characterised as shifting from the conventional hierarchical mode to a flatter professional structure.
- a learning culture - the willingness and the competence to draw the right conclusions from its safety information system, and the will to implement major reforms when the need is indicated.

The values associated with a safety culture are fairly straightforward. The beliefs are more complex. Taken together the five characteristics form a culture of trust and of informedness. Trust is needed, especially in the face of assaults upon the beliefs that people are trying their best, such as accidents and near-miss incidents which all too easily look like failures of individuals to come up to the ideals of the organisation. Informedness means that people know what is really happening, lessening the chance of mistakes caused by inappropriate world views. This helps us to identify what beliefs are associated with a safety culture. Table 2 places safety into the framework set in Table 1. Reason's characteristics are the outcome of corporate behaviours driven by the static and dynamic components of the corporate culture, but mostly by beliefs and behaviours rather than values. Organisations with high values may not live up to their own expectations.

Types of Safety Culture

Safety cultures can be distinguished along a line from pathological, caring less about safety than about not being caught, through calculative, blindly following all the logically necessary steps, to generative, in which safe behaviour is fully integrated into everything the organisation does (Westrum & Adamski, 1999; Westrum, 1991; Weick, 1987). A Culture of Safety can only be considered seriously in the later stages of this evolutionary line. Prior to that, up to and including the calculative stage, the term safety culture is best reserved to describe formal and superficial structures rather than an integral part of the overall culture, pervading how safely the organisation goes about its work. It is obvious that, at the pathological stage, an organisation is not even interested in safety and has to make the first level of acquiring the value system that includes safety as a necessary element. A subsequent stage is one in which safety issues begin to acquire importance, often driven by both internal and external factors as a result of having many incidents. At this first stage of development we can see the values beginning to be acquired, but the beliefs, methods and working practices are still at a primeval stage. At such an early stage, top management believes accidents to be caused by stupidity, inattention and, even, wilfulness on the part of their employees. Many messages may flow from on high, but the majority still reflect the organisation's primary aims, often with 'and be safe' tacked on at the end. One cannot fail to be 'impressed' by the management of Townsend Thoreson and the messages they were sending to their work force in the run up to the Herald of Free Enterprise disaster (Sheen, 1987).

Table 1: Corporate Culture definitions

Culture Component	Definition
Corporate Values	What the organisation regards as important or even sacrosanct
Corporate Beliefs	What the organisation believes about the world, how the world will react to actions, what the outside world finds important. Beliefs about what works and doesn't
Common Problem-Solving Methods	How the types of problem found in the organisation are tackled, e.g. project groups, consultants, panic
Common Working Practices	The way people go about their work, e.g. small meetings, lots of memos, project management of everything etc.

Table 2: A Safety Culture defined in terms of the organisational components. Note that the methods and working practices are not restricted to safety, but that safety is intimately involved in the way work is done.

Safety Culture Component	Definition
Safety Values	The organisation regards as safety as sacrosanct and provides the licence to operate.
Safety Beliefs	The organisation believes that safety makes commercial sense; that individuals are not the sole causes of incidents; that the next accident is waiting to happen.
Common Problem-Solving Methods	Risk assessment, cost-benefit analyses, accident analysis as well as investigation, proactive search for problems in advance of incidents.
Common Working Practices	Safety integral to design and operations practice, safety #1 on meeting agendas up to Board level, chronic unease about safety.

The next stage, one that I feel can not be circumvented, involves the recognition that safety does need to be taken seriously. The term calculative is used to stress that safety is calculated; quantitative risk assessment techniques and overt cost-benefit analyses are used to justify safety and to measure the effectiveness of proposed measures. Such techniques are typical problem-solving methods. Often simple calculations suggest that failing to be safe, or at least having incidents, costs money. Furthermore organisations that are seen from outside as being uncaring about safety may have image problems that knock on to the bottom line. Despite this stance, and despite what can become an impressive safety record, safety is still an add-on, certainly when seen from outside.

The Reactive and the Proactive stages have been added more recently and articulated in our work in the Oil and Gas industry. Table 5 shows an extended and more practical version that was worked out, in co-operation with Westrum, with the addition of the Reactive and Proactive stages.

Pathological	Bureaucratic	Generative
Information is hidden	Information may be ignored	Information is actively sought
Messengers are "shot"	Messengers are tolerated	Messengers are trained
Responsibilities are shirked	Responsibility is compartmented	Responsibilities are shared
Bridging is discouraged	Bridging is allowed but discouraged	Bridging is rewarded
Failure is covered up	Organisation is just and merciful	Failure causes enquiry
New ideas are crushed	New ideas create problems	New ideas are welcomed

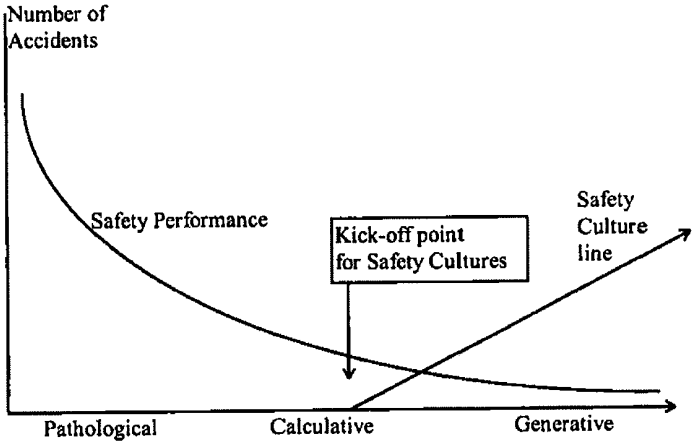

Figure 1: The safety performance will improve as the culture matures, but there can only start to be talk of a Safety Culture once the calculative stage has been passed

The foundation can now be laid, nevertheless, for acquiring beliefs that safety is worthwhile in its own right. By constructing deliberate procedures an organisation can force itself into taking safety seriously, or can be forced by a regulatory body, but the values are not yet fully internalised, the methods are still new and individual beliefs generally lag behind corporate intentions. This shows us a significant characteristic of a true safety culture, that the value system associated with safety and safe working has to be fully internalised as beliefs, almost to the point of invisibility, and that the entire suite of approaches the organisation uses are safety-based (Rochlin et al, 1987). What this also stresses is that the notion of a safety culture can only arise in an organisational context within which the necessary technical steps and procedures are already in place and in operation. Yet again, these are necessary but not sufficient preconditions for a safety culture (LaPorte & Consolini, 1991, Laporte, 1996, Turner & Pidgeon, 1997).

Table 4 breaks down general organisational cultures into more detail. The internals may be reflected at any cultural level, so managerial style will vary from pathological through to generative (see below). The Walk/Talk headings are intended to distinguish the more passive from the active components. Filling in these components helps define how a culture appears and how a culture should be. The next section discusses a progression of cultures.

Table 4: The Safety Culture dimensions and internal structure.
These are filled in with different descriptions for each level of the safety culture attained.
For each cell it should be possible to think in terms of the values, beliefs and practices that apply. This is done in Table 5.

TALK Communication	Organisational Attitudes	WALK Safety	Organisational Behaviour	Working Behaviour
Flow of data and information about safety	Workforce attitudes to management	Organisational status of safety Department	Managerial style and behaviour	Priority setting between production and safety
Management informedness about the true state of affairs	Management attitudes about the workforce	Rewards of good safety performance	Level of care for stakeholders	Risk appreciation by those at personal risk
Workforce informedness about the true state of affairs	Collective efficacy – the belief that people can get things done	Procedures and the use of initiative	Dealing with change	On-site behaviour by the workforce and management
		Design – safety as a starting point	Reaction to trouble when it happens	Environment seen as critical

Described in this way we can see how crucial is the notion of belief. The overt knowledge about safety, taken together with a set of values, may still not be enough when difficulties arise, although in easy times behaviour may be exemplary. In the last resort what drives a person, and I would argue an organisation, is less their knowledge than their beliefs. When knowledge clashes with belief the more deep-seated is likely to come out on top as the driver of behaviour, and beliefs, even as articles of unjustified faith, are more deep seated than any rationally acquired knowledge. The latter may be easily disproved or set aside, belief is much harder both to induce and, then, to shift.

The final stages, identified by Westrum in his studies on high reliability organisations and labelled generative, involve a much more proactive approach to safety. Whereas the calculative stage represents a reactive approach, using past experience to determine future behaviour, the generative approach may be characterised by a much more internalised model of good practice as its driver. This model becomes internalised as a set of beliefs about why and how the organisation operates, about what is the best way to do things. Assumptions about the need to be safe are unquestioned; everything else, in contrast, is open for discussion and improvement. A characteristic of this stage is the lack of complacency, even in the face of a dearth of accidents. This has been labelled chronic unease, which sums up the pessimistic stance that just because everything has gone well is just an indication that what is about to happen will be a new experience. Fortunately, chronic unease is balanced by optimistic presumption that what does happen can be faced and coped with. It does not imply shrinking from challenge, not pessimism elsewhere in the organisation. The generative stage can be equated to the High Reliability Organisations studied by the Berkeley Group (Rochlin et al, 1987; LaPorte & Consolini, 1991; Weick & Roberts, 1993).

One crucial difference between this stage, and prior stages in the evolution of a safety culture, is that the human factor is considered to include both the individual and the organisation. The model of human behaviour has shifted from one in which workers have to be driven, and are not to be trusted, to a more mature understanding of what makes people tick. It is only at this point that it becomes possible to understand that establishment of a safety culture is still not enough, on its own, to counter all human error because such errors may be outside of the control of the immediate perpetrator.

This review suggests that the safety culture concept includes much more than just thinking that safety is important. Work practices and overt priorities not only include safety, but the whole way in which unsafe work is perceived reflects a major shift of point of view. This shift is from regarding individuals as a source of problems for an otherwise perfect organisation to one in which organisations can cause and cure their own problems by using the people who make them up.

Table 5: A more detailed set of descriptions of the different types of safety culture. HSE is Health, Safety and Environment. This table was defined for the Oil and Gas industry and hasserved as a reliable discrimination test.

	PATHOLOGICAL	REACTIVE	CALCULATIVE	PROACTIVE	GENERATIVE
COMMUNICATION	Nobody is informed, no feedback, everybody is passive, no care/ knowledge about safety, don't see(k) or ask the problem, collect what is legally required.	Management demands data on HSE failures, denial until forced to admit, top-down flow of information, bottom-up incidents, lots of statistics nobody understands, safety hot issue after accident.	Environment of command and control by management, lots of HSE graphs, statistics but no follow up, info goes top-down, failures bottom-up, little top-down feedback, toolbox meetings, procedures exist but are only once read. Action is delayed after knowledge.	Management goes out and seek, discuss for themselves they know what to change and how to manage, the feedback loop (bottom-up and top-down) is closing at supervisory level safety topics become part of other meetings, asked for by workforce, they need detail to understand WHY accidents happen.	No threshold between management-workforce, management participates/shares activities (dialogue), HSE is nr 1, all feedback loops are closed, safety is integrated in other meetings; no special safety meetings required, workforce keeps itself up-to-date, they demand information so they can prevent problems.
ORGANISATIONAL ATTITUDES	No believe or trust, environment of punishing, blaming and controlling the workforce.	Failures caused by individuals. No blame but responsibility, workforce needs to be educated and follow the procedures, management overreacts in eyes of workforce.	Workforce is more involved, little effect on procedures, designs, practices workforce does not understand the problem, management is seen as obsessive with HSE, but they don't 'mean' it. (Walk-talk).	Workforce involvement is promoted but ruled/organised by supervisory staff which is obsessed by HSE statistics.	Management is recognised as a partner by workforce, management respects workforce, management has to fix systematic failures, workforce has to identify them.
HSE	No HSE status, HSE issues are ignored, minimal requirements, no rewards on good performance, safety is inherited bur not known, reliance on experience.	Meets legal req. collects statistics but no follow up, design is changed after accidents, procedures are rewritten to prevent previous accidents no update or improvements.	HSE well accepted, advisor collects data and creates own statistics, HSE rewards for positive and negative performance, design: quantitative methods, procedures to solve unsolved problems, standard procedures preferred from the shelf, large numbers of procedures but few checks on use/knowledge.	Separate line HSE advisors promoting improvement, but try to reduce the inconvenience to line, for good HSE initiatives there is career enhancement for Sr. staff, HSE is in the early stages of design, procedures are rewritten by workforce, integration with competency, complaints about externally set targets.	HSE department is a small, advising the management on strategy, group, no special rewards, individual pride, procedures are written by workforce, continuous improvement, small numbers of procedures are integrated in training.
ORGANISATIONAL BEHAVIOUR	Denial anything is wrong, avoids HSE discussions, management is hierarchical and stagnant to changes, focus on profits not on workforce, workforce has lots of freedom-> mn don't care.	Man. Holds workforce responsible for failures, overreacting, management. States that it takes safety seriously, but is not always believed by workforce.	Detail focussed/playing with numbers, believe company is doing well in spite of contrary, targets are not challenged, inability to admit solutions may not work the first time.	Management knows the risks, interested in HSE, takes culture into account, safety priority over production which leads to incompatible goals, lots of management walk-abouts, communication and assessments about accidents and near-misses and their consequences.	Safety is equal to production, enthusiastic communication between workforce and management and vv, workforce has a lot of freedom-> trust.
WORKING BEHAVIOUR	Workplace is dangerous, messy, no (legal) health requirements, management does not CARE and does not KNOWS.	Basic leg. Requirements implemented, housekeeping is temp. Improved when inspection comes, management KNOWS but not always CARES.	Clean and tidy working environment, housekeeping is very important (prizes), Management CARES but not always KNOWS.	Management CARES and KNOWS, discussion about prioritisation, time and resources are available for sit improvements even before accidents happen.	Management CARES and KNOWS, workforce furnishes its own environment, management passes the experience around to other sites

How can you achieve a Safety Culture?

We have been studying the safety culture of organisations in the oil and gas industry and it is clear that, to progress, one has to undergo a process of cultural change. These changes have to take place incrementally. It appears logical, at least, that it is impossible to go straight from the reactive to the proactive without going1 through the calculative stage because the proactive culture includes systems typical of the calculative. Similarly it is probably impossible to go from the pathological straight to the calculative stage.

Change Management

What has to be done for an organisation to develop along the line towards the generative or true safety cultures is a managed change process. The next culture defines where we want to go to, the change model determines how we get there. A model for developmental change has been proposed by Prochaska and DiClemente (1995). This model was originally developed for getting people off drug and other dependencies such as smoking, alcohol and over-eating. It proposes that there are five stages that the authors have identified. These stages are:

- Precontemplation – Not yet at a stage of considering the need for change. In safety terms a complacent belief that what can be achieved has been achieved. Coupled with the belief that further improvement is 'not possible in this business'.
- Contemplation – A stage at which the realisation is arisen that further improvement is possible. There is no actual change in behaviour and no steps are taken. Nevertheless the possibility of improvement is entertained.
- Preparation – Active steps are taken to prepare for change (in smoking this would be characterised by trying not to buy cigarettes, by not maintaining a stock; in dieting this might involve avoiding certain eating situations, but in both cases without actually smoking or eating less). Characterised by much backsliding.
- Action - The stage when the practice built up in the preparation stage is put to work. The beliefs are now that it is important and possible to stop the addictive behaviour. This stage needs to be actively supported while the pull to slide backwards is actively countered (in contrast to the previous stage when backsliding is characteristic).
- Maintenance – This stage is vital in maintaining a new, lower baseline of behaviour. This stage needs to be kept up and can often be lost with reversion to the behaviour characteristic of preparation and action.

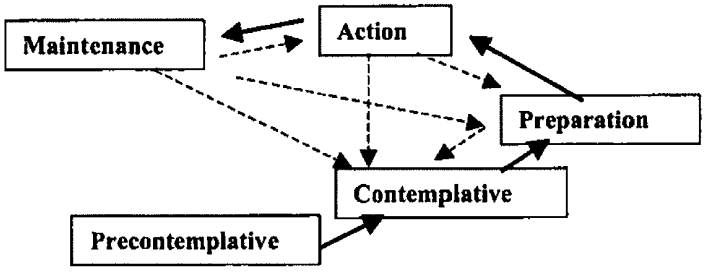

Figure II: Prochaska & DiClemente's change model. The dotted lines denote possible ways to fall back. Note that it is not possible to revert as far as the pre-contemplative mode once one has become aware. The remaining stages are, however, unfortunately quite possible as anyone who has tried to give up smoking knows.

Figure II shows the basic set of transitions from precontemplative through to maintenance, with back-sliding as dotted lines. The step back to precontemplative is not possible (i.e. the values remain intact, but beliefs in the possibility of meeting them may be severely damaged). What is contemplated will be different at each stage of safety culture, so the transition from proactive to generative includes concepts, values and beliefs incomprehensible to those at lower stages. The application of this transition process leads to a spiral when we take safety culture into account.

What is important in this model is the recognition of which stage a patient finds themselves in and the methods available to shift them through the transition from one stage to the next. The stages will require the definition of tools to determine which stage individuals and groups (in organisations) are currently in. The transitions that have to be made will require change tools. The term stage is used to refer to one of these treatment situations. A transition takes place between stages.

A Change Model for Organisations

A more articulated model, based upon the simpler Prochaska & DiClemente model, has been developed for managing successful change within organisations rather than individuals. This model, shown below in Table 6, puts together the requirements for change of belief that are so crucial in cultural development. What we have learned is that awareness is not enough, the creation of need and belief in the value of the outcome is equally vital in ensuring a successful process

The model, which has been recently developed in research for Shell International (Hudson et al, 2000), is very similar to any quality system Plan-Do-Check, but the internals of the stages, especially the Awareness and Planning stages, are often missed or treated very summarily. All too often, the active participation of those involved, in the awareness and planning stages, is replaced by a plan of action defined elsewhere. Such plans typically come from senior management, external corporate departments or consultants. What are needed are: (I) the creation of a personal need to change, (II) a belief in the ability to effect such change and (III) the clear understanding that individuals have control over their own process. These are factors that have been repeatedly found in the literature on motivation to influence final outcomes positively. It is just these factors we feel get to the Hearts and Minds of the workforce. When the beliefs and values associated with a new (and hopefully better) state have been assimilated and internalised, then the change has really taken place. This model can apply to safety, but it can also apply to Cost Leadership or any other desirable development in an organisational environment.

Table 6: The articulated Change Model for Organisations. Prochaska and DiClemente's original five stages are elaborated to 14 to cover the details required in real settings.

Pre-contemplation to Contemplation - AWARENESS

- Awareness – Simple knowledge of a 'better' alternative than the current state
- Creation of need – Active desire to achieve the new state
- Making the outcome believable – believing that the state is sensible for those involved
- Making the outcome achievable- making the process of achieving the new state credible for those involved
- Information about successes - provision of information about others who have succeeded
- Personal vision - definition by those involved of what they expect the new situation to be

Contemplation to Preparation - PLANNING

- Plan construction - creation by those involved of their own action plan
- Measurement points - definition of indicators of success in process
- Commitment - signing-up to the plan of all involved

Preparation to Action - ACTION

- Do - start implementing action plan
- Review - review progress with concentration upon successful outcomes
- Correct - reworking of plan where necessary

Maintenance - MAINTENANCE

- Review - management review of process at regular (and defined in advance) intervals
- Outcome - checks on internalisation of values and beliefs in outcome state

What are the barriers to success?

If there were no barriers, the development of a safety culture would never form a problem and safety cultures would abound. Why, then, do attempts fail? The reasons are to be found in the beliefs and practices that characterise an organisation and its members. In many cases organisations will naturally limit their development unless active steps are taken. In the worst cases organisations may actually revert. As all organisational cultures past the Pathological hold safety high in their value systems, reversion may appear to the participants to be less significant than it actually is.

Bureaucratic Cultures

One major reason is that the bureaucratic culture associated with the calculative safety culture is a powerful and comfortable one. An organisation that has struggled to be come proactive may easily revert, especially in the face of success. Generative organisations have many characteristics that are essentially anti-bureaucratic; the hierarchical structures break down under high-tempo operations (LaPorte & Consilini, 1991). What this demonstrates when it happens is that the beliefs, usually of top management, have never really moved on. The move from proactive to generative is also hard to make because, while the calculative and proactive stages may be fairly easy to identify and therefore acquire, the generative stage is more elusive. In a sense every calculative organisation will be the same, or at least very similar, despite differences in the tasks such organisations face. A generative organisation, in contrast, will be structured in ways specific to the tasks it has to accomplish. Therefore every generative organisation is likely to be subtly different from every other one. This makes it much harder to define where one is going when trying to transit from proactive to generative. It also makes it much easier to succumb to the temptation to prefer a well-defined organisation structure over a process that is much harder to regulate.

Regulators and the Law

The Regulator, possibly surprisingly, forms a barrier to development. This will not be the case in the earlier stages, going from pathological to reactive and on to calculative. The later stages will be harder because they often involve dropping just those facets, such as specialised safety staff and extensive management systems, that regulators require (by law) and that got the organisation there in the first place. Regulators are, with some honourable exceptions, more inclined to the letter than the spirit of the law. This can mean that an experimental improvement, typical of generative and proactive organisations, may well be actively discouraged. The fact that things might well get better is often irrelevant to the legal mind. The simplest remedy for this problem is what is called a goal-setting regime, such as is found in the many offshore oil and gas industries.

The problem faced by an enlightened regulator is that the law allows few distinctions based upon track record in the face of outcomes (Hudson, in prep). What we are looking for is a regulatory regime that is measured against the aspirations of organisations and the degree to which they attempt to attain them. In this sort of regime setting almost impossible standards is laudable, while failing to meet them is not necessarily reprehensible. What counts is the activity and the whole-hearted commitment. In such a regulatory regime meeting low standards might well attract more attention from the regulator than failing to meet high standards. While such enlightened regulatory regimes do not exist, regulators may remain a block to progress by the best.

Management Failure

Changes in top management, or management's priorities, at critical periods, may prove fatal to the successful transition to a higher safety culture. A cultural change is drastic and never takes place overnight. If a champion leaves, there is often no-one to take up the fight and the crucial top-down impetus is lost. But even without a personnel change there are two threats to the successful transition to a higher level of safety culture. One is success, the other failure. In the case of success, effective processes, tools and systems may be dropped, because the problem is perceived to have gone away. In the case of failure, old-fashioned approaches may be retrieved on the grounds that they worked before. But in both of these cases the new, and often fragile, beliefs and practices may not have become sufficiently internalised.

A common problem in organisations that are struggling on the borderline between the calculative and the proactive/generative levels is success. Once significant improvements in outcome performance have been achieved management 'take their eyes off the ball' and downgrade efforts on the grounds that the problems have been solved. But this is behaviour typical of the reactive stance and represents a reversion. Management have to be truly committed to the maintenance of an advanced culture in the face of success, and such commitment is rare.

Change is hard

One underlying reason why cultural change often fails to succeed is that the new situation is unknown to the participants. If this is added to existing beliefs, such as the belief that the current situation is as good as it gets, then there is little real need to change and failure is almost certain. If these failures are at the level of the workforce, then strong management commitment may save the day. If the problems lie with management, then there is little hope because they will enforce the old situation, which feels most comfortable, on the most proactive of workforces. A colleague (G. Old, Pers. Comm.) has likened this to learning a new golf swing by changing the grip and the stance. At first the new position hurts, the old grip position much more comfortable. It takes time before the benefits of a new grip and the altered stance come through, you have to trust the pro, but you have to do the work! One advantage of this metaphor is that managers often play golf and can transfer their experience of learning a new swing to learning to manage an advancing culture. Change agents are like golf professionals, they can help develop a person's game, but they can't play it for them.

Conclusion

The discovery that a safety culture pays is crucial. One way a safety culture pays off, as the levels of trust improve, is in the quality of communication between management, and the rest of the company. As this is always pointed to as a source of problems, having a definitive focus for improving communication can only result in improved performance at all levels. Another way a safety culture pays is in the reduction in time and paperwork devoted to checking whether elementary safety-related actions are carried out. The other main reason why safety makes money lies in the fact that, if one has a guarantee of safety, then one can devote resources more effectively. What costs money is not safety, but bad safety management. Once the management of an organisation realises that safety is financially rewarding and that the costs incurred have to be seen as investments with a positive return (Hudson & Stephens, 2000), the road to a full safety culture should be open.

Given the financial inducements, why don't organisations try and develop the most advanced forms of safety culture? The answer seems to be contained in the type of culture the organisation is at the time. Pathological organisations just don't care. Reactive organisations think that there is nothing better and anyone who claims better performance is probably lying. They do what they feel is as good as can be done. Calculative/Bureaucratic organisations are hard to move because they are comfortable, even if they know that improvement is possible. The more advanced cultures, either Proactive or Generative, are probably easier to attain with small organisations. Large ones will inevitably be heavily bureaucratic unless active steps are taken to counter that tendency.

Looks like you were busy on symposium outreach yesterday -- we really appreciate and welcome your active engagement.

I'm sure you are already thinking about someone to handle logistics from the CPUC as we move forward. You mentioned Kim Malcolm, for one. It will be good to have that person involved from the start if at all possible in the hotel arrangements, as well as the invitation tracking and responses. You mentioned an on-site visit to the Hyatt next week. Both Jane Yura and I are away from SF on Monday and Tuesday. Wednesday and Thursday are good days for me, if it works out then for the Hyatt and for you.

Subject: FW: GAO Report About Pipeline Safety

You may already be aware of this recent GAO report about pipeline safety, but if not, there's a link below and a brief summary from the AGA.

At one point in our symposium discussions, we thought that the report's author, Susan Fleming, Director, Physical Infrastructure Team for the GAO, might be worth inviting to speak. Given the likelihood that we will have a panel on emergency response, perhaps this report and the GAO person might be relevant? GAO says that PHMSA should be gathering data nationwide about operators' response times following pipeline ruptures so the agency can determine how quickly pipeline operators should respond.

Re: Jan 2013 GAO Report – "Better Data and Guidance Needed to Improve Pipeline Operator Incident Response"

The General Accountability Office (GAO) today released a report which was mandated by congress in the Pipeline Safety Act of 2011. The report examines the ability of transmission pipelineS operators to respond to an incident tied to a hazardous liquid or natural gas release.

Here is an excerpt from the report summary:

...."GAO has previously reported that a performance-based approach—including goals and associated performance measures and targets—can allow those being regulated to determine the most appropriate way to achieve desired outcomes. In addition, several organizations in the pipeline industry have developed methods for quantitatively evaluating response times to incidents, including setting specific, measurable performance goals. While defining performance measures and targets for incident response can be challenging, PHMSA could move toward a performance-based approach by evaluating nationwide data to determine response times for different types of pipeline (based on location, operating pressure, and pipeline diameter, among other factors). However, PHMSA must first improve the data it collects on incident response times. These data are not reliable both because operators are not required to fill out certain time-related fields in the reporting form and because operators told us they interpret these data fields in different ways. Reliable data would improve PHMSA's ability to measure incident response and assist the agency in exploring the feasibility of developing a performance-based approach for improving operator response to pipeline incidents".

...."The primary advantage of installing automated valves is that operators can respond quickly to isolate the affected pipeline segment and reduce the amount of product released; however, automated valves can have disadvantages, including the potential for accidental closures—which can lead to loss of service to customers or even cause a rupture—and monetary costs. Because the advantages and disadvantages of installing an automated valve are closely related to the specifics of the valve's location, it is appropriate to decide whether to install automated valves on a case-by-case basis. Several operators we spoke with have developed approaches to evaluate the advantages and disadvantages of installing automated valves"...

General Hagan and Laura,

I talked to Frank Lindh and Terrie Prosper today about the symposium (the conversation was triggered by an inquiry from the media that we received on this). A few takeaways came out of the meeting:

(1) Frank advised that we should not have an arrangement where we have two contracts with the Hyatt (one to be payed by PG&E and another by the CPUC). He suggested that PG&E (and other utilities, if they want to contribute) pay and we should follow the usual meal reporting procedure for the food.

(2) Frank confirmed that if we have more than two Commissioners attending at the same time then we have to make the meeting open. If we want to keep it "invitation only", we need to make sure that we don't have more than two Commissioners in attendance at any given time.

(3) Frank and Terrie wondered if General Hagan would be ok with giving a summary of lessons learned from the symposium at a Commission meeting as part of a safety update. We assume it's ok, but would like General Hagan to confirm.

Laura - it would be great if you can send Terrie Prosper and I the latest agenda/symposium summary, so that Terrie can use it to draft a media response. Terrie and Frank may also have suggestions for us of how we should describe the symposium to help with a justification for keeping it "invitation only".

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Regards,

Liza

Well this raises a number of issues that are far from worked out, but it surely is nice to have your involvement and this list of questions. (And I know you hope to pass this off!)
This is new for all of us. Did Gen Hagan sign the contract with the Hyatt? I had hoped that all commissioners could be there since there would be no decisions or cpuc proceedings discussed. Sounds like the "invitation only" restriction is the pivotal issue.

After Gen Hagan responds, perhaps we could get together next week with frank and terrie and try to resolve these questions or figure out next steps?

I talked to Frank Lindh and Terrie Prosper today about the symposium (the conversation was triggered by an inquiry from the media that we received on this). A few takeaways came out of the meeting:

(1) Frank advised that we should not have an arrangement where we have two contracts with the Hyatt (one to be payed by PG&E and another by the CPUC). He suggested that PG&E (and other utilities, if they want to contribute) pay and we should follow the usual meal reporting procedure for the food.

(2) Frank confirmed that if we have more than two Commissioners attending at the same time then we have to make the meeting open. If we want to keep it "invitation only", we need to make sure that we don't have more than two Commissioners in attendance at any given time.

(3) Frank and Terrie wondered if General Hagan would be ok with giving a summary of lessons learned from the symposium at a Commission meeting as part of a safety update. We assume it's ok, but would like General Hagan to confirm.

Laura - it would be great if you can send Terrie Prosper and I the latest agenda/symposium summary, so that Terrie can use it to draft a media response. Terrie and Frank may also have suggestions for us of how we should describe the symposium to help with a justification for keeping it "invitation only".

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Regards,

Liza

Sent too soon. I meant to add "figure out next steps" at the end. I'm surprised about a media inquiry at this very tentative stage of planning, but we need to resolve these issues regardless.
Thanks for following up and sharing this.

Well this raises a number of issues that are far from worked out, but it surely is nice to have your involvement and this list of questions. (And I know you hope to pass this off!)
This is new for all of us. Did Gen Hagan sign the contract with the Hyatt? I had hoped that all commissioners could be there since there would be no decisions or cpuc proceedings discussed. Sounds like the "invitation only" restriction is the pivotal issue.

After Gen Hagan responds, perhaps we could get together next week with frank and terrie and try to resolve these questions or figure out next steps?

Hello Jack,

Thanks for taking the time to speak with me more in depth on your meeting in May. We would be glad to work with your group but we don't have availability on that Tuesday to accommodate your room block.

I know you mentioned that your dates aren't flexible, but I want to see if you can move them forward by 1 or 2 days. If they are and your dates should change, please don't hesitate to message me directly to revisit rates for you.

Thank you again for your consideration and I look forward to working with you in the future.

Hello team, Here is the latest update/work in progress for the May 7-8 Symposium.

- Venue is being finalized (Grand Hyatt San Francisco)
- Draft agenda with speakers attached (tab 2) – thank you for your comments; we need to fill in the blanks, get confirmation from some speakers on availability. I have made assignments to you for some of these confirmations (pls let me know if you need assistance)
- Draft invitee lists attached --- pls review since the CPUC will send invitations to hold the date as early as this week
- Other logistics (costs, etc...) are being worked out after we have the estimates

We have our weekly call scheduled for this Friday, and will be joined by Kim Malcolm and Liza Malashenko, who work for General Hagan, and will be taking the lead. Pls let me know if you have questions in the meantime.

Thanks,
Jane

Hello team, Here is the latest update/work in progress for the May 7-8 Symposium.

- Venue is being finalized (Grand Hyatt San Francisco)
- Draft agenda with speakers attached (tab 2) – thank you for your comments; we need to fill in the blanks, get confirmation from some speakers on availability. I have made assignments to you for some of these confirmations (pls let me know if you need assistance)
- Draft invitee lists attached --- pls review since the CPUC will send invitations to hold the date as early as this week
- Other logistics (costs, etc...) are being worked out after we have the estimates

We have our weekly call scheduled for this Friday, and will be joined by Kim Malcolm and Liza Malashenko, who work for General Hagan, and will be taking the lead. Pls let me know if you have questions in the meantime.

Thanks,
Jane

Thanks Kim -- I spoke with Gen Hagan earlier today and he agreed to consider hotels closer to SFO. We are checking availability now. The Hyatts are non-union. And the SFO vicinity places will be cheaper and perhaps easier for industry people flying in.

So stay tuned ... :)

Two things – Jack says he wants to use the Hyatt at Embarcadero. You may have already spoken to him about this by now. Also, there may be some complications with how we market this based on a court action I just heard about – I need to make sure Paul Clanon is comfortable with whatever way we proceed. I will see if I can track him down now.

Hi Laura,

Thursday at 3:30pm sounds great. How many people would be visiting the hotel?
You need to see meeting space and sleeping rooms, is there anything else that you need?

When you arrive at the hotel, please take the first escalator up and the sales office will be on the right.
Ask the receptionist for me and I would be glad to meet you and take you on a tour of the space.

Thanks and I look forward to your reply.

Hello Jack,

Thanks for taking the time to speak with me more in depth on your meeting in May. We would be glad to work with your group but we don't have availability on that Tuesday to accommodate your room block.

I know you mentioned that your dates aren't flexible, but I want to see if you can move them forward by 1 or 2 days. If they are and your dates should change, please don't hesitate to message me directly to revisit rates for you.

Thank you again for your consideration and I look forward to working with you in the future.

Panel 2, is now 5 speakers, which is a nice balance: 2 commission, 2 utility, 1 public pipeline safety advocate. I am attaching the latest updated workbook.

Panel 3 is complete!

Panel 1 and Panel 2 need the attention of Laura, Peter and Kim to confirm speakers (tab 2 in the workbook). It is very important to get invitations to speakers out by the end of this week, so we'll need you to confirm as soon as possible.

Please provide any updates/additional comments on the flow, agenda, attendees before our weekly Friday Call at 1:30 PST (Dial In # 1-877-326-0011, passcode: 415 973 1398).

Were you planning to visit to the Hyatt today to check out rooms for the symposium? Or was Kim? Or Gen Hagan?
There had been an email exchange about 3:30. Now 4:00 would be better for me . . .
Just wondering who might be planning to come over.

We are still waiting to hear back from places near SFO.
Just wondered if you knew anything more.

General Hagan and Kim,

1. I spoke with the contact at the Hyatt when I cancelled the discussion with the Hyatt Regency we had arranged for this afternoon and he was very gracious and understands our change in direction.
2. I now understand the venue will be at the state building down the street from the CPUC on Golden Gate. Kim, as soon as you have info on the specific room and the address of the building, will you send it?
3. We need to get the speaker invitation letters out – Hersman and Sullenberger. Kim, can you make that happen before you leave?
4. We will add a labor representative to the invitation list.
5. Kim, in your absence next week, who can we work with to send out the "Save the Date" notice to the invitation list?
6. PG&E will figure out the venue for the CEO dinner on Monday night.
7. PG&E will identify some choices for the participant dinner Tuesday night for your selection.
8. I know work is still underway to finalize panels, and I believe Jane Yura has a call set for tomorrow at 1:30 to talk about the latest contacts.

Let us know – and thanks
Laura

Hi Laura,

Thursday at 3:30pm sounds great. How many people would be visiting the hotel?
You need to see meeting space and sleeping rooms, is there anything else that you need?

When you arrive at the hotel, please take the first escalator up and the sales office will be on the right.
Ask the receptionist for me and I would be glad to meet you and take you on a tour of the space.

Thanks and I look forward to your reply.

Greetings Commissioners and Directors,

The CPUC is currently planning a series of symposia titled "Forging a New Vision of Safety in California." The first will focus on natural gas safety, convening at 1pm on May 7 and adjourning at noon on May 8. It will feature presentations by some of the nation's most knowledgeable safety experts and industry leaders. It will be a unique opportunity for collaboration and innovative thinking about regulatory strategies, crisis management planning, and changes in the cultures of regulatory and industry organizations.

We will be sending formal invitations to you and other guests soon. In the meantime, please put this on your calendar.

Best wishes and I hope you will contact me or Liza Malashenko if you have questions or ideas.

August XX, 2012

Honorable Deborah A. P. Hersman
National Transportation Safety Board
490 L'Enfant Plaza
Washington, D.C. 20594

Dear Chairman Hersman:

On behalf of the California Public Utilities Commission and California's public utilities I would like to thank you for confirming your intent to speak at our May 7, 2013 symposium, "Forging a New Vision of Safety in California." The first in a series of safety symposiums, "Safety in California" will address key issues and explore solutions to public safety concerns in California's public utility sector. We hope that through this event and subsequent working meetings we will be able to better define, create and sustain a safety-first culture for public utilities in the State of California.

The symposia will allow both industry leaders and government representatives to convene, discuss and make recommendations that will help to create a more purposeful safety-first culture across California. This will be achieved through interactive workshops, panels and presentations, designed to share best practices for public safety. We will help foster understanding of safety expectations and the consequences of failure, and assert that safety, with respect to human life and property, is non-negotiable. Our goal is to collaborate across industry and government to help dramatically improve the safety of our public utility systems.

As you plan for participation, I suggest we arrange a time to review logistics and ideas for your remarks. In the meantime, please feel free to contact me directly at [EMAIL/PHONE]. On behalf of the CPUC and our state's public utility companies, thank you very much for playing such an integral role in helping us kick off our first of a series of symposiums.

Sincerely,

Michael R. Peevey
President
California Public Utilities Commission

General Hagan,
Here is the latest draft agenda, speakers and invitees for the CPUC symposium. All speakers with the exception of 2 that are in progress are confirmed. We are now 7 weeks from the symposium, and it is starting to take shape. Invitations to confirm the speakers, and to invitees to hold the date should go out early next week (Monday).

We are forming some draft questions for the panels/speakers to help them prepare and will be forwarding the information to you sometime next week.

If you have comments, or need additional information, Laura or I, will try to assist,
Thank you,

General,

Jane and I spoke this evening and we strongly recommend staying with the three panels. A lot of work has gone into the speaker arrangements, and we and the "Hall boys" think the diversity of panel topics and speakers is very attractive: (1) Culture and climate, (2) leading safety as a regulatory agency, and (3) elements of effective emergency response. Those are powerful themes (you set forth), and when you look at how they flow and the timing of the second day(830 to 1230) it seems to work well.

We talked today about panel moderators: Paul Clanon for the regulatory one wednesday morning and, as I mentioned, a media person for the emergency response one. The suggestion for the third -- culture/climate -- is Congresswoman Spier's chief of staff. The thinking is that could be a good way to have some balanced legislative representation/engagement.

I know you'll be thinking about all this over the weekend. If you have any difficulty opening the attachment, here's an overview of the agenda:

Day 1, May 7
1:30 Opening remarks by General Jack Hagan, Director of the CA PUC's Safety & Enforcement Division

2:00 Keynote by Chair Hersman

First panel: Defining a Safety Climate and Culture

Jody Bridges, Naval Aviation Safety School
Paul Levy, former Chair MA Public Utilities Comm and a nationally recognized leader of organizational change in the health care industry and public sector
Alaska Air COO
Nick Stavropoulos, Sr. VP, Gas Ops, PG&E and formerly of National Grid

Reception, Dinner, and Evening Keynote: Captain Sully Sullenberger, former US Air Captain (Miracle on the Hudson)

Day 2, May 8

Panel 2: Safety Regulation – a shared responsibility

Commissioner Michel Florio, CA PUC
Carl Wood, former CPUC Commissioner and current National Director of Governmental and Regulatory Affairs, Utility Workers Union of America
Chris Johns, President, PG&E
Dennis Arriola, President, SoCal Gas
Carl Weimer, ED, Pipeline Safety Trust

Panel 3: Elements of an Effective Pipeline Emergency Response

Joanne Hayes-White, Chief, San Francisco Fire Department
Jerry Schmitz, VP, Gas Engineering, SouthWest Gas
Susan Fleming, Director, Physical Infrastructure, GAO and author of recent GAO study on response time measurement
Tom Butters, Deputy Administrator, PHMSA (former asst chief with Fairfax Fire Dept and Dir of the Chemical Transportation Emergency Center. He also worked for FEMA)

Its a good lineup. We are now working on lists of key issues/questions for the panels to address.

Also, I looked online at the Marines Memorial Club online and it looks interesting! They have rooms large enough for the Tuesday dinner, and it might be nice to have that setting for Captain Sullenberger's appearance. We will check on it as an option.

I really hope the venue holds for both days as I don't like the CPUC auditorium for the panel format. Hope we can get this resolved next week, even with Kim gone.

I am going to see if Aaron can find a little time for Jane and me to talk with you Monday afternoon before you head to Pismo. We must get your concurrence on panel structure asap.

Oh -- we may use a travel agent to handle lodging and transportation for the speakers so that all expenses are tracked centrally and are easier for us to divvy up at the end.

And when we are sure of the site we will figure out the best coffee options.

Hope you get a few hours' rest this weekend! I'm around sunday afternoon if you want to call.

Thanks

Laura

Commissioner Michel Florio, CA PUC
Carl Wood, former CPUC Commissioner and current National Director of Governmental and Regulatory Affairs, Utility Workers Union of America
Chris Johns, President, PG&E
Dennis Arriola, President, SoCal Gas
Carl Weimer, ED, Pipeline Safety Trust

Panel 3: Elements of an Effective Pipeline Emergency Response

Joanne Hayes-White, Chief, San Francisco Fire Department
Jerry Schmitz, VP, Gas Engineering, SouthWest Gas
Susan Fleming, Director, Physical Infrastructure, GAO and author of recent GAO study on response time measurement
Tom Butters, Deputy Administrator, PHMSA (former asst chief with Fairfax Fire Dept and Dir of the Chemical Transportation Emergency Center. He also worked for FEMA)

Its a good lineup. We are now working on lists of key issues/questions for the panels to address.

Also, I looked online at the Marines Memorial Club online and it looks interesting! They have rooms large enough for the Tuesday dinner, and it might be nice to have that setting for Captain Sullenberger's appearance. We will check on it as an option.

I really hope the venue holds for both days as I don't like the CPUC auditorium for the panel format. Hope we can get this resolved next week, even with Kim gone.

I am going to see if Aaron can find a little time for Jane and me to talk with you Monday afternoon before you head to Pismo. We must get your concurrence on panel structure asap.

Oh -- we may use a travel agent to handle lodging and transportation for the speakers so that all expenses are tracked centrally and are easier for us to divvy up at the end.

And when we are sure of the site we will figure out the best coffee options.

Hope you get a few hours' rest this weekend! I'm around sunday afternoon if you want to call.

Thanks

Laura

General Hagan,
Here is the latest draft agenda, speakers and invitees for the CPUC symposium. All speakers with the exception of 2 that are in progress are confirmed. We are now 7 weeks from the symposium, and it is starting to take shape. Invitations to confirm the speakers, and to invitees to hold the date should go out early next week (Monday).

We are forming some draft questions for the panels/speakers to help them prepare and will be forwarding the information to you sometime next week.

If you have comments, or need additional information, Laura or I, will try to assist,
Thank you,

Jane

General,
Would love to attend, if on California's dime...as you know CR and Sequestration is hitting our travel budget. You can count me in.

I have a couple recommendations for your panel, 2 former Directors of the School now out in the civilian world leading some commercial safety efforts, Robert " Cosmo" Conway at Disney and Ken "Nubs" Neubauer at Futron Co. Also, just met Col Ken Cameron, USMC (ret), like you, a Platoon leader in Vietnam, ended up as a Space Shuttle Commander for NASA, and then was NASA's Deputy Director of Engineering and Safety. He lives in Houston, not sure if he would be interested butI think he would be great for your panel. Finally, Doc Figlock who runs the Naval Aviation's, Climate Surveys for the CO's, he is right down the road at Monterrey.

Pulling the string on investigation training out there. Will send when I have all the info, we have a couple places we use.

Below is contact info for potential panel members:

Former Director of School of Aviation Safety Robert Conway Manager of Quality Engineering at The Walt Disney Company Aerospace Safety Advisory Panel at NASA Adjunct Instructor at Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University All I have is his email...Bob.E.Conway@disney.com

Ken Cameron, COL, USMC Ret, Platoon Leader, Naval Aviator, Astronaut, former Deputy Director NASA Engineering and Safety Center, also School of Aviation Grad from ASO and ASC course.

Caveman,

How would you like to come to San Francisco 7-8 May and be on a panel at my first Safety Symposium to speak on climate and culture as it effects safety. The Audience would be the presidents, CEO's, and board of directors of the gas companies in California and the Californian Public Utilities Commission Commissioners. About 100 people.

Who else would you recommend be on this panel? We have Capt Sullenberger as a quest speaker.

We will pay your freight.

Separate item: Where can I send my people to good accident investigation training and where is the format for an accident investigation not the JAG manual investigation, but mishap investigation? I am trying to establish a two track investigation process: Safety investigation with privileged information and a separate punitive investigation for responsibility.

Let me know what you think and I hope to see you in May.

Ivan,

Understand the issue with Fed vs. State Travel. So we are going to make it easy. PG&E will cover all of Capt Bridges travel expenses (Air, taxi/limo, hotel and per diem). I have cc'd Ms. Laura Doll from PG&E on this e-mail and she will be the first person at PG&E to coordinate with. I will make reservations for the Captain at the Hyatt Grand for the nights of 6-7 May. He can come the day before and then stay thru the second day and we wrap up at noon. There is a dinner the 7th with Capt Shellenberger as the quest speaker.

Anything else please let me or Ms. Doll know.

Thanks for checking in. I'm sure I'm going to need help, but don't have anything specific right now. I know I need to follow-up with Paul on my end regarding the Governor request and sending out the invitation letter to Chairman Hersman. Anything else urgent on my list? If not, then let's plan to catch-up on this on Friday. I plan on making the status call.

Would love to attend, if on California's dime...as you know CR and Sequestration is hitting our travel budget. You can count me in.

I have a couple recommendations for your panel, 2 former Directors of the School now out in the civilian world leading some commercial safety efforts, Robert " Cosmo" Conway at Disney and Ken "Nubs" Neubauer at Futron Co. Also, just met Col Ken Cameron, USMC (ret), like you, a Platoon leader in Vietnam, ended up as a Space Shuttle Commander for NASA, and then was NASA's Deputy Director of Engineering and Safety. He lives in Houston, not sure if he would be interested butI think he would be great for your panel. Finally, Doc Figlock who runs the Naval Aviation's, Climate Surveys for the CO's, he is right down the road at Monterrey.

Pulling the string on investigation training out there. Will send when I have all the info, we have a couple places we use.

Below is contact info for potential panel members:

Former Director of School of Aviation Safety Robert Conway Manager of Quality Engineering at The Walt Disney Company Aerospace Safety Advisory Panel at NASA Adjunct Instructor at Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University All I have is his email...Bob.E.Conway@disney.com

Caveman,

How would you like to come to San Francisco 7-8 May and be on a panel at my first Safety Symposium to speak on climate and culture as it effects safety. The Audience would be the presidents, CEO's, and board of directors of the gas companies in California and the Californian Public Utilities Commission Commissioners. About 100 people.

Who else would you recommend be on this panel? We have Capt Sullenberger as a quest speaker.

We will pay your freight.

Separate item: Where can I send my people to good accident investigation training and where is the format for an accident investigation not the JAG manual investigation, but mishap investigation? I am trying to establish a two track investigation process: Safety investigation with privileged information and a separate punitive investigation for responsibility.

Let me know what you think and I hope to see you in May.

Safety Culture – Theory and Practice

Abstract

Safety Culture is seen as a way of ensuring high levels of safety performance in organisations, in contrast to the systematic engineered management of hazards and effects. This paper examines the notion of a safety culture in terms of the characteristics of being informed and trusting. These notions are related to more general organisational dimensions describing behaviours an attitudes. Cultures are seen as being defined by their Values, their Beliefs, their Common working Practices and also the ways in which they respond to unusual situations. In a Safety Culture these are all aligned to ensure safe operation even, or especially, when hazardous operations are undertaken. The evolutionary framework of cultures from the Pathological and the Reactive, through the Calculative or Bureaucratic to the Proactive and Generative cultures are described. The Generative culture is equated with the High Reliability Organisations identified in studies of military and civil high risk operations. Next a model is proposed for how to change organisations in order to acquire a safety culture. Finally the barriers to successful intervention are discussed. These include the nature of bureaucratic organisations, the conflicting goals of regulators, failures of management and the fact that change processes are hard.

Introduction - Why Safety Culture?

Safety is an ubiquitous concept. In some industries, such as commercial aviation, safety is so embedded into the organisation that it can be difficult to see just what the general concept of safety means, so I want to start by expanding the notion. Most people see safety as concerned primarily with the personal well-being of stakeholders, by which I mean all those involved, not just the immediate actors and owners. Some also add the integrity of the business and its assets. While these are necessary preconditions, I view safety, and more specifically safety management, in a more active way. I see the creation of a safe environment as allowing dangerous activities to take place successfully, which means without harm or damage. What this means is that safety is more than a passive and well-meaning notion, such as "Thou shall do no harm". Instead safety is something that has to be actively managed to allow profit or advantage to be gained. The oil and gas industry is one that is naturally dangerous – fire and explosion are natural hazards of the product, mass and power inherent in the means of production. The aviation industry is another; flying is the defiance of gravity and, outside of the Zeppelin, high speeds are also inherent. In both these cases, as well as similar industries, risk is the name of the game. Even an apparently sedentary occupation, such as banking, involves risk and the potential for massive loss. Those organisations that manage their risks best are in place to make the most profit. Those that do not manage so well are either perceived as dangerous or are forced to scale down their operations to achieve acceptable levels of safety.

What has safety culture to do with this? The answer is that there are a number of ways of achieving high levels of safety. These range from having a systematic and highly controlled prescription of all activities in order to exclude the possibility of hazards ever becoming loose, to creating an organisational culture within which everyone is personally involved in ensuring the safety of all concerned, such as DuPont's interdependent culture. The term safety culture can be applied to both, but they clearly represent quite different cultures. What has become clear is that there is a natural and evolutionary progression of cultures, first laid out by Westrum (1991), and that the end-point of this progression is what we call a true Safety Culture. What has also become clear more recently is that, while the road to achieving this ideal state is not an easy one, the benefits to be gained most certainly outweigh the costs of attaining it. In particular there are advantages to be had from actually reducing the time, and especially paperwork, devoted to safety. The reason for this is that much of what takes place in managing safety in earlier stages is the direct result of a failure of trust and a lack of confidence. These shortcomings lead to over-management and, accordingly, more hard work than is necessary.

Paper presented at the RTO HFM Workshop on "The Human Factor in System Reliability – Is Human Performance Predictable?", held in Siena, Italy, 1-2 December 1999, and published in RTO MP-032.

This paper first examines the notion of a safety culture and attempts to identify the components in a way that is useful. Then I will discuss how one might go about achieving the goal of being a real safety culture. Next I will discuss briefly some of the barriers that are liable to prevent the full development. Finally I will draw conclusions in which the commercial factor again plays a role.

What is a Safety Culture?

Every organisation has some common, internal, characteristics that we call its culture. These characteristics have often become invisible to those inside, but may be startling to outsiders coming from a different culture. The notion of an organisational culture is notoriously difficult to define (Furnham, 1997; Schein, 1992, 1996), so I take a very general approach and see the organisational culture as, roughly "Who and what we are, what we find important, and how we go about doing things round here". Rousseau (1988) defined culture more specifically as "the ways of thinking, behaving and believing that members of a social unit have in common". A safety culture is a special case of such a culture, one in which safety has a special place in the concerns of those who work for the organisation[1].

We can first distinguish culture into its static and its dynamic components. The term static refers to what is, generally the unchanging values held by the organisation, and the beliefs that permeate its members. The term dynamic refers to how the organisation operates, the types of work processes it feels comfortable with. Table 1 shows a set of definitions of the four major components that can be identified as constituting corporate culture (Hudson, 1998). The distinction between common working practices and problem solving methods is not always drawn, but this may be because researchers tend to study companies in either periods of stability or of great change, but not through both. Operating in a stable world highlights the daily working practices, while periods of change are dominated by problem-solving processes. The High Reliability Organisations studied by the Berkeley Group (LaPorte & Consilini, 1991) are characterised by radically different ways of operating under normal and high stress situations.

A safety culture is one in which safety plays a very important role. Because safety is such a complex phenomenon, it is not enough just to add – "And be safe". The next sections examine the characteristics of a safety culture and look at the types of culture that can be recognised as forming a progression along which organisations develop.

The characteristics of a Safety Culture

What does an organisational culture that gives safety a priority look like? Reason (1997) has identified a number of characteristics that go to make up such a safety culture. These are:

- an informed culture-one in which those who manage and operate the system have current knowledge about the human, technical, organisational and environmental factors that determine the safety of the system as a whole,
- a reporting culture: a culture in which people are willing to report errors and near misses,
- a just culture: a culture of 'no blame' where an atmosphere of trust is present and people are encouraged or even rewarded for providing essential safety-related information- but where there is also a clear line between acceptable and unacceptable behaviour and,

[1] In one sense safety always has a place in an organisation's culture, which can then be referred to as the safety culture. But it is only past a certain stage of development that an organisation can be said to take safety sufficiently seriously to be labelled as a safety culture, a culture of safety.

- a flexible culture which can take different forms but is characterised as shifting from the conventional hierarchical mode to a flatter professional structure.
- a learning culture - the willingness and the competence to draw the right conclusions from its safety information system, and the will to implement major reforms when the need is indicated.

The values associated with a safety culture are fairly straightforward. The beliefs are more complex. Taken together the five characteristics form a culture of trust and of informedness. Trust is needed, especially in the face of assaults upon the beliefs that people are trying their best, such as accidents and near-miss incidents which all too easily look like failures of individuals to come up to the ideals of the organisation. Informedness means that people know what is really happening, lessening the chance of mistakes caused by inappropriate world views. This helps us to identify what beliefs are associated with a safety culture. Table 2 places safety into the framework set in Table 1. Reason's characteristics are the outcome of corporate behaviours driven by the static and dynamic components of the corporate culture, but mostly by beliefs and behaviours rather than values. Organisations with high values may not live up to their own expectations.

Types of Safety Culture

Safety cultures can be distinguished along a line from pathological, caring less about safety than about not being caught, through calculative, blindly following all the logically necessary steps, to generative, in which safe behaviour is fully integrated into everything the organisation does (Westrum & Adamski, 1999; Westrum, 1991; Weick, 1987). A Culture of Safety can only be considered seriously in the later stages of this evolutionary line. Prior to that, up to and including the calculative stage, the term safety culture is best reserved to describe formal and superficial structures rather than an integral part of the overall culture, pervading how safely the organisation goes about its work. It is obvious that, at the pathological stage, an organisation is not even interested in safety and has to make the first level of acquiring the value system that includes safety as a necessary element. A subsequent stage is one in which safety issues begin to acquire importance, often driven by both internal and external factors as a result of having many incidents. At this first stage of development we can see the values beginning to be acquired, but the beliefs, methods and working practices are still at a primeval stage. At such an early stage, top management believes accidents to be caused by stupidity, inattention and, even, wilfulness on the part of their employees. Many messages may flow from on high, but the majority still reflect the organisation's primary aims, often with 'and be safe' tacked on at the end. One cannot fail to be 'impressed' by the management of Townsend Thoreson and the messages they were sending to their work force in the run up to the Herald of Free Enterprise disaster (Sheen, 1987).

Table 1: Corporate Culture definitions

Culture Component	Definition
Corporate Values	What the organisation regards as important or even sacrosanct
Corporate Beliefs	What the organisation believes about the world, how the world will react to actions, what the outside world finds important. Beliefs about what works and doesn't
Common Problem-Solving Methods	How the types of problem found in the organisation are tackled, e.g. project groups, consultants, panic
Common Working Practices	The way people go about their work, e.g. small meetings, lots of memos, project management of everything etc.

Table 2: A Safety Culture defined in terms of the organisational components. Note that the methods and working practices are not restricted to safety, but that safety is intimately involved in the way work is done.

Safety Culture Component	Definition
Safety Values	The organisation regards as safety as sacrosanct and provides the licence to operate.
Safety Beliefs	The organisation believes that safety makes commercial sense; that individuals are not the sole causes of incidents; that the next accident is waiting to happen.
Common Problem-Solving Methods	Risk assessment, cost-benefit analyses, accident analysis as well as investigation, proactive search for problems in advance of incidents.
Common Working Practices	Safety integral to design and operations practice, safety #1 on meeting agendas up to Board level, chronic unease about safety.

The next stage, one that I feel can not be circumvented, involves the recognition that safety does need to be taken seriously. The term calculative is used to stress that safety is calculated; quantitative risk assessment techniques and overt cost-benefit analyses are used to justify safety and to measure the effectiveness of proposed measures. Such techniques are typical problem-solving methods. Often simple calculations suggest that failing to be safe, or at least having incidents, costs money. Furthermore organisations that are seen from outside as being uncaring about safety may have image problems that knock on to the bottom line. Despite this stance, and despite what can become an impressive safety record, safety is still an add-on, certainly when seen from outside.

The Reactive and the Proactive stages have been added more recently and articulated in our work in the Oil and Gas industry. Table 5 shows an extended and more practical version that was worked out, in co-operation with Westrum, with the addition of the Reactive and Proactive stages.

Pathological	Bureaucratic	Generative
Information is hidden	Information may be ignored	Information is actively sought
Messengers are "shot"	Messengers are tolerated	Messengers are trained
Responsibilities are shirked	Responsibility is compartmented	Responsibilities are shared
Bridging is discouraged	Bridging is allowed but discouraged	Bridging is rewarded
Failure is covered up	Organisation is just and merciful	Failure causes enquiry
New ideas are crushed	New ideas create problems	New ideas are welcomed

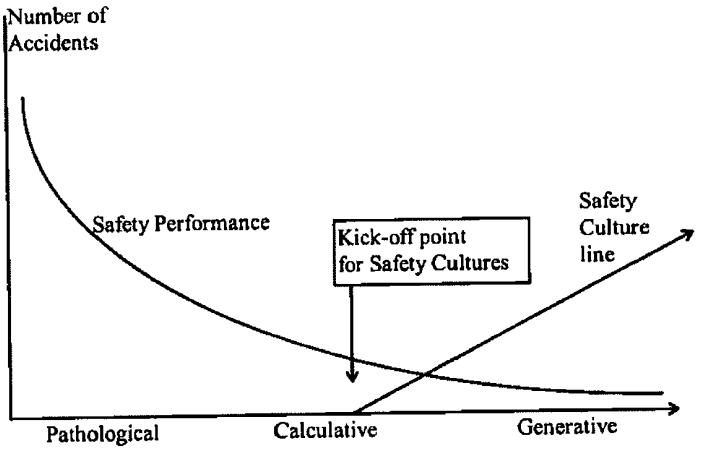

Figure 1: The safety performance will improve as the culture matures, but there can only start to be talk of a Safety Culture once the calculative stage has been passed

The foundation can now be laid, nevertheless, for acquiring beliefs that safety is worthwhile in its own right. By constructing deliberate procedures an organisation can force itself into taking safety seriously, or can be forced by a regulatory body, but the values are not yet fully internalised, the methods are still new and individual beliefs generally lag behind corporate intentions. This shows us a significant characteristic of a true safety culture, that the value system associated with safety and safe working has to be fully internalised as beliefs, almost to the point of invisibility, and that the entire suite of approaches the organisation uses are safety-based (Rochlin et al, 1987). What this also stresses is that the notion of a safety culture can only arise in an organisational context within which the necessary technical steps and procedures are already in place and in operation. Yet again, these are necessary but not sufficient preconditions for a safety culture (LaPorte & Consolini, 1991, Laporte, 1996, Turner & Pidgeon, 1997).

Table 4 breaks down general organisational cultures into more detail. The internals may be reflected at any cultural level, so managerial style will vary from pathological through to generative (see below). The Walk/Talk headings are intended to distinguish the more passive from the active components. Filling in these components helps define how a culture appears and how a culture should be. The next section discusses a progression of cultures.

Table 4: The Safety Culture dimensions and internal structure.
These are filled in with different descriptions for each level of the safety culture attained.
For each cell it should be possible to think in terms of the values, beliefs and practices that apply. This is done in Table 5.

TALK Communication	Organisational Attitudes	WALK Safety	Organisational Behaviour	Working Behaviour
Flow of data and information about safety	Workforce attitudes to management	Organisational status of safety Department	Managerial style and behaviour	Priority setting between production and safety
Management informedness about the true state of affairs	Management attitudes about the workforce	Rewards of good safety performance	Level of care for stakeholders	Risk appreciation by those at personal risk
Workforce informedness about the true state of affairs	Collective efficacy – the belief that people can get things done	Procedures and the use of initiative	Dealing with change	On-site behaviour by the workforce and management

Described in this way we can see how crucial is the notion of belief. The overt knowledge about safety, taken together with a set of values, may still not be enough when difficulties arise, although in easy times behaviour may be exemplary. In the last resort what drives a person, and I would argue an organisation, is less their knowledge than their beliefs. When knowledge clashes with belief the more deep-seated is likely to come out on top as the driver of behaviour, and beliefs, even as articles of unjustified faith, are more deep seated than any rationally acquired knowledge. The latter may be easily disproved or set aside, belief is much harder both to induce and, then, to shift.

The final stages, identified by Westrum in his studies on high reliability organisations and labelled generative, involve a much more proactive approach to safety. Whereas the calculative stage represents a reactive approach, using past experience to determine future behaviour, the generative approach may be characterised by a much more internalised model of good practice as its driver. This model becomes internalised as a set of beliefs about why and how the organisation operates, about what is the best way to do things. Assumptions about the need to be safe are unquestioned; everything else, in contrast, is open for discussion and improvement. A characteristic of this stage is the lack of complacency, even in the face of a dearth of accidents. This has been labelled chronic unease, which sums up the pessimistic stance that just because everything has gone well is just an indication that what is about to happen will be a new experience. Fortunately, chronic unease is balanced by optimistic presumption that what does happen can be faced and coped with. It does not imply shrinking from challenge, not pessimism elsewhere in the organisation. The generative stage can be equated to the High Reliability Organisations studied by the Berkeley Group (Rochlin et al, 1987; LaPorte & Consolini, 1991; Weick & Roberts, 1993).

One crucial difference between this stage, and prior stages in the evolution of a safety culture, is that the human factor is considered to include both the individual and the organisation. The model of human behaviour has shifted from one in which workers have to be driven, and are not to be trusted, to a more mature understanding of what makes people tick. It is only at this point that it becomes possible to understand that establishment of a safety culture is still not enough, on its own, to counter all human error because such errors may be outside of the control of the immediate perpetrator.

This review suggests that the safety culture concept includes much more than just thinking that safety is important. Work practices and overt priorities not only include safety, but the whole way in which unsafe work is perceived reflects a major shift of point of view. This shift is from regarding individuals as a source of problems for an otherwise perfect organisation to one in which organisations can cause and cure their own problems by using the people who make them up.

Table 5: A more detailed set of descriptions of the different types of safety culture. HSE is Health, Safety and Environment. This table was defined for the Oil and Gas industry and hasserved as a reliable discrimination test.

	PATHOLOGICAL	REACTIVE	CALCULATIVE	PROACTIVE	GENERATIVE
COMMUNICATION	Nobody is informed, no feedback, everybody is passive, no care/ knowledge about safety, don't see(k) or ask the problem, collect what is legally required.	Management demands data on HSE failures, denial until forced to admit, top-down flow of information, bottom-up incidents, lots of statistics nobody understands, safety hot issue after accident.	Environment of command and control by management, lots of HSE graphs, statistics but no follow up, info goes top-down, failures bottom-up, little top-down feedback, toolbox meetings, procedures exist but are only once read. Action is delayed after knowledge.	Management goes out and seek, discuss for themselves they know what to change and how to manage, the feedback loop (bottom-up and top-down) is closing at supervisory level safety topics become part of other meetings, asked for by workforce, they need detail to understand WHY accidents happen.	No threshold between management-workforce, management participates/shares activities (dialogue), HSE is nr 1, all feedback loops are closed, safety is integrated in other meetings; no special safety meetings required, workforce keeps itself up-to-date, they demand information so they can prevent problems.
ORGANISATIONAL ATTITUDES	No believe or trust, environment of punishing, blaming and controlling the workforce.	Failures caused by individuals. No blame but responsibility, workforce needs to be educated and follow the procedures, management overreacts in eyes of workforce.	Workforce is more involved, little effect on procedures, designs, practices workforce does not understand the problem, management is seen as obsessive with HSE, but they don't 'mean' it. (Walk-talk).	Workforce involvement is promoted but ruled/organised by supervisory staff which is obsessed by HSE statistics.	Management is recognised as a partner by workforce, management respects workforce, management has to fix systematic failures, workforce has to identify them.
HSE	No HSE status, HSE issues are ignored, minimal requirements, no rewards on good performance, safety is inherited bur not known, reliance on experience.	Meets legal req. collects statistics but no follow up, design is changed after accidents, procedures are rewritten to prevent previous accidents no update or improvements.	HSE well accepted, advisor collects data and creates own statistics, HSE rewards for positive and negative performance, design: quantitative methods, procedures to solve unsolved problems, standard procedures preferred from the shelf, large numbers of procedures but few checks on use/knowledge.	Separate line HSE advisors promoting improvement, but try to reduce the inconvenience to line, for good HSE initiatives there is career enhancement for Sr. staff, HSE is in the early stages of design, procedures are rewritten by workforce, integration with competency, complaints about externally set targets.	HSE department is a small, advising the management on strategy, group, no special rewards, individual pride, procedures are written by workforce, continuous improvement, small numbers of procedures are integrated in training.
ORGANISATIONAL BEHAVIOUR	Denial anything is wrong, avoids HSE discussions, management is hierarchical and stagnant to changes, focus on profits not on workforce, workforce has lots of freedom-> mn don't care.	Man. Holds workforce responsible for failures, overreacting, management. States that it takes safety seriously, but is not always believed by workforce.	Detail focussed/playing with numbers, believe company is doing well in spite of contrary, targets are not challenged, inability to admit solutions may not work the first time.	Management knows the risks, interested in HSE, takes culture into account, safety priority over production which leads to incompatible goals, lots of management walk-abouts, communication and assessments about accidents and near-misses and their consequences.	Safety is equal to production, enthusiastic communication between workforce and management and vv, workforce has a lot of freedom-> trust.
WORKING BEHAVIOUR	Workplace is dangerous, messy, no (legal) health requirements, management does not CARE and does not KNOWS.	Basic leg. Requirements implemented, housekeeping is temp. Improved when inspection comes, management KNOWS but not always CARES.	Clean and tidy working environment, housekeeping is very important (prizes), Management CARES but not always KNOWS.	Management CARES and KNOWS, discussion about prioritisation, time and resources are available for sit improvements even before accidents happen.	Management CARES and KNOWS, workforce furnishes its own environment, management passes the experience around to other sites

How can you achieve a Safety Culture?

We have been studying the safety culture of organisations in the oil and gas industry and it is clear that, to progress, one has to undergo a process of cultural change. These changes have to take place incrementally. It appears logical, at least, that it is impossible to go straight from the reactive to the proactive without going1 through the calculative stage because the proactive culture includes systems typical of the calculative. Similarly it is probably impossible to go from the pathological straight to the calculative stage.

Change Management

What has to be done for an organisation to develop along the line towards the generative or true safety cultures is a managed change process. The next culture defines where we want to go to, the change model determines how we get there. A model for developmental change has been proposed by Prochaska and DiClemente (1995). This model was originally developed for getting people off drug and other dependencies such as smoking, alcohol and over-eating. It proposes that there are five stages that the authors have identified. These stages are:

- Precontemplation – Not yet at a stage of considering the need for change. In safety terms a complacent belief that what can be achieved has been achieved. Coupled with the belief that further improvement is 'not possible in this business'.
- Contemplation – A stage at which the realisation is arisen that further improvement is possible. There is no actual change in behaviour and no steps are taken. Nevertheless the possibility of improvement is entertained.
- Preparation – Active steps are taken to prepare for change (in smoking this would be characterised by trying not to buy cigarettes, by not maintaining a stock; in dieting this might involve avoiding certain eating situations, but in both cases without actually smoking or eating less). Characterised by much backsliding.
- Action - The stage when the practice built up in the preparation stage is put to work. The beliefs are now that it is important and possible to stop the addictive behaviour. This stage needs to be actively supported while the pull to slide backwards is actively countered (in contrast to the previous stage when backsliding is characteristic).
- Maintenance – This stage is vital in maintaining a new, lower baseline of behaviour. This stage needs to be kept up and can often be lost with reversion to the behaviour characteristic of preparation and action.

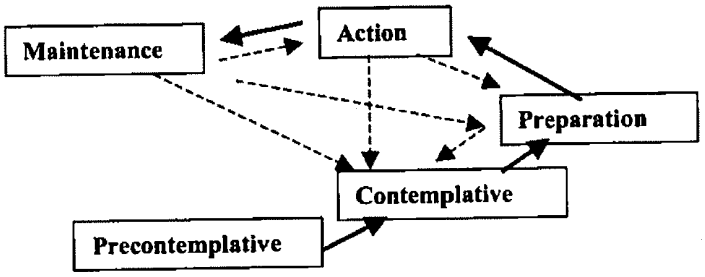

Figure II: Prochaska & DiClemente's change model. The dotted lines denote possible ways to fall back. Note that it is not possible to revert as far as the pre-contemplative mode once one has become aware. The remaining stages are, however, unfortunately quite possible as anyone who has tried to give up smoking knows.

Figure II shows the basic set of transitions from precontemplative through to maintenance, with back-sliding as dotted lines. The step back to precontemplative is not possible (i.e. the values remain intact, but beliefs in the possibility of meeting them may be severely damaged). What is contemplated will be different at each stage of safety culture, so the transition from proactive to generative includes concepts, values and beliefs incomprehensible to those at lower stages. The application of this transition process leads to a spiral when we take safety culture into account.

What is important in this model is the recognition of which stage a patient finds themselves in and the methods available to shift them through the transition from one stage to the next. The stages will require the definition of tools to determine which stage individuals and groups (in organisations) are currently in. The transitions that have to be made will require change tools. The term stage is used to refer to one of these treatment situations. A transition takes place between stages.

A Change Model for Organisations

A more articulated model, based upon the simpler Prochaska & DiClemente model, has been developed for managing successful change within organisations rather than individuals. This model, shown below in Table 6, puts together the requirements for change of belief that are so crucial in cultural development. What we have learned is that awareness is not enough, the creation of need and belief in the value of the outcome is equally vital in ensuring a successful process

The model, which has been recently developed in research for Shell International (Hudson et al, 2000), is very similar to any quality system Plan-Do-Check, but the internals of the stages, especially the Awareness and Planning stages, are often missed or treated very summarily. All too often, the active participation of those involved, in the awareness and planning stages, is replaced by a plan of action defined elsewhere. Such plans typically come from senior management, external corporate departments or consultants. What are needed are: (I) the creation of a personal need to change, (II) a belief in the ability to effect such change and (III) the clear understanding that individuals have control over their own process. These are factors that have been repeatedly found in the literature on motivation to influence final outcomes positively. It is just these factors we feel get to the Hearts and Minds of the workforce. When the beliefs and values associated with a new (and hopefully better) state have been assimilated and internalised, then the change has really taken place. This model can apply to safety, but it can also apply to Cost Leadership or any other desirable development in an organisational environment.

Table 6: The articulated Change Model for Organisations. Prochaska and DiClemente's original five stages are elaborated to 14 to cover the details required in real settings.

Pre-contemplation to Contemplation - AWARENESS
- Awareness – Simple knowledge of a 'better' alternative than the current state
- Creation of need – Active desire to achieve the new state
- Making the outcome believable – believing that the state is sensible for those involved
- Making the outcome achievable- making the process of achieving the new state credible for those involved
- Information about successes - provision of information about others who have succeeded
- Personal vision - definition by those involved of what they expect the new situation to be

Contemplation to Preparation - PLANNING
- Plan construction - creation by those involved of their own action plan
- Measurement points - definition of indicators of success in process
- Commitment - signing-up to the plan of all involved

Preparation to Action - ACTION
- Do - start implementing action plan
- Review - review progress with concentration upon successful outcomes
- Correct - reworking of plan where necessary

Maintenance - MAINTENANCE
- Review - management review of process at regular (and defined in advance) intervals
- Outcome - checks on internalisation of values and beliefs in outcome state

What are the barriers to success?

If there were no barriers, the development of a safety culture would never form a problem and safety cultures would abound. Why, then, do attempts fail? The reasons are to be found in the beliefs and practices that characterise an organisation and its members. In many cases organisations will naturally limit their development unless active steps are taken. In the worst cases organisations may actually revert. As all organisational cultures past the Pathological hold safety high in their value systems, reversion may appear to the participants to be less significant than it actually is.

Bureaucratic Cultures

One major reason is that the bureaucratic culture associated with the calculative safety culture is a powerful and comfortable one. An organisation that has struggled to be come proactive may easily revert, especially in the face of success. Generative organisations have many characteristics that are essentially anti-bureaucratic; the hierarchical structures break down under high-tempo operations (LaPorte & Consilini, 1991). What this demonstrates when it happens is that the beliefs, usually of top management, have never really moved on. The move from proactive to generative is also hard to make because, while the calculative and proactive stages may be fairly easy to identify and therefore acquire, the generative stage is more elusive. In a sense every calculative organisation will be the same, or at least very similar, despite differences in the tasks such organisations face. A generative organisation, in contrast, will be structured in ways specific to the tasks it has to accomplish. Therefore every generative organisation is likely to be subtly different from every other one. This makes it much harder to define where one is going when trying to transit from proactive to generative. It also makes it much easier to succumb to the temptation to prefer a well-defined organisation structure over a process that is much harder to regulate.

Regulators and the Law

The Regulator, possibly surprisingly, forms a barrier to development. This will not be the case in the earlier stages, going from pathological to reactive and on to calculative. The later stages will be harder because they often involve dropping just those facets, such as specialised safety staff and extensive management systems, that regulators require (by law) and that got the organisation there in the first place. Regulators are, with some honourable exceptions, more inclined to the letter than the spirit of the law. This can mean that an experimental improvement, typical of generative and proactive organisations, may well be actively discouraged. The fact that things might well get better is often irrelevant to the legal mind. The simplest remedy for this problem is what is called a goal-setting regime, such as is found in the many offshore oil and gas industries.

The problem faced by an enlightened regulator is that the law allows few distinctions based upon track record in the face of outcomes (Hudson, in prep). What we are looking for is a regulatory regime that is measured against the aspirations of organisations and the degree to which they attempt to attain them. In this sort of regime setting almost impossible standards is laudable, while failing to meet them is not necessarily reprehensible. What counts is the activity and the whole-hearted commitment. In such a regulatory regime meeting low standards might well attract more attention from the regulator than failing to meet high standards. While such enlightened regulatory regimes do not exist, regulators may remain a block to progress by the best.

Management Failure

Changes in top management, or management's priorities, at critical periods, may prove fatal to the successful transition to a higher safety culture. A cultural change is drastic and never takes place overnight. If a champion leaves, there is often no-one to take up the fight and the crucial top-down impetus is lost. But even without a personnel change there are two threats to the successful transition to a higher level of safety culture. One is success, the other failure. In the case of success, effective processes, tools and systems may be dropped, because the problem is perceived to have gone away. In the case of failure, old-fashioned approaches may be retrieved on the grounds that they worked before. But in both of these cases the new, and often fragile, beliefs and practices may not have become sufficiently internalised.

CPUC03174

A common problem in organisations that are struggling on the borderline between the calculative and the proactive/generative levels is success. Once significant improvements in outcome performance have been achieved management 'take their eyes off the ball' and downgrade efforts on the grounds that the problems have been solved. But this is behaviour typical of the reactive stance and represents a reversion. Management have to be truly committed to the maintenance of an advanced culture in the face of success, and such commitment is rare.

Change is hard

One underlying reason why cultural change often fails to succeed is that the new situation is unknown to the participants. If this is added to existing beliefs, such as the belief that the current situation is as good as it gets, then there is little real need to change and failure is almost certain. If these failures are at the level of the workforce, then strong management commitment may save the day. If the problems lie with management, then there is little hope because they will enforce the old situation, which feels most comfortable, on the most proactive of workforces. A colleague (G. Old, Pers. Comm.) has likened this to learning a new golf swing by changing the grip and the stance. At first the new position hurts, the old grip position much more comfortable. It takes time before the benefits of a new grip and the altered stance come through, you have to trust the pro, but you have to do the work! One advantage of this metaphor is that managers often play golf and can transfer their experience of learning a new swing to learning to manage an advancing culture. Change agents are like golf professionals, they can help develop a person's game, but they can't play it for them.

Conclusion

The discovery that a safety culture pays is crucial. One way a safety culture pays off, as the levels of trust improve, is in the quality of communication between management, and the rest of the company. As this is always pointed to as a source of problems, having a definitive focus for improving communication can only result in improved performance at all levels. Another way a safety culture pays is in the reduction in time and paperwork devoted to checking whether elementary safety-related actions are carried out. The other main reason why safety makes money lies in the fact that, if one has a guarantee of safety, then one can devote resources more effectively. What costs money is not safety, but bad safety management. Once the management of an organisation realises that safety is financially rewarding and that the costs incurred have to be seen as investments with a positive return (Hudson & Stephens, 2000), the road to a full safety culture should be open.

Given the financial inducements, why don't organisations try and develop the most advanced forms of safety culture? The answer seems to be contained in the type of culture the organisation is at the time. Pathological organisations just don't care. Reactive organisations think that there is nothing better and anyone who claims better performance is probably lying. They do what they feel is as good as can be done. Calculative/Bureaucratic organisations are hard to move because they are comfortable, even if they know that improvement is possible. The more advanced cultures, either Proactive or Generative, are probably easier to attain with small organisations. Large ones will inevitably be heavily bureaucratic unless active steps are taken to counter that tendency.

Jerry, Bret--- could you please send a "hold the date" note to your invitees for your companies ---- the CPUC invitation will go out in the next week or so, as location plans are finalized. I've attached the latest version, including some additions to the panel that the General would like to pursue. Laura and I will go over the industry list and send a note.

I think by end of week, we should have any changes to the speakers completed (if the additions requested by the General do not materialize, I believe the previous list will work quite fine).

Thanks, and we'll discuss status on the Friday 1:30 call,

Jane

Subject: Symposium TO DO LIST as of 3/19/13

Here are the results of today's call with General Hagan, Jane Yura and Laura. I am deliberately NOT putting this in a separate worksheet/table/spreadsheet so it will be easier to read from PDAs. It is, of course, a work in progress.

Panel Makeup
Panel 1: Defining a Safety Climate and Culture

- Captain Jody Bridges, Naval Aviation School
- POTENTIAL: Col. Ken Cameron, USMC Ret., Astronaut, former Deputy Director NASA Engineering and Safety Center GENERAL HAGAN TO CONTACT
- Alaska Air COO: Pending (Symposium team is already contacting)
- CONFIRMED but pending: Paul F. Levy, former Chair of the MA Public Utilities Commission and nationally recognized leader of organizational change in the health care industry and public sector
- CONFIRMED but pending: Nick Stavropoulos, Senior VP of Gas Operations, PG&E, and formerly of National Grid
- Note: we likely would have only 3 or 4 panelists for this panel
- Potential moderator for this panel: Someone with legislative ties, e.g., Senator Alex Padilla? Other? GENERAL HAGAN TO DISCUSS WITH BROWN AND CLANON

Panel 2: Regulating Safety: Carrot or Stick? A Dialog between Regulators and Utilities

- Commissioner Michel Florio, CPUC
- Chris Johns, President, PG&E
- Dennis Arriola, President, SoCal Gas
- Still checking on Sempra, but may be unavailable
- POTENTIAL: another regulator, perhaps from NY, PA, or Washington State DOLL TO GET INFO ABOUT CHAIR OF WASHINGTON CPUC; GENERAL HAGAN TO DISCUSS NY AND PA POSSIBILITIES AND SCOTT HEMPLING OF NRRI WITH CLANON
- Moderator: Paul Clanon GENERAL HAGAN TO CONFIRM
- Note: Kim Malcolm needs to follow up with Carl Wood about change in panel makeup

Panel 3: Elements of Effective Pipeline Emergency Response

- Joanne Hayes-White, Chief, San Francisco Fire Department CONFIRMED
- Susan Fleming, Director, Physical Infrastructure, US Government Accountability Office and author of 2013 study on pipeline safety: "Better Data and Guidance Needed to Improve Pipeline Operator Incident Response" CONFIRMED
- Carl Weimer, Executive Director, Pipeline Safety Trust CONFIRMED
- Tom Butters, Deputy Administrator, PHMSA (and former Asst. Chief of the Fairfax Fire Dept and Director fo the Chemical Transportation Emergency Center; he also worked for FEMA) CONFIRMED
- Jerry Schmitz, VP, Gas Engineering, SouthWest Gas CONFIRMED
- Note: we may need to trim this panel

CPUC03179

- Moderator: someone with media/public affairs background GENERAL HAGAN TO DISCUSS WITH CLANON THE POSSIBILITY OF JAY ALLEN (FORMER RADIO BROADCASTER AND CalEMA public affairs dir) OR Elizabeth Ashford of the Governor's Office

Other issues

- General Hagan's to dos in addition to those previously listed:
  - contact Marine Memorial facility about potential Tuesday night dinner for 100
  - followup with Clanon re request to Governor for state facility use
  - followup about Gov Brown introductory video

- Symposium team (including Doll, Yura and other industry reps):
  - coordinate Monday night CEO/Presidents' dinner
  - finalize invitation list and coordinate with CPUC to get invitations out
  - finalize utility cost-sharing arrangements for speakers, refreshments, Tuesday dinner
  - finalize other panel speakers, coordinate travel arrangements
  - draft framework/questions for panels

- Other CPUC responsibilities – Kim, Liza
  - Coordinate event announcement with Terrie Prosper
  - Issue invitations when final facility logistics are nailed down
  - Make sure audio visual equipment is available
  - Arrange for staff assistance at the symposium

Let me know what I forgot!

Thanks

Subject: Safety |Sympoisum 7-8 May 2013

Ken,

As we discussed last night, I am the Director of the Safety and Enforcement Division of the California Public Utilities Commission. I was brought in after the San Bruno pipeline explosion which killed 8 people in 2011. My mission is the change the culture of the PUC and the utility industries we regulate to embrace safety as toll and an enhancement to accomplish our missions.

As part of their culture change, Pacific Gas and Electric and the CPUC are sponsoring the first in a series of Safety Symposiums 7-8 May 2013, "Forging a New Vision of Safety in California". The audience will the 5 commissioners, their key staff, the directors of the PUC, and the presidents, CEO's and the members of the Board of Directors of the 4 major Gas companies in California. The symposium will consist of 3 panels. |The first will at 1300 on the 7th and be about Climate and Culture of Safety, the 2nd the following morning is "lead or regulate" and the 3rd is "Effectively managing a disaster."

I would like to invite you to participate along with Capt. Bridges, a Senior Executive from Alaskan Air, and Mr. Paul Levy former PUC commissioner from Mass and a SME on culture change.

P|G&E will be arranging all your travel and per diem. Please let me know if you are interested and if this works in your schedule.

Semper Fi,

Subject: CPUC Symposium Panel 1 and 2 Questions

Hello all – these are the Panel 2 (Commissioners, Utilities, PST) Questions provided by Bill Scott and Panel 3 (emergency response) by Bob Chipkevich. For your input, comments.
Thank you,
Jane

Jane/Laura-Following are suggested talking points for Panel 2

. From the perspective of each of you-"what constitutes safe enough as it relates to the public safety performance of a gas utility"? Is this an abstract or empirical objective?
. Is it necessary to measure utility performance in key operational safety areas?
. Can the parties (utilities and regulators) agree on what these key public safety measures should be?
. What performance measures should exist that could define the condition of public safety for public safety by gas utilities in California?
. Should our expectations for public safety be specific, understood and agreed to by the parties or should they be mandated by the regulator?
. How can we know when we have met these expectations?
. Should all regulated gas utilities in California be required to measure these key public safety measures using the same methodology?
. Should these public safety performance measures be periodically published for the public?
. What specific recommendations can you make to improve the working relationship of the parties to public safety for gas operations in California?
. Is public safety really a "shared" responsibility for both he regulated companies and the regulator? If so what is the appropriate balance between the parties for this shared responsibility to the public?
. How can the companies do a better job of meeting regulator needs-what are the largest barriers to that success?
. How can the regulators do a better job of defining what and when they need something in a way that reduces frustration, improves productivity and the timeliness of reporting?

Jane/Laura-Jerry Hill in his letter to the PUC of 5/22/12 concluded his letter by asking "what constitutes a safe natural gas system"? This is additional validation for what we have been asking. I wonder if this should not be the title for this panel? Just a thought. If you could add to this as you see fit and send to the team members for tomorrow's conference call it would be appreciated.

Jane and symposium team - below is a draft of information that can be provided to panel 3 to help them prepare for the symposium.

Panel 3 - Elements of an Effective Pipeline Emergency Response

(We need to inform panel 3 about the topics of the first 2 panels: 1- Defining a Climate and Culture of Safety and 2- Safety as a Shared Responsibility)

Participants on Panel 3 will include:

Chief Joanne Hayes-White, San Francisco Fire Department
Tim Butters, Deputy Administrator of the Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration
Jerry Schmitz, Vice-President Gas Engineering, Southwest Gas
Susan Fleming, Director, Physical Infrastructure, GAO

Suggested topics of discussion for panel 3 are:

- What are the elements that make a response to a gas pipeline emergency successful?
- Preparing for gas emergencies: the importance of preparing before a gas pipeline emergency; how planning, establishing professional working relationships, and developing good communications between pipeline operators and emergency responders before an accident can improve the timeliness and effectiveness of responses.
- Training and exercises: the importance of training and joint exercises - and how these activities can improve the effectiveness of responses to events.
- Knowledge of gas systems: the importance of accurate pipeline system maps, including pipe size, normal operating pressure ranges, characteristics such as transmission or distribution lines, and the location of valves that can be used to isolate a failed section.
- Timely responses to reported gas leaks and odors
- Public safety at an incident site- effectively evaluating conditions on scene; assessing potential gas migration paths and measuring gas levels at critical locations; and timely determining evacuation needs.
- Timely isolating gas leaks: importance of having a system capable of quickly identifying a failure location, having adequate valves at appropriate locations to isolate a failed section, and having remote or automatic shut-off valves to improve the timeliness of stopping the flow of gas.
- Public education: educating the public to report gas leaks and odors and on the appropriate actions to take such as when to evacuate a building; educating contractors to immediately report to 911 any damage to a pipeline that results in a release of gas and also to promptly report to a pipeline operator any damage that does not result in an immediate release.

Suggestions welcome. Anything you all would like to add or delete?

Bob

Chief Hayes-White - proposed topics for her discussion include her views on issues such as cooperation needed between gas utilities and fire departments in planning and preparing for gas emergencies; coordination and communication; access to gas system maps; training and exercises; responses to gas leaks and emergencies; the need for gas system shut-off valves and the ability of utilities to isolate leaks timely; and public education.

Subject: Virtual meeting

Hi everyone –
The "core" team of Schmitz, Malashenko and Doll met today with the following action items and assignments:

1. Meeting location: The Milton Marks Auditorium at 455 Golden Gate is set for Tuesday May 7. The CPUC is still working to confirm availability on May 8, but the CPUC auditorium at VanNess is a backup possibility. LIZA will follow up with Aaron
2. Tuesday dinner: Likely location is the Marine's Memorial facility near Union Square. DOLL, HAGAN, MARTINEZ will visit the site Monday at 4:30 and confirm.
3. Hersman and Sullenberger invitations: final edits are being made to letter and it is targeted to go out Monday. LIZA
4. Invitations: hoping to have final venue details next week; will prepare invitation text and set up website for RSVPs.
   Target date for sending invitations is by Tuesday April 2 DOLL, ROSENTHAL
5. Panel 1: Gen Hagan has confirmed Captain Jody Bridges and Astronaut and Colonel (USMC Ret) Ken Cameron for Panel 1; we still need the Alaska Air person (PETER?), and confirmation of Paul Levy (JANE) Potential legislative moderator is being identified by the CPUC (LIZA)
6. Panel 2 will now be the Emergency Response panel, and will consist of Hayes-White, Schmitz, Butters and Weimer. General Hagan is working on moderator (LIZA)
7. Panel 3 (Lead or Regulate) still needs another regulator. Comm Paul Roberti of Rhode Island has been invited; Commissioner Colette Honorable (Arkansas) will be approached if Roberti says no. Paul Clanon has agreed to moderate DOLL
8. Questions/issues for discussions for each panel: still need drafts from Peter and Bob

Some progress this week – just about 6 weeks to go!

Washington, D.C. 20594

Dear Chairman Hersman:

On behalf of the California Public Utilities Commission, I would like to thank you for confirming your intent to speak at our May 7, 2013, symposium "Forging a New Vision of Safety in California." The first in a series of safety symposiums, "Safety in California" will address key issues and explore solutions to public safety concerns in California's public utility sector. We hope that through this event and subsequent working meetings we will be able to better define, create, and sustain a safety-first culture for public utilities in the State of California.

The symposium will allow industry leaders, government representatives, and members of the public to convene, discuss, and make recommendations that will help to create a more purposeful safety-first culture across California. This will be achieved through interactive workshops, panels and presentations, designed to share best practices for public safety. We will help foster understanding of safety expectations and the consequences of failure, and assert that safety, with respect to human life and property, is non-negotiable. Our goal is to collaborate across industry, government, and the public to help dramatically improve the safety of our public utility systems.

As you plan for participation, I suggest we arrange a time to review logistics and ideas for your remarks. In the meantime, please feel free to contact Carol Brown directly at (415) 703-3703 or carol.brown@cpuc.ca.gov. On behalf of the CPUC, thank you very much for playing such an integral role in helping us kick off our first of a series of symposiums.

Sincerely,

Michael R. Peevey
President

If indeed it is Conway, do you have more contact info for him? I only have bob.e.conway@disney.com

We are still trying to nail down the Alaska Air person for that first panel.
Current makeup of the panel is:

- Captain Jody Bridges
- Alaska Air (TBD)
- Robert Conway, Disney, NASA
- Nick Stavropoulos, PG&E (formerly National Grid)

We no longer believe Paul Levy will be available to attend. Nick will do a very good job.

Ken,

As we discussed last night, I am the Director of the Safety and Enforcement Division of the California Public Utilities Commission. I was brought in after the San Bruno pipeline explosion which killed 8 people in 2011. My mission is the change the culture of the PUC and the utility industries we regulate to embrace safety as toll and an enhancement to accomplish our missions.

As part of their culture change, Pacific Gas and Electric and the CPUC are sponsoring the first in a series of Safety Symposiums 7-8 May 2013, "Forging a New Vision of Safety in California". The audience will the 5 commissioners, their key staff, the directors of the PUC, and the presidents, CEO's and the members of the Board of Directors of the 4 major Gas companies in California. The symposium will consist of 3 panels. |The first will at 1300 on the 7th and be about Climate and Culture of Safety, the 2nd the following morning is "lead or regulate" and the 3rd is "Effectively managing a disaster."

I would like to invite you to participate along with Capt. Bridges, a Senior Executive from Alaskan Air, and Mr. Paul Levy former PUC commissioner from Mass and a SME on culture change.

P|G&E will be arranging all your travel and per diem. Please let me know if you are interested and if this works in your schedule.

Semper Fi,
BG H

Robert Figlock, Ph.D. – President, Advanced Survey Design, LLC

Dr. Figlock oversees the operations of Advanced Survey Design, a California-based Service Disable Veteran Owned Small Business (SDVOSB). He is a retired Marine aviator. Dr. Figlock has a Ph.D. in Applied Management and Decision Science and has held the position as assistant Professor at the School of Aviation Safety, Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey, California. He has been administering online organizational climate assessments to government and private business organizations for more than 12 years. As the head of Advanced Survey Design, he is guiding military officials and civilian corporate leaders in the assessment of their organizational climates, as well as helping to develop strategies for organizational improvement.

Corporate Overview

Advanced Survey Design (ASD) provides a comprehensive survey assessment process to assist clients in better understanding their organizational climate and improving their operational effectiveness. While specializing in web-based survey administration and feedback, ASD offers a variety of products and services:

- Customized survey development
- Tailored interactive survey website design
- Web-based, off-line computer based, or pencil/paper questionnaire administration
- Real-time data display
- In-depth data analysis and personalized feedback/reports
- Intervention strategy development
- Survey website hosting
- Customized training packages, presentations, seminars, and workshops
- On-line maintenance error information management system

ASD believes that three features are essential for survey success and encourages their use:

- ✓ Preserving survey response anonymity
- ✓ Safeguarding organizational confidentiality
- ✓ Restricting access to survey results

ASD currently focuses on operational and maintenance safety climate assessments using a survey process well-grounded in organizational theory and risk management concepts applied to high reliability organizations. This focus is readily tailored to other domains employing the same theoretical and conceptual foundations.

ASD maintains an on-line Maintenance Error Information Management System (MEIMS) capable of inputting, tracking, analyzing, and reporting maintenance incidents. MEIMS uses the Human Factors Analysis Classification System (HFACS) for its framework. This system is also adaptable to other domains.

ASD's mission is to assist clients in better understanding their organizational climate so they can achieve success through quality problem solving using current, accurate, and useful information.

ASD's vision is to deliver reliable, relevant, and responsive data to a growing number of businesses that embrace data-driven process improvement.

ASD maintains a strong corporate "conscience" and thus, an unwavering code of ethics when dealing with potential customers, clients, and competitors. Our code revolves around four basic principles:

- integrity
- trust
- confidence
- protected communication

Description of Process

ASD specializes in web-based survey assessments that measure the organizational climate of its clients. However, methods for completing surveys other than on-line are also available, to include: off-line, computer-based or pencil/paper questionnaire options.

During contract negotiations with the client, ASD will establish:

- Survey administration policies, rules, and procedures
- Timelines
- Deliverables

Other pertinent survey issues also requiring complete definition include:

- Survey response anonymity
- Organizational confidentiality
- Restricted viewing access
- Data analysis and research limitations

Following contract negotiation, a comprehensive organizational assessment and improvement system is implemented which may include any or all of the following (refer to Exhibit 1):

1. Customized survey development
2. Tailored survey website design (and hosting, if desired)
3. Survey construction (onto a survey website)
4. Survey administration (policies, rules, procedures, implementation/administration)
5. Location-specific post-survey debriefing with real-time data display
6. In-depth data analysis
7. Personalized feedback/reports
8. Intervention strategy development
9. Specialized training
10. Recurring, periodic survey implementation (Repeat 4-8, as necessary)

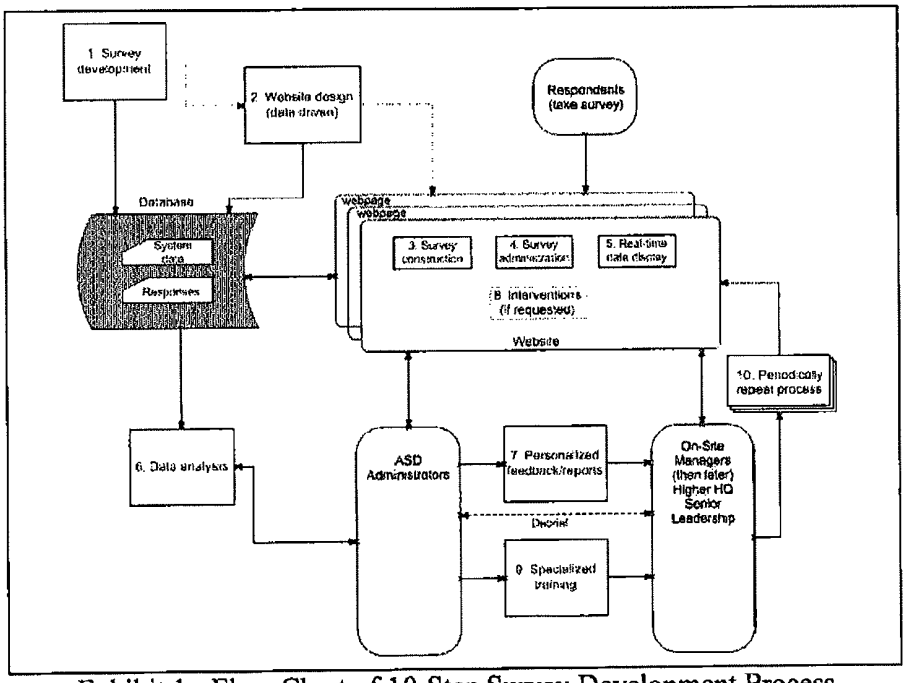

Exhibit 1: Flow Chart of 10-Step Survey Development Process

A brief synopsis of each element in the system follows:

1. Customized survey development – The foundation of the process is to design a survey that measures what the client wants evaluated. This is accomplished by meeting with the client and mutually defining exactly what information is being sought. Next, ASD interviews the client's subject matter experts to develop a "preliminary set" of potential survey items. In addition, ASD will conduct a thorough literature review for pertinent information and similar surveys with comparable topics to expand upon the "preliminary set" of survey items. ASD then reviews this expanded set of survey items with the client and develops a "test set" of survey items. ASD completes the development process by conducting a beta test of the product from which a "final set" of survey items is recommended.

2. Tailored website design (and hosting, if desired) – Concurrent with survey development, ASD creates a website tailored to the client's needs. If the client desires, ASD will host this website.

3. Survey construction (onto a survey website) – Upon completion of the first two steps, ASD incorporates the "final set" of survey items onto the survey website.

4. Survey administration (policies, rules, procedures, implementation/administration) – If desired, ASD can administer the survey process for the client. Survey administration policies, rules, and procedures established during client negotiation will be implemented. Policy regarding survey administration will be published on the survey website. The key issues to be resolved include who will have access to the data and to what degree are a group's results visible outside that group.

5. Location-specific post-survey debriefing with real-time data display – Upon achieving specified thresholds of survey responses, aggregate data becomes available for display. A "dashboard" display of this data can be made available using restricted access codes provided to select individuals as agreed upon during client negotiations. On-line data is updated in real-time.

6. In-depth data analysis – In-depth analysis of client data (in addition to that provided by the survey software) can be conducted by ASD. The level of analytical support is determined during client contract negotiations.

7. Personalized feedback/reports – Two levels of feedback/reports are available. First level, feedback/reports are generated by the survey software and available to select individuals (as discussed in step 5). Second level, specialized feedback/reports can be produced in addition to the on-line reports. These feedback/reports are determined during client contract negotiations.

8. Intervention strategy development – ASD examines the survey data for links between the data and potential risks. ASD has software modules that can be populated with intervention strategies generated by the client and/or ASD. The level of intervention strategy development is determined during client contract negotiations.

9. Specialized training packages – ASD provides presentations, seminars, workshops, and other training packages that focus on specific survey areas. These packages can be tailored to suit client needs. Training packages cover a variety of subject areas (e.g., risk management, crew resource management, incident investigation, organizational communication, etc.) and can be presented in several different formats (e.g., DVDs, PowerPoint presentations, on-line training, program texts, etc.). ASD has the capability to expand its training menu based upon client needs.

10. Recurring, periodic survey implementation – The strength of the ASD program is the ability to easily replicate the process periodically to measure change over time. Steps 4-8 of the survey process cycle would be repeated, as desired by the client.

If the survey process is conducted on-line, then the complete assessment system is recommended. Steps 6-10 are optional, left to the customer's discretion regarding the level of detail desired. The complete assessment and improvement system provides customers the maximum advantage of the survey data collected.

If the survey process is conducted off-line using a stand-alone computer, then the survey process is modified. Tailored website design, is then designed for CD use, and Survey construction and survey administration, are completed using the CD.

If the survey process is conducted using a pencil/paper questionnaire, then Steps 2-5 of the process are adapted to a spreadsheet format. Later, data can be either entered into an electronic debriefing product or the data can be hand-calculated and debriefed. The last method of employment is more time consuming and costly, not taking advantage of electronic tools available to handle mass data collection, analysis, and feedback/display.

Background of the Survey Process

The framework for the survey process is based upon the Human Factors Analysis Classification System (HFACS) taxonomy, a derivative of James Reason's "Swiss Cheese" model of mishap causation (1990). The HFACS model (Weigmann & Shappell, 1996) – a model now recognized throughout the Department of Defense (DoD) and becoming accepted in general industry – fleshed out Reason's human error model by providing and defining subordinate categories to each of the model's four main tiers:

- Acts
- Preconditions
- Supervision
- Organizational influences

Factor analyses of safety climate survey data have been conducted. These analyses point to survey item categorization that aligns with the HFACS model.

Value

Value associated with the use of organizational climate assessment surveys includes:

- Measures current organizational climate (proactive tool)
- Highlights areas at increased risk of failure
- Offers a reliable process for repeated measurement
- Presents leadership with a "big picture" of how things are actually done

Corporate Leadership

Three individuals comprise the core of ASD and are each a corporate officer within the LLC. Each is committed to ASD's success and brings a wealth of unique talents to the organization:

- Robert Figlock – President. His talents/experiences include:
  - -- Ph.D. in Applied Management and Decision Science
  - -- MS in Systems Management
  - -- BS in Education (mathematics major)
  - -- Retired Naval aviator with 25+ years rotary/fixed wing aviation experience
  - -- Teaching experience (more than 15+ years)
  - -- Crew Resource Management (CRM) instructor
  - -- Operational Risk Management (ORM) instructor
  - -- Administrator of on-line survey processes (10+ years)
  - -- Program management experience (20+ years)
  - -- Training plan/course development and presentation/instruction

- Michael Schimpf – Vice President of Operations. His talents/experiences include:
  - -- MS in Electrical Engineering (Naval Postgraduate School)
  - -- BS in Aerospace Engineering (MIT)
  - -- Naval aviator with 10+ years aviation experience
  - -- Naval jet flight instructor/fighter pilot
  - -- Analytical expertise
  - -- Information Technology expertise
  - -- Administrator of on-line survey processes (5+ years)

- Rorick Sellers – Director of Engineering. His talents/experiences include:
  - -- BA in Physics
  - -- Private contractor/software engineer (25+ years)
  - -- Copyright holder of several on-line survey software programs
  - -- On-line survey process designer/software engineer (5+ years)
  - -- Information Technology expertise

CAREER SYNOPSIS

As President of Advanced Survey Design (ASD), LLC, I oversee the business practices and operations of a continuously growing service-disabled veteran-owned, small business (SDVOSB). ASD provides organizational insight through data driven products, services, and cultural assessment tools. ASD's web-based surveys are used by the Department of Defense (DoD) in their efforts to shape organizational culture and improve operational effectiveness. Now, as the leader of ASD, I am guiding government and corporate leaders in the assessment of organizational hazards and implementation of intervention strategies.

Prior to ASD, I was a faculty member of the School of Aviation Safety for 14 years and a research associate at the Meyer Institute of Systems Engineering, Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey, California. With a proven academic track record, I am a frequent speaker at military safety forums, safety conferences, and academic institutions. I am a retired Marine aviator with more than 2,500 civil/military rotary and fixed wing flight hours and 30 years safety/mishap investigation experience. I hold a Bachelor of Science degree in education (mathematics), Master of Science degree in systems management, and a Doctor of Philosophy degree in applied management and decision science.

While at the Naval Postgraduate School I taught students in the Aviation Safety Officer (ASO) and Aviation Safety Command (ASC) courses. The ASO course prepares graduates to organize and administer a mishap prevention program at the organizational level. The ASC course is an executive-level safety course tailored for prospective and current Commanding Officers. My accomplishments include: (1) development of an operational risk management (ORM) instructor course, (2) construction of an organizational Culture Workshop curriculum, and (3) creation of a web-based survey instrument to assess organizational safety climate. During this period, I also conducted safety-related research for National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), Secretary of the Navy (SECNAV) Safety and Survivability Branch, Marine Corps Safety Division, Army Combat Readiness Center; and Commander Naval Air Forces (CNAF).

PRESENTATIONS

A chronological list of symposiums, conferences, seminars, and workshops where I presented:

Aviation Psychology Workshop. (September, 2012). Presented to students of the Weapons & Tactics Instructors (WTI) course, Marine Aviation Weapons and Tactics Squadron One (MAWTS-1). MCAS Yuma, Arizona.

Human Factors Presentation. (July, 2012). Presented at the Threat Risk Management (TRM) course, Enhanced Mojave Viper (EMV) exercise 7-12. Marine Aviation Weapons and Tactics Squadron One (MAWTS-1). MCB Twenty Nine Palms, California.

Status of 4th MAW Command Safety Assessment Survey Program. (June, 2012). CNAP Safety Department (N45). San Diego, California.

Status of NASA Command Safety Culture Assessment Program. (April, 2012). NASA Headquarters. Washington, DC.

Aviation Psychology Workshop. (March, 2011). Presented to students of the Weapons & Tactics Instructors (WTI) course, Marine Aviation Weapons and Tactics Squadron One (MAWTS-1). MCAS Yuma, Arizona.

Status of Naval Aviation Command Safety Assessment Survey Program. (February, 2012). CNAP Safety Department (N45). San Diego, California.

Human Factors Presentation. (January, 2012). Presented at the Threat Risk Management (TRM) course, Enhanced Mojave Viper (EMV) exercise 2-12. Marine Aviation Weapons and Tactics Squadron One (MAWTS-1). MCB Twenty Nine Palms, California.

Status of Naval Aviation Command Safety Assessment Survey Program. (December, 2011). CNAP Safety Department (N45). San Diego, California.

Status of Naval Aviation Command Safety Assessment Survey Program. (October, 2011). CNAL Safety Department & Naval Safety Center. Norfolk, Virginia.

Aviation Psychology Workshop. (September, 2011). Presented to students of the Weapons & Tactics Instructors (WTI) course, Marine Aviation Weapons and Tactics Squadron One (MAWTS-1). MCAS Yuma, Arizona.

Headquarters Marine Corps Safety Management Operational Planning Team Conference. (August, 2011). Participated in the two-day conference looking forward to the future of the Marine safety program sponsored by CMC (SD). 2nd MAW Headquarters, Cherry Point, North Carolina.

Headquarters Marine Corps Safety Managers Conference. (August, 2011). Conference of all major commands' safety managers sponsored by CMC (SD). Presented the "Ground Climate Safety Climate Assessment Survey (GCASS)." Orlando, Florida.

CPUC03226

Human Factors Presentation. (May, 2011). Presented at the Threat Risk Management (TRM) course, Enhanced Mojave Viper (EMV) exercise 6-11. Marine Aviation Weapons and Tactics Squadron One (MAWTS-1). MCB Twenty Nine Palms, California.

4th Marine Aircraft Wing Safety Conference. (May, 2011). Conference conducted with 4th MAW Safety Departments. Presented the "Ground Climate Safety Climate Assessment Survey (GCASS)" San Diego, California.

Aviation Psychology Workshop. (March, 2011). Presented to students of the Weapons & Tactics Instructors (WTI) course, Marine Aviation Weapons and Tactics Squadron One (MAWTS-1). MCAS Yuma, Arizona.

Human Factors Presentation. (February, 2011). Presented at the Threat Risk Management (TRM) course, Enhanced Mojave Viper (EMV) exercise 4-11. Marine Aviation Weapons and Tactics Squadron One (MAWTS-1). MCB Twenty Nine Palms, California.

Human Factors Presentation. (January, 2011). Presented at the Threat Risk Management (TRM) course, Enhanced Mojave Viper (EMV) exercise 3-11. Marine Aviation Weapons and Tactics Squadron One (MAWTS-1). MCB Twenty Nine Palms, California.

CMRS Status Brief. (December, 2010). Reviewed status of CMRS program with Mr. Joseph Angello, DSOC Executive Director. Pentagon, Washington, DC.

Human Factors Presentation. (November, 2010). Presented at the Threat Risk Management (TRM) course, Enhanced Mojave Viper (EMV) exercise 2-11. Marine Aviation Weapons and Tactics Squadron One (MAWTS-1). MCB Twenty Nine Palms, California.

CMRS Program Manager Conference. (September, 2010). Reviewed status of CMRS program. Naval Safety Center, Norfolk, Virginia.

USAF Safety Center Safety Culture Survey Program Workshop. (August, 2009). One-day workshop for USAF Safety Center personnel. Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Aviation Psychology Workshop. (September, 2010). Presented to students of the Weapons & Tactics Instructors (WTI) course, Marine Aviation Weapons and Tactics Squadron One (MAWTS-1). MCAS Yuma, Arizona.

CMRS Program Manager Conference. (July, 2010). Reviewed status of CMRS program. CNAF Safety Division, Coronado, California.

CMRS Program Manager Conference. (June, 2010). Reviewed status of CMRS program. CNAF Safety Division, Coronado, California.

Human Factors Presentation. (May, 2010). Presented at the Threat Risk Management (TRM) course, Enhanced Mojave Viper (EMV) exercise 3-10. Marine Aviation Weapons and Tactics Squadron One (MAWTS-1). MCB Twenty Nine Palms, California.

CMRS Program Manager Conference. (April, 2010). Reviewed status of CMRS program. AFSC. Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Aviation Psychology Workshop. (April, 2010). Presented to students of the Weapons & Tactics Instructors (WTI) course, Marine Aviation Weapons and Tactics Squadron One (MAWTS-1). MCAS Yuma, Arizona.

CMRS Program Manager Conference. (March, 2010). Reviewed status of CMRS program. USAF SAF/HQ Conference Facility, Crystal City, Virginia.

Human Factors Presentation. (February, 2010). Presented at the Threat Risk Management (TRM) course, Enhanced Mojave Viper (EMV) exercise 2-10. Marine Aviation Weapons and Tactics Squadron One (MAWTS-1). MCB Twenty Nine Palms, California.

AFSPC Safety Presentation. (February, 2010). Air Force Space Command Headquarters. Colorado Springs, Colorado.

CMRS Program Manager Conference. (February, 2010). Reviewed status of CMRS program. AFSC. Albuquerque, New Mexico.

CSSI Conference. (February, 2010). CSSI representatives visited ASD to establish a professional services agreement between the two organizations. Presented ASD's on-line survey capabilities. ASD, Monterey, California.

Marine CASS & Command Safety Assessment Surveys Presentation. (February, 2010). MARFORPAC Ground Safety Managers Symposium., Honolulu, Hawaii.

Human Factors Presentation. (January, 2010). Presented at the Threat Risk Management (TRM) course, Enhanced Mojave Viper (EMV) exercise 1-10. Marine Aviation Weapons and Tactics Squadron One (MAWTS-1). MCB Twenty Nine Palms, California.

Northrop Grumman Safety Climate Workshop. (December, 2009). Northrop Headquarters. Los Angeles, California.

Culture Workshop Seminar. (November, 2009). Command Safety Assessment Program Update. Presented to Navy and Marine Corps Culture workshop facilitators. JRB, Fort Worth, Texas.

NASA Safety Culture Workshop. (October, 2009). NASA Ames. Palo Alto, California.

Aviation Psychology Workshop. (September, 2009). Presented to students of the Weapons & Tactics Instructors (WTI) course, Marine Aviation Weapons and Tactics Squadron One (MAWTS-1). MCAS Yuma, Arizona.

Raytheon Survey Presentation. (August, 2009). Raytheon Headquarters. Tucson, Arizona.

AFSC AFCAST Survey Results Presentation II. (August, 2009). AFSC. Albuquerque, New Mexico.

US Army Risk Assessment Program (ARAP) Workshop. (June, 2009). Worked with the senior staff of the US Army Combat Readiness Center. Monterey California.

AFSC AFCAST Survey Results Presentation. (June, 2009). AFSC. Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Marine CASS & Command Safety Assessment Surveys Presentation. (April, 2009). COMMARFORCOM Ground Safety Managers Symposium., Virginia Beach, Virginia.

USAF Safety Center Safety Culture Survey Program Workshop. (April, 2009). One-day workshop for USAF Safety Center personnel. Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Command Safety Assessment Surveys. (March, 2009). Presented to students of the Weapons & Tactics Instructors (WTI) course, Marine Aviation Weapons and Tactics Squadron One (MAWTS-1). MCAS Yuma, Arizona.

AFSC AFCAST Survey Results Presentation. (February, 2009). AFSC. Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Marine CASS & Command Safety Assessment Surveys Presentation. (February, 2009). MARFORPAC Ground Safety Managers Symposium., Honolulu, Hawaii.

Culture Workshop Seminar. (November, 2008). Command Safety Assessment Program Update. Presented to Navy and Marine Corps Culture workshop facilitators. JRB, Fort Worth, Texas.

Marine CASS & Command Safety Assessment Surveys Presentation. (November, 2008). NASA Headquarters. Washington, DC.

Marine CASS & Command Safety Assessment Surveys Update. (November, 2008). Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Navy (Safety). Washington, DC.

Laura – thanks for the update. No hurry on getting this info to me.

Did Paul tell you that he'd like for you to go ahead and send the invite to Sullenberger? He said he was going to mention it to you over coffee today, I want to make sure he didn't forget. Attached here is the letter that we had... should give you a head start, you'd just need to change a few things.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA
EDMUND G. BROWN JR., Governor

PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION
505 VAN NESS AVENUE
SAN FRANCISCO, CA 94102-3298

March 25, 2013

Dear Captain Chesley Sullenberger:

On behalf of the California Public Utilities Commission, I would like to thank you for confirming your intent to speak at our May 7-8, 2013, symposium "Forging a New Vision of Safety in California." The first in a series of safety symposiums, "Safety in California" will address key issues and explore solutions to public safety concerns in California's public utility sector. We hope that through this event and subsequent working meetings we will be able to better define, create, and sustain a safety-first culture for public utilities in the State of California.

The symposium will allow industry leaders, government representatives, and members of the public to convene, discuss, and make recommendations that will help to create a more purposeful safety-first culture across California. This will be achieved through interactive workshops, panels, and presentations, designed to share best practices for public safety. We will help foster understanding of safety expectations and the consequences of failure, and assert that safety, with respect to human life and property, is non-negotiable. Our goal is to collaborate across industry, government, and the public to help dramatically improve the safety of our public utility systems.

As you plan for participation, we will arrange a time to review logistics and ideas for your remarks. In the meantime, please feel free to contact me directly at (415) 703-3808 or paul.clanon@cpuc.ca.gov. On behalf of the CPUC, thank you very much for playing such an integral role in helping us kick off our first of a series of symposiums.

Sincerely,

Paul Clanon
Executive Director

Subject: Draft invitation letter and agenda for your review
Attachments: Draft invitation letter from Hagan.docx

Good evening!

Here for your reading pleasure are two documents:

1. Draft invitation letter from Gen Hagan to potential participants. I pulled some language from a draft letter that I believe Kim and/or Liza had worked on. No pride of authorship of course! This needs to be your message, and I just want you to have something to work from. I am not a graphic artist and don't think we need any delays to find one, but the letter should at least be on CPUC letterhead.
2. Draft agenda, as of this hour. Note that we still need moderators for the first and the second panels. Gen Hagan, has Elizabeth confirmed for the emergency response one? What about Frank Lindh for the first one?

   Note that I have tried to convey the two meeting locations. Now that I have done that I'm not as concerned as I was previously about moving around. But if you are able to strong arm somebody out of the Milton Marks Auditorium before Monday, that's good too.

OUR MISSION: to get the invitations out by COB Monday! And if we have to update speakers after that we can do so.

Thanks to both of you.

DRAFT Symposium Invitation letter from Gen Hagan – agenda and logistics sheet would be attached (put on CPUC letterhead)

On behalf of the California Public Utilities Commission, I invite you to attend the first in a series of safety symposiums we are sponsoring to explore solutions to public safety concerns in California's public utility sector. This symposium, "Forging a New Vision of Safety in California," will be held May 7 & 8 in downtown San Francisco. It will focus on natural gas safety issues. Sessions on the first day will be held at the Milton Marks Auditorium in the Johnson State Office Building at 455 Golden Gate Ave. The second day we will move to the California Public Utilities Commission auditorium at 505 Van Ness Ave., just a block away from the Johnson Building.

This symposium will allow representatives of industry, government and the public to convene and discuss ways to help create a more purposeful safety-first culture across California. A keynote the first day by Deborah Hersman, Chair of the National Transportation Safety Board, will help set the context, followed by panels on safety culture, the regulatory role in leading safety change, and effective emergency response.

There is no charge to attend the conference, but reservations are requested so we can ensure space availability. An optional dinner Tuesday evening at the Marines' Memorial Club requires an RSVP by May 1. Additional details are provided in the attached brochure.

As Director of the Safety & Enforcement Division of the CPUC, I believe our mission is to foster understanding of safety expectations and the consequences of failure, and to assert that safety, with respect to human life and property, is non-negotiable. This symposium is an opportunity to establish collaborative relationships to improve the safety of our public utility systems. I hope you will join me in this important dialog.

Sincerely,

Emory Hagan

Aaron
I spoke with the General last night about our need to change the CEO dinner. He said he'd be ok with having it before the symposium.
Can you let me know if April 17 or 30 work for him?

Thanks!
Laura

Hello everyone, thanks for the update call today, and the great progress. Attached are the detailed agenda, the lists (with email addresses...) for your info.

The last items to wrap up early next week:
1. invitation letter approved by General Hagen, to be entered into the electronic web portal/invitation that will go to all invitees (Liza, then Laura)
2. confirmation of 2 panel moderators: Senator Mark Leno and Press Secretary Elizabeth Ashford (Liza)
3. confirmation of Alaska Airlines speaker (Peter)
4. additional logistics (dinner, speaker travel/lodging, other logistics) (Laura)

Panel coordinators will receive final comments on suggested questions by early in the week, then coordinators should begin to coordinate their speakers.

Next check-in call, next Friday,

Thanks and have a great weekend!

Attached are just a few small edits to the "final" version of the letter that General Hagan sent to me on Friday. We need to get this letter on CPUC letterhead and I am hoping that Liza can make that happen asap tomorrow morning so we can push send by noon.
Or at least that's my dream . . .

Terrie,
I assume that you will publish some kind of low-key notice about this at some point because we may have more than 2 Commissioners there?

I'm also attaching the current version of the agenda too.

DRAFT Symposium Invitation letter from Gen Hagan – agenda and logistics sheet would be attached (put on CPUC letterhead)

On behalf of the California Public Utilities Commission, I invite you to attend the first in a series of safety symposiums to explore solutions to safety within California's public utility sector. This symposium, "Forging a New Vision of Safety in California," will be held May 7 & 8 in downtown San Francisco. This symposium will focus on natural gas safety issues. Sessions on the first day will be held at the Milton Marks Auditorium in the Johnson State Office Building at 455 Golden Gate Avenue. The second day we will move to the California Public Utilities Commission auditorium at 505 Van Ness Avenue., just a block away from the Johnson Building.

This symposium will allow representatives of the natural gas industry, government, and the public to convene and discuss ways to help create a climate and culture, which embraces safety as an underlying and timeless principle in everything we do. The keynote speaker on the first day is Deborah Hersman, Chair of the National Transportation Safety Board. Panels will follow her on the climate and culture of safety, the regulator's role in leading safety change, and effective emergency response.

There is no charge to attend the conference, but reservations are requested so we can ensure space availability. An optional dinner Tuesday evening at the Marines' Memorial Club requires an RSVP by May 1. Additional details are provided in the attached electronic brochure.

As Director of the Safety & Enforcement Division of the CPUC, I believe our (industry and regulator) mission is to create a climate and culture that embraces safety as a tool and an enhancement to accomplish our organization's mission. This culture uses risk assessment and risk management as the foundation of assessing safety and the consequences of failure, and to assert that safety, with respect to human life and property, is non-negotiable. This symposium is an opportunity to establish collaborative relationships to develop "win-win" solutions to the safety challenges we face in these dynamic times. I hope you will join me in this important dialog.

Sincerely,

Emory J. Hagan, III

Hi,

I have made a few changes to the invitation letter and the agenda. Most importantly, we were able to get the Milton Marks auditorium for 6/8! Also, I understood that the series of symposiums would be on all industries we regulate, not just utilities. I therefore changed that part of the letter as well.

Once we get this on the official CPUC letterhead we should be ready to go!

Thanks,

Liza

PS: On the agenda, should we say "sponsored" by the CPUC or "hosted"?

You are both total workaholics!! And I am grateful for that today.

1. Yes, there will be questions after every panel, time permitting. I kind of like the idea of people writing questions on cards; that is something we can nail down, frantically, a couple days before the session!
2. Next big thing: emailing the invitations. We have a list of people on excel spread sheets. Since this is a CPUC event, the email should go from the CPUC. Do you have someone who can make that happen tomorrow? I will send you yet another version of the invitation letter, this time including the registration website which one of our young and very able staff people has set up so that you and we can track registrants. I'll forward the draft to you this afternoon; we have all tried it and it works!
3. Coffee/water at Milton Marks: Liza, is there any way that the CPUC could pay for that both days? It will be a huge pain if we arrange for it and then have to try to keep track of any CPUC staffer who shows up and bill them later for coffee.
4. Yes, I'll put R in Peevey!! And is the Milton Marks address correct?

Laura - are we planning to have a question/comment session with the audience at the end of every panel? Maybe with people submitting questions in advance or something?

Terrie - how do you want to finalize this? I can accept all changes and send you the final language to put in the template or you can send me the template and I can paste everything in there.

I believe that the best way to describe "win win" in this context is that CPUC and utilities would proactively identify safety issues that need to be solved and figure out the best approaches that maximize safety and minimize ratepayer impacts. A more specific example is settlements, but that's probably not something we need to be mentioning here.

A few comments:

1) The letter says: "... and the public to convene and discuss ways..."
But there is not a public comment session, is there? If not, perhaps it should say that regulators, utilities, and industry experts will convene in a public setting to....

2) Can whomever is finalizing put Peevey's middle initial into his name (R.).

3) Do you guys know what is being referred to by "win win"?

Thanks!

DRAFT Symposium Invitation letter from Gen Hagan – agenda and logistics sheet would be attached (put on CPUC letterhead)

On behalf of the California Public Utilities Commission (CPUC), I invite you to attend the first in a series of safety symposiums to explore solutions to safety within Californiaa's utility services and infrastructure sectors ~~'s public utility sector~~. This symposium, "Forging a New Vision of Safety in California," will be held May 7 & 8 in downtown San Francisco and~~.~~ ~~This symposium will~~ focus on natural gas safety issues. Sessions ~~on the first day~~ will be held at the Milton Marks Auditorium in the Johnson State Office Building at 455 Golden Gate Avenue~~. The second day we will move to the California Public Utilities Commission auditorium at 505 Van Ness Avenue., just a block away from the Johnson Building.~~

This symposium will allow representatives of the natural gas industry, government, and the public to convene and discuss ways to help create a climate and culture~~, which~~ that embraces safety as an underlying and timeless principle in everything we do. The keynote speaker on the first day is Deborah Hersman, Chair of the National Transportation Safety Board. Panels will follow ~~her~~ Chairman Hersman's introduction ~~on~~ to explore the climate and culture of safety, the regulator's role in leading safety change, and effective emergency response.

There is no charge to attend the conference, but reservations are requested so we can ensure space availability. Just click on this symposium registration website and enter your information: http://events.signup4.com/cpucsafetysymposium.

Formatted: Font: 12 pt

Note that aAn optional dinner Tuesday evening at the Marines' Memorial Club requires an RSVP by May 1. ~~Additional details are provided in the attached brochure.~~

As Director of the Safety & Enforcement Division of the CPUC, I believe our (industry and regulator) mission is to create a climate and culture that embraces safety as a tool and an enhancement to accomplish our organization's mission. This culture uses risk assessment and risk management as the foundation of assessing safety and the consequences of failure, and to assert that safety, with respect to human life and property, is non-negotiable. This symposium is an opportunity to establish collaborative relationships to develop "win-win" solutions to the safety challenges we face in these dynamic times. I hope you will join me in this important dialog.

Sincerely,

Emory J. Hagan, III

I think win-win sounds great when you explain it Lisa, but in the context of the letter it leaves open to question as to who's winning - it could be interpreted as a win for the CPUC and the utilities, rather than a win for the CPUC and ratepayers. If you think I'm being paranoid you can disregard. But I think it could easily be fixed by just deleting ""win-win"" in the sentence below:
This symposium is an opportunity to establish collaborative relationships to develop "win-win" solutions to the safety challenges we face in these dynamic times. I hope you will join me in this important dialog.

Your call.

As I said in an email I just sent, I will get the agenda to both of you tomorrow as soon as I can looking pretty. I assume Liza can take care of putting the invitation on our letterhead.

Do we also want to post these documents on our website?

Thanks!

Laura - are we planning to have a question/comment session with the audience at the end of every panel? Maybe with people submitting questions in advance or something?

Terrie - how do you want to finalize this? I can accept all changes and send you the final language to put in the template or you can send me the template and I can paste everything in there.

I believe that the best way to describe "win win" in this context is that CPUC and utilities would proactively identify safety issues that need to be solved and figure out the best approaches that maximize safety and minimize ratepayer impacts. A more specific example is settlements, but that's probably not something we need to be mentioning here.

Thanks, Laura - of course I'm checking email. :)

A few comments:

1) The letter says: "... and the public to convene and discuss ways..."
But there is not a public comment session, is there? If not, perhaps it should say that regulators, utilities, and industry experts will convene in a public setting to....

2) Can whomever is finalizing put Peevey's middle initial into his name (R.).

3) Do you guys know what is being referred to by "win win"?

Thanks!

Terrie

Liza and Terrie

Hope you both are enjoying a day away from the office and perhaps NOT checking emails every 5 minutes. (Although I'm guessing Terrie is!)

Attached are just a few small edits to the "final" version of the letter that General Hagan sent to me on Friday. We need to get this letter on CPUC letterhead and I am hoping that Liza can make that happen asap tomorrow morning so we can push send by noon.
Or at least that's my dream . . .

Terrie,
I assume that you will publish some kind of low-key notice about this at some point because we may have more than 2 Commissioners there?

I'm also attaching the current version of the agenda too.

On behalf of the California Public Utilities Commission (CPUC), I invite you to attend the first in a series of safety symposiums to explore solutions to safety within California's utility services and infrastructure sectors . This symposium, "Forging a New Vision of Safety in California," will be held May 7 & 8 in downtown San Francisco and focus on natural gas safety issues. Sessions will be held at the Milton Marks Auditorium in the Johnson State Office Building at 455 Golden Gate Avenue

This symposium will allow representatives of the natural gas industry, government, and the public to convene and discuss ways to help create a climate and culture that embraces safety as an underlying and timeless principle in everything we do. The keynote speaker on the first day is Deborah Hersman, Chair of the National Transportation Safety Board. Panels will follow Chairman Hersman's introduction to explore the climate and culture of safety, the regulator's role in leading safety change, and effective emergency response.

There is no charge to attend the conference, but reservations are requested so we can ensure space availability. Just click on this symposium registration website and enter your information: http://events.signup4.com/cpucsafetysymposium.

Note that an optional dinner Tuesday evening at the Marines' Memorial Club requires an RSVP by May 1.

As Director of the Safety & Enforcement Division of the CPUC, I believe our (industry and regulator) mission is to create a climate and culture that embraces safety as a tool and an enhancement to accomplish our organization's mission. This culture uses risk assessment and risk management as the foundation of assessing safety and the consequences of failure, and to assert that safety, with respect to human life and property, is non-negotiable. This symposium is an opportunity to establish collaborative relationships to develop "win-win" solutions to the safety challenges we face in these dynamic times. I hope you will join me in this important dialog.

Sincerely,

Emory J. Hagan, III
Brigadier General (CA)
Director, Safety and Enforcement Division
California Public Utilities Commission
